Ford Swings Quickly Into His New Duties

Commutes To Capitol For Cabinet Meeting

The new President was moving fast to place his personal stamp on the shape of the government. He ordered a meeting of the National Security Council, the group that handles defense and intelligence matters, to follow immediately his one-hour session with the Cabinet members.

Ford has chosen to retain, at least for the present, the department heads who made up former President Nixon's Cabinet. Sitting in Nixon's old chair and flanked by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, he opened the Cabinet meeting at 10 a.m. EDT.

One of Ford's key objectives was to lay down the guidelines for the transition from Nixon's administration to his own.

He asked members of the team he has assembled to handle that transition —including former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton and the U.S. Ambassador to NATO, Donald Rumsfeld —to join the Cabinet meeting.

Both before and after the cabinet meeting, Kissinger met with envoys representing 33 countries and assured them that there would be no major foreign policy changes in the Ford administration. He saw the ambassadors from Pakistan, Iran, India and 30 African nations.

A White House spokesman made clear Ford would not work all day today. He said the President would return to his northern Virginia home, where he still lives, for a luncheon and would probably remain in the suburbs throughout the weekend.

In an open and informal style quite different from that which marked Nixon's tenure, Ford had about five couples, all old friends, over for dinner at his house last night.

The President was up early today. He fixed his own breakfast, stuck his head out the door to get the morning paper — only to find that it had not arrived —and took a swim. Then he climbed into a limosine and left for the White House.

Even though his presidency had barely begun, Ford seemed to be settling in comfortably to the job. By mid-afternoon yesterday he seemed at home sitting in Richard Nixon's gold armchair in the Oval Office.

In the six hours he was at the White House after his inauguration yesterday, Ford met with the ambassadors of 57 nations, conferred with his economic advisers, held his first news briefing, selected a panel to advise him on taking power, and sent a message to the Greek government urging restraint and moderation in dealing with the Cyprus crisis.

Ford's early-morning activities today at his suburban home graphically illustrated his unpretentious style.

He awakened at 5:50 a.m. and, clad in baby-blue short pajamas, opened the front door to pick up the Washington Post. The paper had not yet arrived,

Congress Asked For VP Choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford today called on Republican and Democratic leaders to suggest vice presidential nominees by Wednesday.

Ford's press secretary, Jerry TerHorst, said Ford planned to name a vice president in the next week or 10 days. TerHorst told newsmen that Ford had asked Senate Repubican leader Hugh Scott, House GOP leader John J. Rhodes and Republican National Committeee Chairman George Bush as well as the party governors for suggestions for "men they think of as potential vice presidential nominess by next wednesday."

TerHorst said that Ford also intends to seek the advice of House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield.

Conservatives and moderates in the GOP are each manuevering to have one of their own named vice president. One congressman said he doubts any of the GOP "elder statesmen" will get the nod.

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., predicted yesterday that Ford would not name the party's most prominent spokesmen. He specifically said that Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and California Gov. Ronald Reagan all appeared unlikely choices.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott and others want a more liberal vice president such as Rockefeller to balance the Ford administration.

Twenty conservative Republicans met privately yesterday and "overwhelmingly" agreed to support Goldwater, the party's presidential nominee in 1964. Both groups have given Ford lists of alternative candidates.

"There are a lot of attractive people on our side that Ford should consider," said one conservative senator who did not wish to be identified.

"We don't want to have the 1972 mandate reversed by Ford's appointment at this stage of the game," he added, saying a liberal Republican would go against the vote given the Nixon-Agnew ticket in the last election.

Rockefeller was vacationing at the family's retreat in Seal Harbor, Maine. He made no comment and canceled a news conference lest his reaction be misunderstood. A spokesman said Ford has not contacted Rockefeller, who reportedly would accept the post if it is offered by the President.

The two groups were not unanimous in their feelings. Sen. William Brock, a conservative, said he could support Rockefeller if that is Ford's choice.

Brock, his fellow Tennessean Howard Baker, and Sen. Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky appear on both the lists drawn up by Scott and the conservative wing.

One name mentioned frequently was former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, but a congressional source friendly with Laird said the former congressman was resisting an active role in the new administration.

Others on Scott's list were Sens. Peter Dominick of Colorado and Jacob Javits of New York, Ambassador William Mailliard, (former congressman

Governor's Pay Hiked By Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Acknowledging it would be unpopular, the Senate has reversed itself and voted to give the governor and six other constitutional officers a 20 per cent pay increase next year.

That would bring the governor's salary to $60,000 a year from its present level of $49,100.

Yesterday's bare minimum twothirds vote, 27-9, was a turnabout for senators, hignly conscious of their re-election campaigns. They had rejected the measure only Monday by a 18-15 margin.

During both floor fights, they testified to "extraordinary heat" from constituents and news media editorials.

"What's the matter with us? We run for cover because a few newspaper guys have nothing to write about. Vote 'aye' and teach them a lesson," argued Democratic Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena.

Beginning with the swearing in of new officers next January, the salary for attorney general would go from $42,500 to $51,155.

Salaries of the other constitutional officers — lieutenant governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer and superintendent of public instruction —would rise from $35,000 to $42,500.

One of those who changed his vote in favor of the bill was Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, who said, "These constitutional officers shouldn't be the whipping boys for the public disaffection with politicians in general."

Drug Advisers Shun Watchdog Duties Over Narcotics Squad

Members of the Marin County Drug Abuse Technical Advisory Committee said yesterday they do not believe the committee should act as a board of review for the proposed countywide narcotics squad.

The federally-funded squad would be under the operational control of the City of San Rafael, even though it would operate throughout the county. Consequently, it has been proposed that a review board, a kind of watchdog agency, be set up to oversee its operations.

The technical advisory committee said such a board should include representatives of several agencies in the county and not just the committee.

Several committee members said they did not have the time or expertise to review actions of a narcotics squad. Others cited possible conflict of interest which might occur since some committee members are law enforcement officers.

The committee agreed yesterday to recommend to county supervisors that any review board formed should include three members of the drug abuse committee, a local student, Marin's drug and alcohol coordinator and representations of the criminal justice division of the Marin County Bar Association, the Board of Supervisors, the county Police Chiefs Association, the San Rafael City Council and the County Juvenile Justice and Human Rights commissions.

But committee members expressed reservations that a review panel could operate effectively, Dorothy L. Hughes, who opposes it, said. She didn't believe a review board would work.

The committee recommended that any review board would need to have the power to: inspect and copy all narcotics enforcement records, investigate complaints about the narcotics squad and take testimony and evidence from anyone involved with the narcotics unit.

And it suggested that a review board member should sit as a voting member on the board which reviews applications for jobs on the squad.

In addition, the committee recommended that juveniles, parolees and individuals on probation should not be used as informants by the narcotics squad.

The committee also stressed that supervisors should not approve formation of the narcotics squad unless appropriate controls are possible. (County opposition would kill the project.)

The drug abuse group's suggestions will be forwarded to supervisors.

Bridge Craftsmen Get 19% Pay Raises

Pay hikes of up to 19 per cent for 59 craft workers were approved yesterday by Golden Gate Bridge District directors.

Cost of the pay hikes, including fringe benefits, will be $217,800, according to the district's auditor-controller, Robert D. Tough.

Directors agreed, however, that next year they will reexamine their policy of paying craft employees whatever the prevailing hourly wage is in private industry.

Director Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley, who cast the only vote against the pay hikes, argued it was "inappropriate" to pay public employees the same as workers in private industry. Public employees are guaranteed work and pay every day, while those in industry are subject to periods of unemployment, he said.

The security of public employment should be offset by somewhat lower pay, Meyer said.

The issue was settled quickly for this year after Director Lawrence Mazzola, a plumber's union official, warned that "if you vote this down today, you'll get yourselves in an awful lot of trouble — I can see it coming."

The wage hikes cover four carpenters, one cement mason, 18 ironworkers, five operating engineers and 31 painters. The highest pay hike, 19 per cent, was for journeymen painters, whose pay will go from $9.27 to $11.27 an hour.

Supervisors To Be Asked To Remove Housing's Jones

Marin County Supervisors will be asked Tuesday to remove Rogers Jones of Marin City from his seat on the seven-member Marin County housing authority board asking for his ouster.

A petition has been submitted to supervisors by the Marin City Homeowners' Association. It lists 127 names.

A second petition, filed by the Marin City Tenants Council, urges supervisors to retain Jones. It contains 236 signatures and says Jones "has given the people of Marin City a meaningful voice on the housing authority board. . ."

The homeowners' association supports Shepherd, as does a majority of the board of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, which he also serves as executive director

(The redevelopment agency board has filed a suit against the housing authority to block it from firing the joint executive director.)

A hearing on the redevelopment agency's suit has been postponed until later this month, leaving the door open for the housing authority board to consider Shepherd's firing at a special meeting Tuesday.

That session is set for 7:30 p.m. in the planning commission chambers at Civic Center.

The redevelopment agency board, meanwhile, will meet in closed session Monday at its San Rafael office to discuss the pending suit, challenging the housing board's right to dismiss Shepherd unilaterally.

The Homeowners petition came under fire Monday from Jones' fellow board members who are investigating a charge that it was circulated among Marin City residents by a housing authority employee during working hours.

The authority board ordered a staff probe of the matter and requested the Marin County Human Relations Department to assist.

The employee reportedly is Maintenance Supervisor Otis C. Gaines Jr., husband of Collie B. Gaines, chairman of the redevelopment agency board. She is a supporter of Shepherd.

The petition alleges that Jones has a conflict of interest in a suit filed against the housing authority, has "openly and actively worked against the housing authority" in another suit, has "sabotaged" a remodeling program for the community's public housing units, and "cannot understand the issues that come before the commission and votes only when and as directed by another commissioner."

Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino wrote supervisors yesterday advising them to refer the matter to the county administrator for investigation.

Drug Advisers Shun Watchdog Duties Over Narcotics Squad

Members of the Marin County Drug Abuse Technical Advisory Committee said yesterday they do not believe the committee should act as a board of review for the proposed countywide narcotics squad.

The federally-funded squad would be under the operational control of the City of San Rafael, even though it would operate throughout the county. Consequently, it has been proposed that a review board, a kind of watchdog agency, be set up to oversee its operations.

The Saigon command said 18 Russian-made rockets hit the Bien Hoa airbase during three separate attacks 14 miles northwest of the capital, killing at least two civilians and wounding seven civilians and two airmen.

Body Found

BELFAST (UPI) — A fisherman today found the body of an apparent assassination victim floating in a loch near the western border, police said.

Restraint Urged

ATHENS (UPI) — President Gerald R. Ford urged restraint and moderation in the handling of the Cyprus crisis in a message to the premier of Greece, a Greek government spokesman said today.

The new U.S. President also pledged support in helping bring peace to the island nation.

In a letter to Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis, Ford said he has "watched the tragic crisis over Cyprus embroil two of our trusted allies and endanger the stability of the area.

"Your emergence on the scene is a symbol of hope to me and all those who are working for a speedy resolution of that difficult problem. I know you share with me the conviction that cool heads and moderate behavior are essential. Be assured we are committed to assist in any way," the message said.

Cargo Ship Sunk

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebel gunners sank a general cargo ship from South Vietnam today as it moved up the Mekong River en route to Phnom Penh, port police said.

The ship was part of a 14-boat convoy that came under rebel gunfire near Kos Thmei, 43 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Police said all of the ship's crew members were rescued, and none was reported seriously injured.

No other ships in the convoy were damaged police said. The convoy was composed of three petroleum tankers, seven cargo ships and four ammunition barges.

Leaves Hospital

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace returned home yesterday after a week in a Brimingham hospital for minor surgery.

The governor said he felt well and was looking forward to speaking engagements next week that will take him to New Orleans, Albuqueque, N. M., and Lynchburg, Va.

Wallace was hospitalized to drain an abscess caused by a stitch which failed to dissolve after a previous operation. He watched the swearing in of President Ford shortly before checking out of the hospital and sent Ford a telegram wishing him well.

Ambassador Quits

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — Citing his friendship with Richard Nixon, the U.S. ambassador to Honduras resigned his post today.

"Three times in my life I've been appointed to positions by Richard Nixon. I consider him my friend," Felipe Sanchez told newsmen here.

He added, however, that his resignation would be subject to approval by President Ford.

"What I most admire about Richard Nixon is his attitude toward Latin Americans," Sanchez said.

Girl's Death Comes After Diploma

DETROIT (UPI) — For more than two years, 17-year-old Geneva Smith fought the steady onslaught of leukemia with the idea of earning a high school degree.

Yesterday, she got it. She smiled. Then, five hours later, she died.

Geneva died at Detroit Osteopathic Hospital from Hodgkin's disease, the form of leukemia she had.

As the Madison Heights, Mich., girl lay on her deathbed this week, it seemed likely that she was soon to die without the thing she wanted most — her high school diploma.

Her neighbors, Beverly Stamm and Mrs. Cecil Robinson, learning of her desire, told her high school principal, Laurence Decker, that the girl more than anything wanted a diploma.

"We did the right thing," said Decker, principal of Madison Heights High School. "It was one of those things she wanted from life. It wasn't legal, but it was right."

Decker decided to give Geneva an honorary diploma even though she had missed several months of classes due to her illness.

"A big smile came across her face," he said of Geneva after he gave her the diploma Wednesday. "She was so pleased her eyes sparkled. She even asked me to move closer so she could hold it."

Geneva's sister, Beverly Champion, said Geneva probably knew how sick she was "but never talked about it."

"She kept her worries and fears to herself."

Some Strikes Are Settled

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Despite a brief walkout by union negotiators who said management broke a promise not to do their work, talks were to resume today in an effort to settle a month-old strike at the giant General Motors plant at Lordstown, Ohio.

Local President Marline Ford said union representatives entered the plant yesterday to check on an agreement reached Thursday in which the company promised no salaried personnel would do union work during the strike.

"We walked in and saw foremen doing our jobs," said Ford. "This perturbed us highly and negotiations were broken off for the rest of the day."

Company spokesmen said the foremen were doing work required for "health and safety."

The strike, which started July 12, involves a new contract for the 7,800-member local, and numerous unresolved grievances.

The giant automaker announced yesterday it would lay off 4,500 workers at its V-8 engine plant in Flint, Mich., for one week starting Monday because of the strike.

Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. and District 7 of the Communications Workers of American reached agreement yesterday on a new three-year contract at Omaha, Neb.

About 40,000 carpenters in 11 southern California countries voted to end their six-week-old strike and return to work Monday. The carpenters' strike against members of the Associated General Contractos virtually halted southern California's $1.5 billion construction industry.

About a fifth of the 10,200 striking United Steel Workers of America returned to work Friday after settlement was reached with one of five iron ore companies it had been striking, Pickands Mather Co. of Cleveland, Ohio9

In a joint statement, the USW and the firm said they felt they had reached a model settlement which could lead to the end of strikes with four other iron ore comanies operating in Minnesota and Michigan.

In Montreal, strikes by 1,300 marine engineers and deck officers, now two days old, could result in layoffs of up to 3,200 persons, a Seafarers' International Union spokesman said.

The spokesman, executive vice president John Royce, said most of the 145 ships in the 15 companies making up the Canadian Lake Carriers Association have been halted by the strike.

St. Clair May Just Finish Up

BOSTON (UPI) — James D. St. Clair, lawyer for former President Richard M. Nixon during the Watergate investigation, indicated last night his legal defense of Nixon would continue only through the end of current litigation.

"President Nixon is no longer the president, and my responsibilities are to the office of the President," St. Clair said when asked by newswriters if he would continued as Nixon's lawyer. "My responsibilities, of course, relate to matters before the court."

St. Clair gave the statement at Logan International Airport where he arrived from Washington en route to his suburban Wellesley, Mass., home.

Caller Claims Credit For Airport Bombing

At the same time, a $50,000 reward was offered for information leading to the arrest of the bomber.

An anonymous caller, with what sounded like a Middle Eastern accent, called the CBS television network here and said he was responsible for the bombing and that more bombs were still in the airport, unexploded.

He said he was the same man who telephoned the Los Angeles Herald Examiner following the blast and said he had placed the bomb in a locker at the airport.

Police, following his directions and guided by a bombsniffing dog, found two green napkins, one containing a tape casette and the other a key, which the caller had said would fit an airport locker.

Police said the tape contained a message six to eight minutes long in which several threats were made, but investigators would not describe the threats.

Court Suspends Ehrlichman

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — The State Supreme Court has suspended John D. Ehrlichman, once domestic adviser to former President Richard Nixon, from the practice of law because of his conspiracy conviction.

The court said yesterday that the suspension would remain in effect until final disposition of disciplinary proceedings expected from the Washington State Bar Association.

Faucette To Superior Court In Synanon Tape Theft Case

Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court ordered the 61-year-old man to appear for arraignment in the higher court on Aug. 19.

In a November 1973 deposition in connection with a damage suit against Synanon, Faucette admitted taking the tapes to "expose Synanon" and find out why he had been kicked out of the commune two months earlier.

The tape theft is involved in a confusing tangle of litigation between Synanon and the San Francisco Examiner.

The rehabilitation center has filed two suits against the Examiner, including a $32 million libel suit sparked by a series of articles on Synanon.

Faucette was working for newspaper attorneys when he took the tapes to help the Examiner defend itself, Synanon officials claim.

Another former Synanon member, Twilver Tenola Earle, 25, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty to helping in the burglary and was sentenced to complete a drug treatment program at Delancy Street Foundation.

Cyprus Fighting Stops, But So Do Peace Talks

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Fighting on Cyprus came to a standstill today for the first time in weeks but talks in Geneva aimed at working ot a political settlement were delayed when Turkey walked out over its demand for separate representation for the islands Greek and Turkish communities.

Conference officials said Turkish foreign minister Turan Gunes walked oat of the Palais des Nations back to his hotel saying, "I will wait there until someone contacts me."

Gunes' insistence of separate Greek and Turkish Cypriot representation, delegates said, underscored Turkey's hard-line position that the future of Cyprus must be based on autonomous Greek and Turkish Cypriot regions.

The lull on Cyprus marked the first complete halt in fighting since the Turkish army invaded the island July 20, five days after a Greek-led military coup ousted President Makarios.

The fighting ended after Greek and Turkish army officials meeting in Nicosia signed an agreement yesterday to separate their armies on the island.

In Geneva, British, Greek and Turkish foreign ministers tried today to save the deadlocked peace talks. But one delegate said "the situation does not look too good."

They agreed to meet again today with Glafkos Clerides, Greek Cypriot provisional president of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, Turkish Cypriot vice president.

The two men joined the talks under a cease-fire declaration signed in Geneva July 30. It was the first time members of the Cypriot communities had been in a role to settle the dispute.

The Greek government served notice it will not go ahead with negotiation of a new constitutional setup in Cyprus until alleged violations of the cease-fire by Turkish forces end.

In Ankara, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit said yesterday his government would not discuss a political settlement unless Greece agreed to turning Cyprus into a federation.

Under the plan, Greek and Turkish areas would each have their own autonomous administrations.

FORD

and Ford looked startled to see an array of reporters and cameramen watching him from across the street.

A short time later he cracked the door and tried again, but there was still no newspaper. So he took a swim and fixed his own breakfast of hot tea, melon and English muffins. He later said no other members of his family were up at that time.

It was clear the new President was anxious to see how the newspapers were playing his inauguration as the nation's 38th president and his inaugural remarks.

So when the Post was delivered by 14-year-old Shelley Deming of Alexandria, barefoot and wearing faded bluejeans and a sweatshirt, a Secret Service agent hurriedly took it inside the house to the President.

Soon afterwards Ann Williamson, 10, also clad in bluejeans, delivered the Washington Star News to the President's doorstep. She said she was pinchhitting for her brother Bill.

Ford walked out of his home at about 7:20 a.m. wearing a light gray summer suit with a white shirt and a dark tie. He had a newspaper tucked under his arm, and called out a friendly "Hi, how are you" to reporters across the street.

"How do you like being President," a reporter shoulted. "It's great — so far," he replied. "Wait until tomorrow," quipped a reporter. "You make it sound so nice," Ford tossed back with a wry smile.

Rain Comes Too Late To Save Parched Midwest Corn Crops

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The rains finally came to the Midwest yesterday perhaps in time to save the soybeans, but weeks without rain have left the corn crops to waste.

Iowa agriculture officials say the thunderstorms which barreled across the Plains states into Texas, dumping up to 10 inches of rain in places, were too late to help the Western Iowa corn crop.

In Oklahoma heavy rains sent flash floods cascading across drought-parched land, closing highways, washing cars into ditches and collapsing bridges. No one was hurt. Garber, Okla., received 10.63 inches of rain Friday.

In other Midwestern and Southwestern states, left dust-dry by weeks of little or no rain, as much as 5 inches fell. But Iowa corn farmers said the rain came so late, they expect only stunted yields.

"The rain will help some, but I don't think it will appreciatively change the picture, " Iowa Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounsberry said. "It's not going to have that big an impact."

Elsewhere, government and state officials, farmers and ranchers, echoed the situation in Iowa. Most of the drought-stricken states, including Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, Texas, Nebraska and Ohio, have conceded that corn crops are beyond saving.

The rains, which the National Weather Service predicts will last for several days, should provide enough moisture to save at least half the soybean and grain sorghum crops.

Experts estimate drought losses at $10 billion and some have likened the dry spell's impact to the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

The state governments of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma have asked emergency federal assistance like that already offered to two South Dakota counties.

Reports from state farm bureau presidents show that yield production ranged from average in Wisconsin to a 50 per cent reduction in Nebraska. Several states also reported serious financial problems for young farmers and others who suffered heavy livestock losses and are now experiencing dry conditions resulted in little or no crop yield.

Robert Watson, chief of the administration division of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ACSC) for Iowa, said the rains should help the pastures and could even given the beans a boost.

Cyprus Fighting Stops, But So Do Peace Talks

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Fighting on Cyprus came to a standstill today for the first time in weeks but talks in Geneva aimed at working ot a political settlement were delayed when Turkey walked out over its demand for separate representation for the islands Greek and Turkish communities.

Conference officials said Turkish foreign minister Turan Gunes walked oat of the Palais des Nations back to his hotel saying, "I will wait there until someone contacts me."

Gunes' insistence of separate Greek and Turkish Cypriot representation, delegates said, underscored Turkey's hard-line position that the future of Cyprus must be based on autonomous Greek and Turkish Cypriot regions.

The lull on Cyprus marked the first complete halt in fighting since the Turkish army invaded the island July 20, five days after a Greek-led military coup ousted President Makarios.

The fighting ended after Greek and Turkish army officials meeting in Nicosia signed an agreement yesterday to separate their armies on the island.

In Geneva, British, Greek and Turkish foreign ministers tried today to save the deadlocked peace talks. But one delegate said "the situation does not look too good."

They agreed to meet again today with Glafkos Clerides, Greek Cypriot provisional president of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, Turkish Cypriot vice president.

The two men joined the talks under a cease-fire declaration signed in Geneva July 30. It was the first time members of the Cypriot communities had been in a role to settle the dispute.

The Greek government served notice it will not go ahead with negotiation of a new constitutional setup in Cyprus until alleged violations of the cease-fire by Turkish forces end.

In Ankara, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit said yesterday his government would not discuss a political settlement unless Greece agreed to turning Cyprus into a federation.

Under the plan, Greek and Turkish areas would each have their own autonomous administrations.

FORD

and Ford looked startled to see an array of reporters and cameramen watching him from across the street.

A short time later he cracked the door and tried again, but there was still no newspaper. So he took a swim and fixed his own breakfast of hot tea, melon and English muffins. He later said no other members of his family were up at that time.

It was clear the new President was anxious to see how the newspapers were playing his inauguration as the nation's 38th president and his inaugural remarks.

So when the Post was delivered by 14-year-old Shelley Deming of Alexandria, barefoot and wearing faded bluejeans and a sweatshirt, a Secret Service agent hurriedly took it inside the house to the President.

Soon afterwards Ann Williamson, 10, also clad in bluejeans, delivered the Washington Star News to the President's doorstep. She said she was pinchhitting for her brother Bill.

Ford walked out of his home at about 7:20 a.m. wearing a light gray summer suit with a white shirt and a dark tie. He had a newspaper tucked under his arm, and called out a friendly "Hi, how are you" to reporters across the street.

"How do you like being President," a reporter shoulted. "It's great — so far," he replied. "Wait until tomorrow," quipped a reporter. "You make it sound so nice," Ford tossed back with a wry smile.

Rain Comes Too Late To Save Parched Midwest Corn Crops

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The rains finally came to the Midwest yesterday perhaps in time to save the soybeans, but weeks without rain have left the corn crops to waste.

Iowa agriculture officials say the thunderstorms which barreled across the Plains states into Texas, dumping up to 10 inches of rain in places, were too late to help the Western Iowa corn crop.

In Oklahoma heavy rains sent flash floods cascading across drought-parched land, closing highways, washing cars into ditches and collapsing bridges. No one was hurt. Garber, Okla., received 10.63 inches of rain Friday.

In other Midwestern and Southwestern states, left dust-dry by weeks of little or no rain, as much as 5 inches fell. But Iowa corn farmers said the rain came so late, they expect only stunted yields.

"The rain will help some, but I don't think it will appreciatively change the picture, " Iowa Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounsberry said. "It's not going to have that big an impact."

Elsewhere, government and state officials, farmers and ranchers, echoed the situation in Iowa. Most of the drought-stricken states, including Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, Texas, Nebraska and Ohio, have conceded that corn crops are beyond saving.

The rains, which the National Weather Service predicts will last for several days, should provide enough moisture to save at least half the soybean and grain sorghum crops.

Experts estimate drought losses at $10 billion and some have likened the dry spell's impact to the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

The state governments of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma have asked emergency federal assistance like that already offered to two South Dakota counties.

Reports from state farm bureau presidents show that yield production ranged from average in Wisconsin to a 50 per cent reduction in Nebraska. Several states also reported serious financial problems for young farmers and others who suffered heavy livestock losses and are now experiencing dry conditions resulted in little or no crop yield.

Robert Watson, chief of the administration division of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ACSC) for Iowa, said the rains should help the pastures and could even given the beans a boost.

Home Loans Bill Vetoed By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has vetoed two bills to provide home financing for low and middle income Californians by creating a state "corporation" and floating a $500 million bond issue.

In his veto message yesterday the governor said he recognized the need for increased housing but the bill establishing the corporation "has serious defects and would substantially alter the state's fiscal policies."

That bill (SB1633) and the companion bond issue (SB1634) were authored by Sen. George Zenovich, D-Fresno, and supported by the housing and construction industry. Both were rushed through the Legislature this week in hopes of placing the proposed bond issue on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Reagan cited several reasons for rejecting the package. He said the bond issue could jeopardize California's top credit rating and would grant banks and mortage institutions a break by shifting the responsibility for lending risks to the state.

Under the proposal, the state corporation would funnel home loan money through regular lending institutions.

Golden Gate Bridge Directors Delay Ferry Terminal Decision

Directors of the Golden Gate Bridge District yesterday postponed a decision on what to do about a $14 million bid for construction of the Larkspur ferry terminal. The board will consider the matter at a special meeting Aug. 23 at 10 a.m. in the toll plaza. (See another story, page 1.)

The low bid was almost $4 million more than estimated by district consultants.

Directors yesterday asked the staff to look for ways to trim costs for the ferry terminals in San Francisco, Sausalito and Larkspur.

Board members debated over whether the Larkspur facility's $1,350,000 roof should be eliminated. Marin County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. led arguments for the roof, insisting it was necessary to attract enough riders to make the ferry system successful.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring, however, said the roof was "certainly not an operational necessity." A roof could be provided at no cost to the district if air rights above the terminal were leased for commercial use, he suggested.

Anthony A. Braccia, one of the primary consultants on the terminal, defended his $4 million error, saying an accurate cost estimate was impossible because of unexpected inflation for labor and material. "We're not prophets, we're estimators," he insisted.

Director Lowell Edington of Napa County suggested that the district could save money by not building permanent terminals at Sausalito and San Francisco. Temporary facilities at each location could do the job, he said.

Golden Gate Bridge District Directors Also:

TRANSIT — Endorsed pending state legislation to build a new downtown San Francisco transit terminal, primarily to serve Marin, Sonoma and East Bay bus commuters.

CIVIL RIGHTS — Received a staff opinion that the Civil Rights Act does not apply to composition of the bridge board because the district has no control over the government bodies that appoint directors.

FERRY — Received a staff report that 133,200 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry last month, a record for any July. The figure was 3,600 more than last July.

TIMETABLES — Bought 120,000 timetables from low bidder Product Agency Ltd. of San Rafael for $2,650.

TRAFFIC — Received another staff report showing a decline in traffic, this one noting the vehicle count last fiscal year was down 5.19 per cent from the previous year. It was the first decrease since the bridge opened in 1937, except for the World War II years.

Ford Names Four Prominent Men To Help With Transition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has named four prominent men to help him make the transition from the Nixon administration to the Ford administration.

They include Rogers C.B. Morton, Secretary of the Interior; ex-Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton; Donald Rumsfeld, U.S. Ambassador to NATO; and John O. Marsh, the defense adviser from Ford's vice presidential staff.

Morton, 59, joined the Nixon administration in January of 1971. He has headed the Republican National Committee and represented Maryland in the House from 1962 to 1971.

Scranton, 57, was the envoy sent by President-elect Nixon in 1968 to explore the Middle East situation.

A Yale University law school graduate, he was called on in 1970 to serve as chairman of the President's Committee on Campus Unrest and in 1971 and 1972 to be a member of the presidential price commission.

Rumsfeld, 42, has been the chief U.S. representative to NATO since February 1973.

He held several high positions in the Nixon administration, including the posts of director of the Office of Economic Opportunity and Counselor to the President. A former Navy aviator, he was graduated from Princeton University.

John O. Marsh Jr., 47, has been Ford's assistant for defense affairs since early this year. He served four terms as a Virginia Democrat in the House of Representatives and has practiced law privately in Washington.

Congress Drops Probe Of Nixon

BOSTON (UPI) — Congress will not carry proceedings against Richard Nixon any further, Democratic Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said yesterday.

"It is no longer up to Congress to pursue the matter of Watergate or Mr. Nixon's involvement in it," O'Neil said after returning from Washington where he attended the inauguration of Gerald Ford and later conferred with the new President.

"It is up to the courts to pursue the mattter if they want to," O'Neill said.

The majority leader said the Democratic-controlled Congress would not continue disagreements over Nixon administration policy automatically into the Ford administration. He said Congress would give Ford a "90-day honeymoon period."

O'Neill returned with former House Speaker John W. McCormack, who attended the inauguration at Ford's request.

"I was of course honored by the request of President Ford," McCormack said. "And I was exceedingly pleased. Given the stress and strain of the situation, it would have been so easy for the President to overlook an invitation to an old friend."

Ervin Says Congress Can't Give Immunity

HONOLULU (UPI) — Sen. Sam Ervin, who chaired the Senate Watergate Committee, said yesterday that Congress did not have the power to grant former President Nixon immunity from criminal prosecution.

Ervin, D-N.C., arrived to address the American Bar ASSociation's annual convention next week.

The senator said, "Congress cannot grant immunity, in my opinion, because it is not an exercise of legislative power."

Ervin said only the executive branch would have power to grant Nixon immunity, and he said it would probably be up to President Ford. He avoided expressing his personal opinion about whether immunity should be granted.

While talking with reporters, Ervin said he would have preferred that the impeachment process be carried to its constitutional conclusion because "then there would have been no question of whether the President was guilty or not."

Bills Found Unsigned On Nixon's Desk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the decisions facing President Gerald R. Ford are whether to sign a number of bills that were lying on Richard M. Nixon's desk when he resigned.

The most important is one appropriating federal money for elementary and secondary education. It includes what is considered by many the strongest legislative language yet opposing the busing of schoolchildren.

The House and Senate approved a conference agreement on the bill late in July. The Senate approved it 81 to 15; the House 323 to 83 —margins that are more than enough to override a veto. There are no indications Ford would be inclined to veto the measure.

The bill would forbid courts to order children bused beyond the school second nearest to their homes. The only exceptions would be where courts felt wider busing was needed to protect children's constitutional rights.

Another major bill on Ford's desk is one that would let Americans buy and own gold for the first time since the Depression era.

The bill is technically a measure to extend United States participation in the International Development Association. But an amendment was added allowing private dealing in gold.

The bill is of interest particularly to congressmen from states whose gold mines have long since been closed.

Private ownership of gold — except for coin collectors, jewelers and dentists —has been banned since Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration. The ban was one of Roosevelt's moves to fight the Depression.

Proponents of private ownership contend there is no reason now to continue to bar Americans from having gold if they want it.

Other bills awaiting presidential signature or veto are mostly minor. As one of his last actions as president, Nixon vetoed an appropriations bill for the Agriculture Department and some other agencies, saying it was inflationary and contained unworkable programs. It may be altered and reintroduced in Congress soon.

Bolinas-Stinson School District Approves Budget

Bolinas-Stinson School District trustees have adopted a $443,476 budget for 1974-75.

Supt. Bernard Barrish said the district cannot estimate its 1974-75 tax rate until it obtains its assessed valuation figures from the county. Last year's tax rate was $2.23 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Included in the tax rate will be a one year 20-cent override tax to finance the down payment on a $117,000 state loan to renovate the administration building at Bolinas School, bringing it up to present earthquake safety standards.

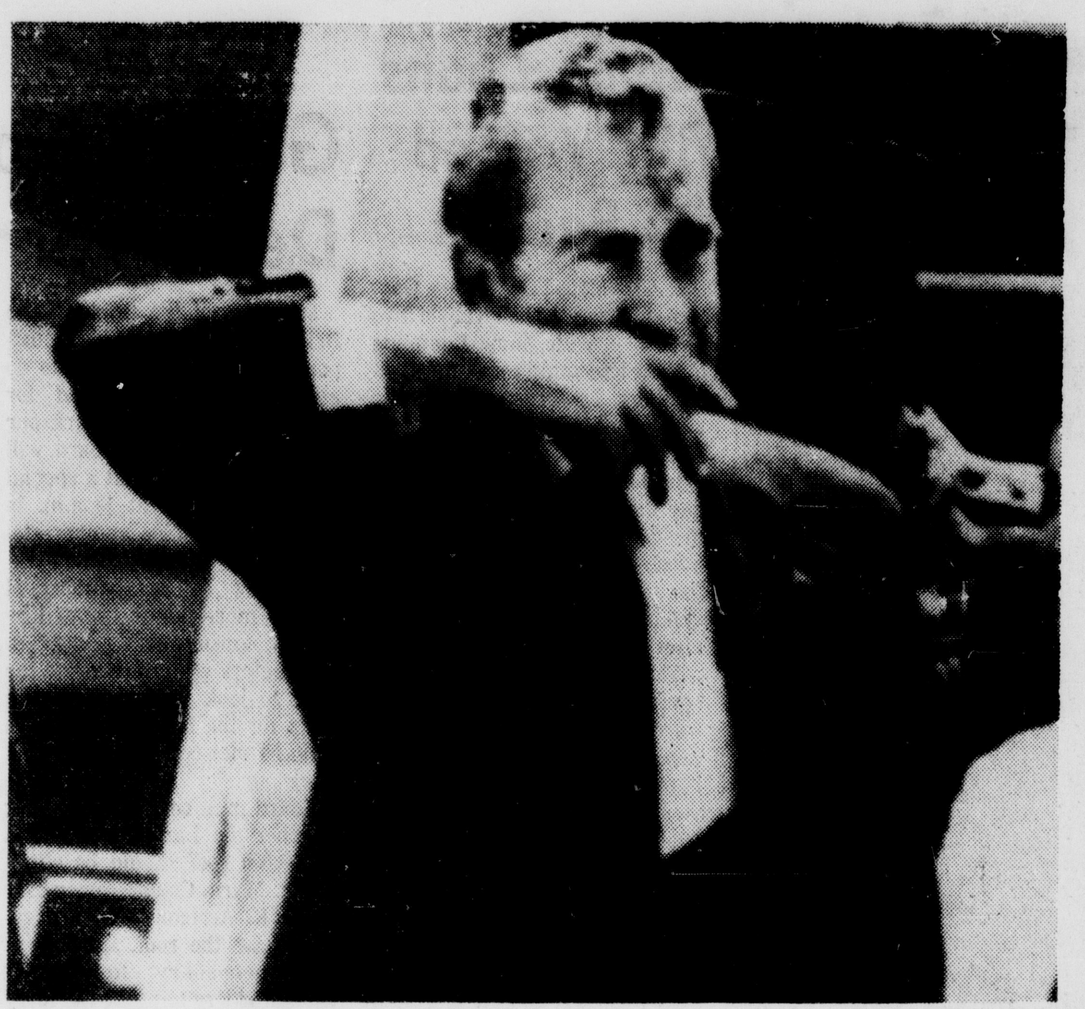
Barrish said that in succeeding years, the loan, which was financed at 4.8 per cent interest, will probably only require a tax override of six or seven cents.

Additionally, the tax rate will include five cents override to expand recreational offerings at the school and improve playgrounds.

The budget includes a 10 per cent salary increase for teachers and a seven per cent wage hike for classified employees.

Sanitary Board

The Almonte Sanitary District board will discuss a proposed plan to share sewer permit allocations in the Mill Valley area at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at district offices at 234 Shoreline Highway.



EMOTIONAL GESTURE — As he stepped from his plane at El Toro Marine Air Station yesterday, Richard Nixon lifted his hand as if to hide an inner emotion. Nixon received a tumultuous welcome from a crowd of more than 5,000 who wept and cheered. At Nixon's request, the base was opened to the public for the first time.

Senate Republicans Oppose Prosecution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans appear to have concluded that Richard M. Nixon has suffered enough over Watergate and should not be prosecuted.

"A pound of flesh is enough," Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott told reporters yesterday, following a meeting of all GOP senators. "Why should we demand the blood that goes with it?"

Sen. Norris Cotton, N.H., chairman of the conference of Republican senators, said the "punishment, agony and the disgrace he has undergone is probably the worst punishment there could be."

Their remarks apeared to represent the sentiment of the group, although no formal decision was announced.

A grand jury named Nixon an indicted co-conspirator in the Watergate case after being advised it could not indict a president. It would be up to Special Proseutor Leon Jaworski whether to seek to bring any charges against Nixon. He has indicated no decision on that will be made anytime soon.

In other developments:

—Lawyers for John D. Ehrlichman asked yesterday that the Watergate cover-up trial, set for Sept. 9, be delayed at least two months on grounds that "inflamed passions" and "massive and pervasive publicity" during Nixon's last days in office make finding an impartial jury impossible. Attorneys for co-defendant H.R. Haldeman said they are considering making the same request.

White House lawyers, the last time, reported one of his missing Watergate tapes had been found. They said more than half of another subpoenaed conversation never was recorded because the tape ran out. Both involved talks with key aide Charles W. Colson in early 1973.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic chairman at the time of the Watergate bugging, settled his suit against the Nixon campaign out of court for $400,000. The suit sought damages for the bugging. O'Brien said he would give the money to his party for a campaign "to reenlist the confidence of the American people in our two-party system.

Grand Jury Now Feels Nixon More Indictable

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal grand jury that named former President Richard Nixon as a co-conspirator in the Watergate scandal now believes ixon is "much more indictable" in light of the three new tapes released Monday, the New York Daily News reported today.

The Daily News said the original Watergate grand jury has put Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski "on notice" that Nixon, now a private citizen, must not escape punishment in view of his admitted role in the cover-up.

The Daily News, quoting an unnamed source, said members of the grand jury will probably decide during the next several days whether they actually wnat to indict Nixon.

Nixon Goes Home; Just A Citizen

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard M. Nixon returned to his home in California a private citizen yesterday after bidding an emotional, sometimes tearful farewell to public life as the 37th president of the United States.

Then it was on to California and a warm welcome from some 5,000 supporters who turned out at the El Toro Marine Air Station where the Presidential jet "Spirit of '76" landed. They cheered and sang "God Bless America."

Nixon told the crowd he would "continue to work for peace ... for opportunity and prosperity in this country."

He was accompanied by former press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, his appointments secretary, Stephen Bull, Tricia and Edward Cox and his wife.

Nixon ceased being President at 11:35 a.m. EDT, when his letter of resignation was handed to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

He was at his desk aboard the presidential jet 13 miles southwest of Jefferson City, Mo., at 39,000 feet when Gerald R. Ford was sworn in as the 38th President three minutes past noon.

One of Nixon's closest friends Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., said Nixon broke down with a group of close friends Thursday night before he went on national televison to announce his resignation.

New White House press secretary Jerry TerHorst said Nixon did not pardon himself or grant immunity to anyone before he left office.

Bar Association Head Calls For Nixon Disbarment Examination

HONOLULU (UPI) — Disbarment proceedings should be considered against former President Richard Nixon if he decides to return to the practice of law, the president of the American Bar Association said yesterday.

ABA President Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, Fla., also said it would be appropriate for the California or New York bar associations to take up the issue.

But, Smith said, he doubted Nixon would return to the legal profession.

If Nixon returns to practice, he said, "it would be the appropriate time to take up the question of disbarring him."

Smith, who was in Honolulu for the ABA's annual convention, said that, although the nation should put Watergate in the past, he personally felt Nixon should be called to account for his actions.

"No man is above the law," he told reporters, "and I don't want to let anybody go who has violated the law. But it is for the people to weigh the evidence and determine Mr. Nixon's future."

The president of the California Bar Association announced last month that it would hold a preliminary disciplinary hearing within two months for Nixon and he would be treated "just like any other attorney in the state of California" whose professional conduct had been called into question.

The state bar announced earlier that it was also investigating six other members connected to Watergate — John Ehrlichman, Herbert Kalmbach, Frank De Marco Jr., Robert Mardian, Gordon Strachan and Donald Segretti.

Nixon Retaining Some Ex-Presidential Aides

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard Nixon still has Ronald Ziegler as his news spokesman, and other aides who were with him in the White House.

The members of the former president's staff who flew to Califronia with him yesterday "are going to remain on as long as we are wanted or needed," former Appointments Secretary Stephen Bull said Friday.

Under law, a former president is given a federal expense account to pay for aides, secretaries and other expenses.

Bull and Ziegler left the White House staff with Nixon's departure, and came to California along with several others, including Col. Jack Brennan, a military aide.

Bull said he had no idea how long the former White House staffers would go on working for Nixon. "No one is talking about the long term stuff yet," he said. "We're not even trying to figure out the answers yet. We'll try to figure out the questions first."

Congress Drops Probe Of Nixon

BOSTON (UPI) — Congress will not carry proceedings against Richard Nixon any further, Democratic Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said yesterday.

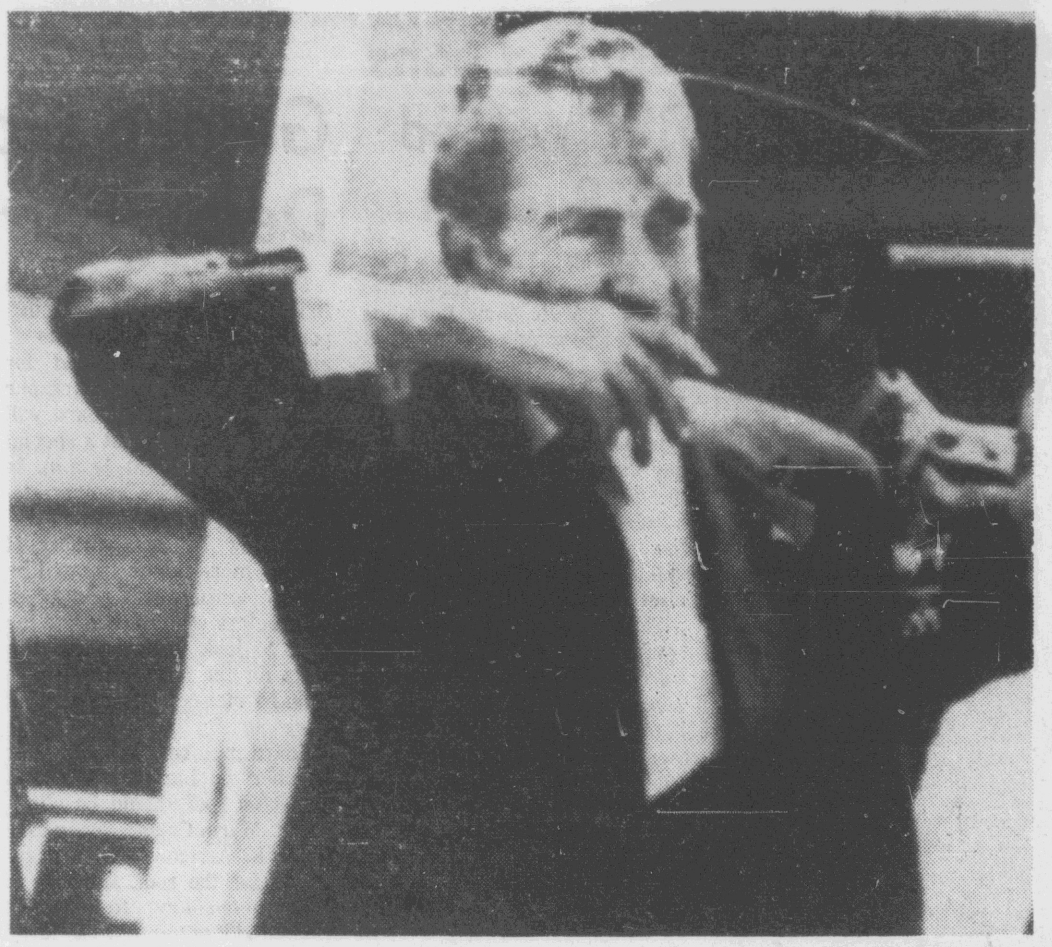
"It is no longer up to Congress to pursue the matter of Watergate or Mr. Nixon's involvement in it," O'Neil said after returning from Washington where he attended the inauguration of Gerald Ford and later conferred with the new President.

"It is up to the courts to pursue the mattter if they want to," O'Neill said.

The majority leader said the Democratic-controlled Congress would not continue disagreements over Nixon administration policy automatically into the Ford administration. He said Congress would give Ford a "90-day honeymoon period."

O'Neill returned with former House Speaker John W. McCormack, who attended the inauguration at Ford's request.

"I was of course honored by the request of President Ford," McCormack said. "And I was exceedingly pleased. Given the stress and strain of the situation, it would have been so easy for the President to overlook an invitation to an old friend."



EMOTIONAL GESTURE — As he stepped from his plane at El Toro Marine Air Station yesterday, Richard Nixon lifted his hand as if to hide an inner emotion. Nixon received a tumultuous welcome from a crowd of more than 5,000 who wept and cheered. At Nixon's request, the base was opened to the public for the first time.

Ervin Says Congress Can't Give Immunity

HONOLULU (UPI) — Sen. Sam Ervin, who chaired the Senate Watergate Committee, said yesterday that Congress did not have the power to grant former President Nixon immunity from criminal prosecution.

Ervin, D-N.C., arrived to address the American Bar ASSociation's annual convention next week.

The senator said, "Congress cannot grant immunity, in my opinion, because it is not an exercise of legislative power."

Ervin said only the executive branch would have power to grant Nixon immunity, and he said it would probably be up to President Ford. He avoided expressing his personal opinion about whether immunity should be granted.

While talking with reporters, Ervin said he would have preferred that the impeachment process be carried to its constitutional conclusion because "then there would have been no question of whether the President was guilty or not."

Bills Found Unsigned On Nixon's Desk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the decisions facing President Gerald R. Ford are whether to sign a number of bills that were lying on Richard M. Nixon's desk when he resigned.

The most important is one appropriating federal money for elementary and secondary education. It includes what is considered by many the strongest legislative language yet opposing the busing of schoolchildren.

The House and Senate approved a conference agreement on the bill late in July. The Senate approved it 81 to 15; the House 323 to 83 —margins that are more than enough to override a veto. There are no indications Ford would be inclined to veto the measure.

The bill would forbid courts to order children bused beyond the school second nearest to their homes. The only exceptions would be where courts felt wider busing was needed to protect children's constitutional rights.

Another major bill on Ford's desk is one that would let Americans buy and own gold for the first time since the Depression era.

The bill is technically a measure to extend United States participation in the International Development Association. But an amendment was added allowing private dealing in gold.

The bill is of interest particularly to congressmen from states whose gold mines have long since been closed.

Private ownership of gold — except for coin collectors, jewelers and dentists —has been banned since Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration. The ban was one of Roosevelt's moves to fight the Depression.

Proponents of private ownership contend there is no reason now to continue to bar Americans from having gold if they want it.

Other bills awaiting presidential signature or veto are mostly minor. As one of his last actions as president, Nixon vetoed an appropriations bill for the Agriculture Department and some other agencies, saying it was inflationary and contained unworkable programs. It may be altered and reintroduced in Congress soon.

Bolinas-Stinson School District trustees have adopted a $443,476 budget for 1974-75.

Supt. Bernard Barrish said the district cannot estimate its 1974-75 tax rate until it obtains its assessed valuation figures from the county. Last year's tax rate was $2.23 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Included in the tax rate will be a one year 20-cent override tax to finance the down payment on a $117,000 state loan to renovate the administration building at Bolinas School, bringing it up to present earthquake safety standards.

Barrish said that in succeeding years, the loan, which was financed at 4.8 per cent interest, will probably only require a tax override of six or seven cents.

Additionally, the tax rate will include five cents override to expand recreational offerings at the school and improve playgrounds.

The budget includes a 10 per cent salary increase for teachers and a seven per cent wage hike for classified employees.

Sanitary Board

The Almonte Sanitary District board will discuss a proposed plan to share sewer permit allocations in the Mill Valley area at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at district offices at 234 Shoreline Highway.

Senate Republicans Oppose Prosecution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans appear to have concluded that Richard M. Nixon has suffered enough over Watergate and should not be prosecuted.

"A pound of flesh is enough," Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott told reporters yesterday, following a meeting of all GOP senators. "Why should we demand the blood that goes with it.?"

Sen. Norris Cotton, N.H., chairman of the conference of Republican senators, said the "punishment, agony and the disgrace he has undergone is probably the worst punishment there could be."

Their remarks apeared to represent the sentiment of the group, although no formal decision was announced.

A grand jury named Nixon an indicted co-conspirator in the Watergate case after being advised it could not indict a president. It would be up to Special Proseutor Leon Jaworski whether to seek to bring any charges against Nixon. He has indicated no decision on that will be made anytime soon.

In other developments:

—Lawyers for John D. Ehrlichman asked yesterday that the Watergate cover-up trial, set for Sept. 9, be delayed at least two months on grounds that "inflamed passions" and "massive and pervasive publicity" during Nixon's last days in office make finding an impartial jury impossible. Attorneys for co-defendant H.R. Haldeman said they are considering making the same request.

White House lawyers, the last time, reported one of his missing Watergate tapes had been found. They said more than half of another subpoenaed conversation never was recorded because the tape ran out. Both involved talks with key aide Charles W. Colson in early 1973.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic chairman at the time of the Watergate bugging, settled his suit against the Nixon campaign out of court for $400,000. The suit sought damages for the bugging. O'Brien said he would give the money to his party for a campaign "to reenlist the confidence of the American people in our two-party system.

Grand Jury Now Feels Nixon More Indictable

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal grand jury that named former President Richard Nixon as a co-conspirator in the Watergate scandal now believes ixon is "much more indictable" in light of the three new tapes released Monday, the New York Daily News reported today.

The Daily News said the original Watergate grand jury has put Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski "on notice" that Nixon, now a private citizen, must not escape punishment in view of his admitted role in the cover-up.

The Daily News, quoting an unnamed source, said members of the grand jury will probably decide during the next several days whether they actually wnat to indict Nixon.

Nixon Goes Home; Just A Citizen

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard M. Nixon returned to his home in California a private citizen yesterday after bidding an emotional, sometimes tearful farewell to public life as the 37th president of the United States.

Then it was on to California and a warm welcome from some 5,000 supporters who turned out at the El Toro Marine Air Station where the Presidential jet "Spirit of '76" landed. They cheered and sang "God Bless America."

Nixon told the crowd he would "continue to work for peace ... for opportunity and prosperity in this country."

Nixon ceased being President at 11:35 a.m. EDT, when his letter of resignation was handed to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

He was at his desk aboard the presidential jet 13 miles southwest of Jefferson City, Mo., at 39,000 feet when Gerald R. Ford was sworn in as the 38th President three minutes past noon.

One of Nixon's closest friends Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., said Nixon broke down with a group of close friends Thursday night before he went on national television to announce his resignation.

New White House press secretary Jerry TerHorst said Nixon did not pardon himself or grant immunity to anyone before he left office.

Bar Association Head Calls For Nixon Disbarment Examination

HONOLULU (UPI) — Disbarment proceedings should be considered against former President Richard Nixon if he decides to return to the practice of law, the president of the American Bar Association said yesterday.

ABA President Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, Fla., also said it would be appropriate for the California or New York bar associations to take up the issue.

But, Smith said, he doubted Nixon would return to the legal profession.

If Nixon returns to practice, he said, "it would be the appropriate time to take up the question of disbarring him."

Smith, who was in Honolulu for the ABA's annual convention, said that, although the nation should put Watergate in the past, he personally felt Nixon should be called to account for his actions.

"No man is above the law," he told reporters, "and I don't want to let anybody go who has violated the law. But it is for the people to weigh the evidence and determine Mr. Nixon's future."

The president of the California Bar Association announced last month that it would hold a preliminary disciplinary hearing within two months for Nixon and he would be treated "just like any other attorney in the state of California" whose professional conduct had been called into question.

The state bar announced earlier that it was also investigating six other members connected to Watergate — John Ehrlichman, Herbert Kalmbach, Frank De Marco Jr., Robert Mardian, Gordon Strachan and Donald Segretti.

Nixon Retaining Some Ex-Presidential Aides

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard Nixon still has Ronald Ziegler as his news spokesman, and other aides who were with him in the White House.

The members of the former president's staff who flew to Califronia with him yesterday "are going to remain on as long as we are wanted or needed," former Appointments Secretary Stephen Bull said Friday.

Under law, a former president is given a federal expense account to pay for aides, secretaries and other expenses.

Bull and Ziegler left the White House staff with Nixon's departure, and came to California along with several others, including Col. Jack Brennan, a military aide.

Bull said he had no idea how long the former White House staffers would go on working for Nixon. "No one is talking about the long term stuff yet," he said. "We're not even trying to figure out the answers yet. We'll try to figure out the questions first."

Photographic Essays Outline Canadian Parliament Grandeur

By ADA GARFINKEL

The spiritual and temporal grandeur of the Gothic Revival architecture of Canada's Parliament Buildings is shown in a series of photographic essays now on dsiplay in the main floor of the Marin Civic Center.

The exhibit, combining panels of photos from the book "Stones of History" (produced by the National Film Board of Canada and photographed by Chris Lund and Malak of Ottowa) is handsomely mounted.

The photos, both in color and black and white, focus on the carved exteriors characteristic of Gothic architecture and include unusual 360-degree globular and kaleidoscopic views.

Informative placards which accompany the display acquaint one with a good bit of history and procedure. One, for example, proclaims that the elegantly carved "Speaker's Chair" in the House of Commons is an exact replica of the one in Parliament in London, and was made partly from Admiral Nelson's flagship "Victory." Another states that the red velvet throne chairs in the Senate represent the Crown and are used by the Governor-general and his Lady in the absence of the Queen.

Some of the more spectacular shots are of the arched windows and soaring vaulted ceiling, carved book shelves and parquet floors, and the dome of the main library of Parliament.

Others portray the rotunda ceiling of the memorial chamber in the Peace Tower; the gargoyles and shield-bearing lions flanking the outer entrance and its sky-reaching stained-glass windows.

Quite unusual is a softly pink-tinted multiple-shot of the memorial chamber in its entirety — in the round, as it were.

More traditional is a panoramic view of the entire Parliamentary complex standing on a rocky promontory of 29 acres of land overlooking the Ottawa River 150 feet below. One, an enchanting winter scene, transforms the austere formality into a glowing, tawny fairyland.

Other intriguing shots are the close-up view of the "Book of Remembrance" honoring the war dead, parts of ceilings which bear the national symbols of Canada, England, France, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

A series of six behind-the-scenes views show Canada's official stone carver, Eleanor Milne, and her team of craftsmen who continuously clarify the intricate tracery and carvings of the exteriors.

This exhibit, which is sponsored by the Canadian Consulate General, will continue to Aug. 30, and may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

DRAMA REVIEW

Not Much Worth Praising In Sunset Players 'Mame'

By GERALD GENESE

It is difficult to pan the efforts of a relatively new group. But it is equally hard to find anything worthwhile in the newly-formed Sunet Players' production of "Mame" which opened last night at the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

It appears that Edward Decker, director of the company and the show, bit off more than he could chew.

The talent in the company is very thin. Only Decker's youthful enthusiasm would permit him to think he could stage a large musical with people who neither sing nor dance very well.

The Sunset Players is a group of recent San Rafael High School graduates, and a few others, who appear to have little musical or acting experience or training. (This is the players' second production.)

In the play, Mame, is a woman of indominitable will and spirit who — against all odds — fights to keep and raise her nephew. Cece Garrison, who plays Mame, has a pleasant, but not overpowering, voice or presence. She does not really dominate the stage or the play, which she must for the play to work.

The choreography, singing, acting and directing all suffer from a lack of energy and imagination.

It might be better if, Becker selected plays that were commensurate with the talent in the company. He does have something of a nucleus to work with, but he must build and not overreach at this stage in the company's development.

Perhaps he could have acting workshops until the company has gained strength and cohesiveness. It would be advisable, though, for him to move more slowly until he gets a firmer base to work from.

"Mame" will be performed at the High School tonight at 8:30, and August 11, 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Auditions Are Set For French Musical

Auditions for roles in the French 19th Century musical," Italian Straw hat," to be produced by the Big-Little Theater Co., will be held Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club.

James Borgwardt, a director with the amateur theater group, said the production will open in September, with date and place to be announced.

Photographic Essays Outline Canadian Parliament Grandeur

By ADA GARFINKEL

The spiritual and temporal grandeur of the Gothic Revival architecture of Canada's Parliament Buildings is shown in a series of photographic essays now on dsiplay in the main floor of the Marin Civic Center.

The exhibit, combining panels of photos from the book "Stones of History" (produced by the National Film Board of Canada and photographed by Chris Lund and Malak of Ottowa) is handsomely mounted.

The photos, both in color and black and white, focus on the carved exteriors characteristic of Gothic architecture and include unusual 360-degree globular and kaleidoscopic views.

Informative placards which accompany the display acquaint one with a good bit of history and procedure. One, for example, proclaims that the elegantly carved "Speaker's Chair" in the House of Commons is an exact replica of the one in Parliament in London, and was made partly from Admiral Nelson's flagship "Victory." Another states that the red velvet throne chairs in the Senate represent the Crown and are used by the Governor-general and his Lady in the absence of the Queen.

Some of the more spectacular shots are of the arched windows and soaring vaulted ceiling, carved book shelves and parquet floors, and the dome of the main library of Parliament.

Others portray the rotunda ceiling of the memorial chamber in the Peace Tower; the gargoyles and shield-bearing lions flanking the outer entrance and its sky-reaching stained-glass windows.

Quite unusual is a softly pink-tinted multiple-shot of the memorial chamber in its entirety — in the round, as it were.

More traditional is a panoramic view of the entire Parliamentary complex standing on a rocky promontory of 29 acres of land overlooking the Ottawa River 150 feet below. One, an enchanting winter scene, transforms the austere formality into a glowing, tawny fairyland.

Other intriguing shots are the close-up view of the "Book of Remembrance" honoring the war dead, parts of ceilings which bear the national symbols of Canada, England, France, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

A series of six behind-the-scenes views show Canada's official stone carver, Eleanor Milne, and her team of craftsmen who continuously clarify the intricate tracery and carvings of the exteriors.

This exhibit, which is sponsored by the Canadian Consulate General, will continue to Aug. 30, and may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

DRAMA REVIEW

By GERALD GENESE

It is difficult to pan the efforts of a relatively new group. But it is equally hard to find anything worthwhile in the newly-formed Sunet Players' production of "Mame" which opened last night at the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

It appears that Edward Decker, director of the company and the show, bit off more than he could chew.

The talent in the company is very thin. Only Decker's youthful enthusiasm would permit him to think he could stage a large musical with people who neither sing nor dance very well.

The Sunset Players is a group of recent San Rafael High School graduates, and a few others, who appear to have little musical or acting experience or training. (This is the players' second production.)

In the play, Mame, is a woman of indominitable will and spirit who — against all odds — fights to keep and raise her nephew. Cece Garrison, who plays Mame, has a pleasant, but not overpowering, voice or presence. She does not really dominate the stage or the play, which she must for the play to work.

The choreography, singing, acting and directing all suffer from a lack of energy and imagination.

It might be better if, Becker selected plays that were commensurate with the talent in the company. He does have something of a nucleus to work with, but he must build and not overreach at this stage in the company's development.

Perhaps he could have acting workshops until the company has gained strength and cohesiveness. It would be advisable, though, for him to move more slowly until he gets a firmer base to work from.

"Mame" will be performed at the High School tonight at 8:30, and August 11, 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Auditions Are Set For French Musical

Auditions for roles in the French 19th Century musical," Italian Straw hat," to be produced by the Big-Little Theater Co., will be held Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club.

James Borgwardt, a director with the amateur theater group, said the production will open in September, with date and place to be announced.

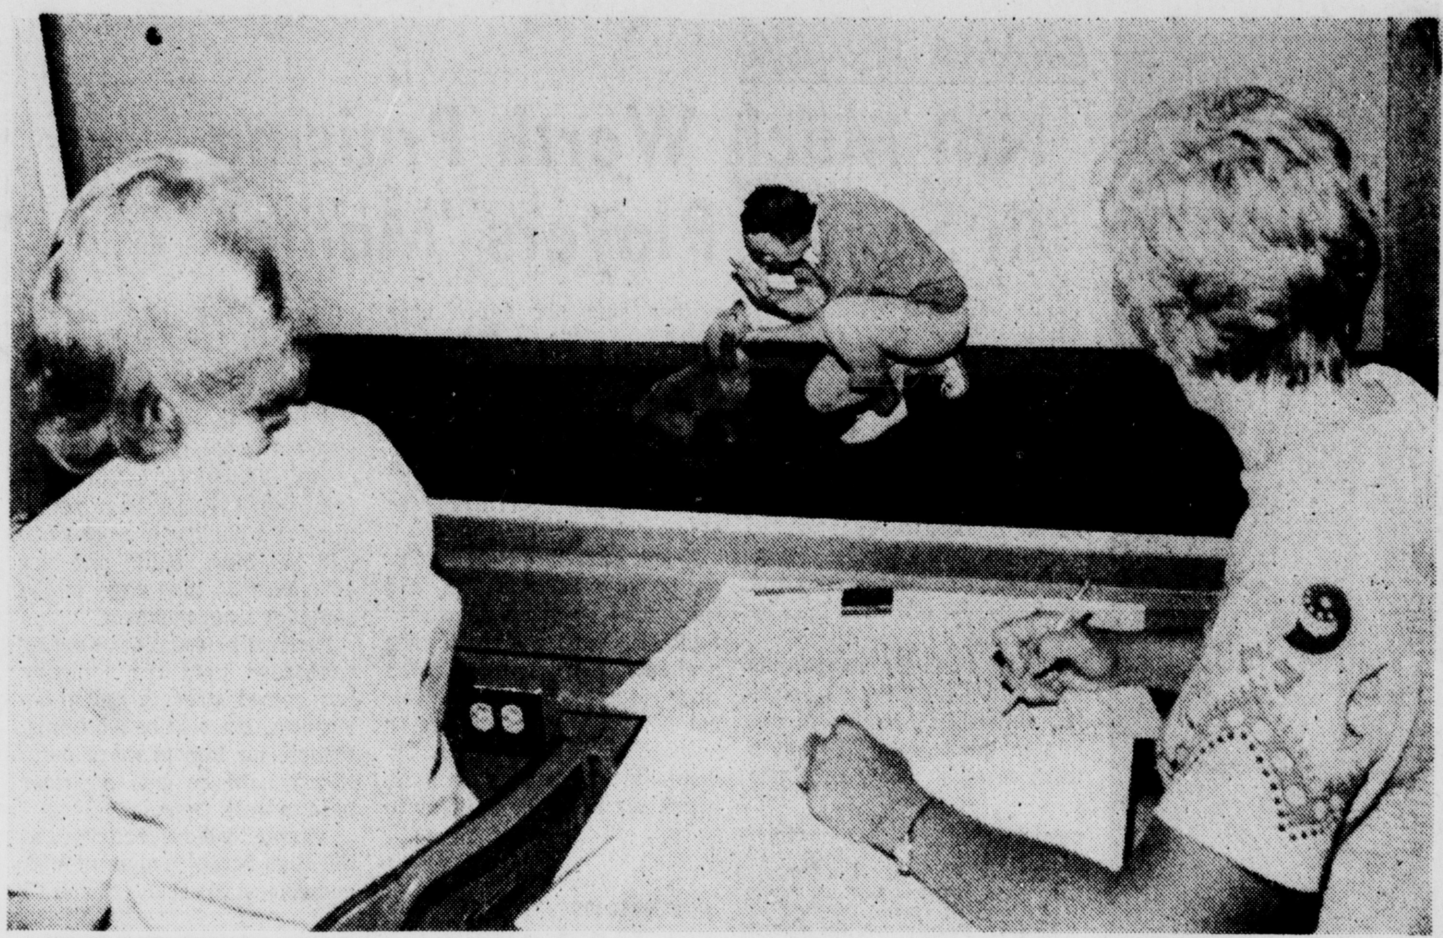
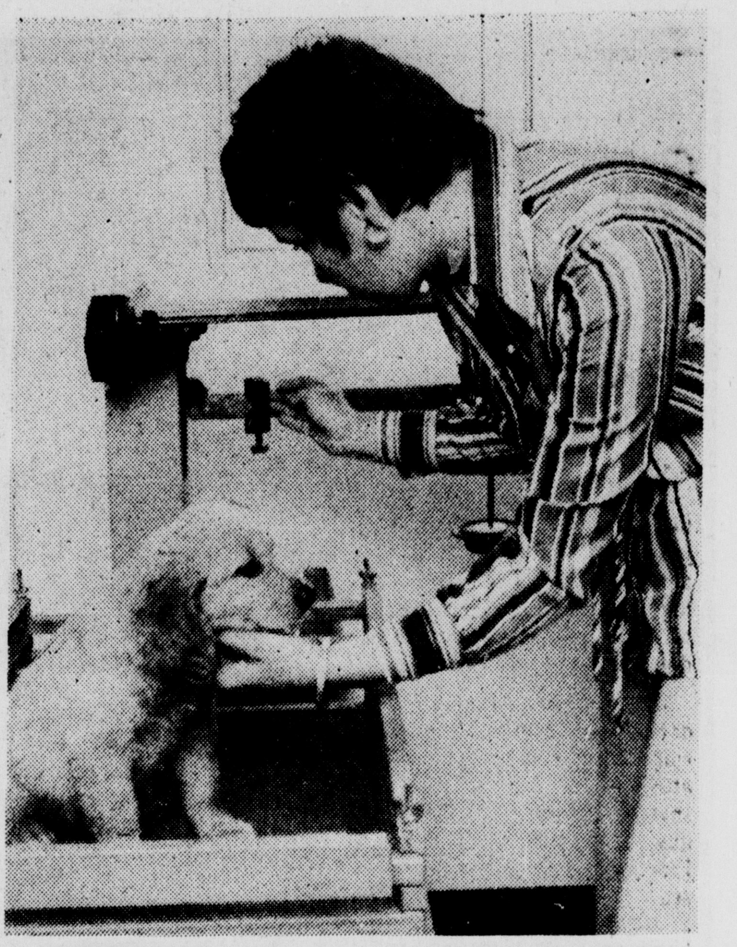
Marin Women

HMM, THAT'S a long drop, Alfred seems to be thinking as volunteer Peggy ter Laare watches her charge's downward trip on the first leg of "puppy testing" day at Guide Dogs for the Blind.



WITH PENCIL IN hand, volunteer graders Evelyn Hoffman (left) and Ellen Casey watch closely to see if Alfred responds to commands from Emilie Stamm.



KEEPING HIM steady as she adjusts the scale, Bernice Irwin passes Alfred through the final phase of the 20-minute testing program. Here he is checked to see if he is growing and developing properly.

FIVE WEEKS OF EXAMS

Testing Leads To Guide Dog Selection

By KAREN PETERSON

"C'mon baby," murmured puppy trainer Peggy ter Laare of Woodacre as she led the romping 8-week-old Golden Retriever up the stairs. "This guy is gonna like stairs like I don't know what."

This is the third Thursday that Mrs. ter Laare has worked with her charge. He and the rest of his puppy friends are going through a five-week "puppy testing" program staffed by volunteers at Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

TWENTY-EIGHT WOMEN volunteers staff the once-a-week, year-long program, spending two to three hours evaluating the personality, intelligence, motor reactions and determination of these potential graduates of the school's kennels.

Mini-sized barking echoes down the hall of the kennel as the women pick up their assigned pups, each identified by ingenious patch cuttings on his (or her) fur. At 10 a.m., everyone is gathered to begin the morning's activities.

Alfred (as we dubbed him) was led out of his cage by Mrs. ter Laare, a volunteer since 1972. While he romped through the series of tests, she and the other volunteers were keeping a close eye on his behavior. They're determining if the dogs will ultimately become future guide dogs.

AS HIS CHUBBY little legs ran to keep up, Mrs. ter Laare noted that he has "been heeling all along." He's very responsive and very sweet."

Next he struggled joyfully to the top and back down the makeshift stairs, his only hindrance his short legs. "A lot of small puppies are afraid of stairs," explained program supervisor Fred Maynard.

He walked easily across the facsimile of a city street grating; if he balks at this task, it could mean rejection from his future career.

Next, he went indoors where Emilie Stamm of San Francisco commanded him to sit, come, and fetch. "That's a real good boy," she said as Alfred sat. "You're something else," she complimented as he ran to her with tail wagging.

WHEN HE POUNCED on the bright orange ball and returned it to his tester, the two women sitting behind the glass partition gave Alfred an "above average" rating.

He got all threes and fours, said grader Evelyn Hoffman of San Rafael, a volunteer since 1964. Sometimes, added supervisor of volunteers, MoZelle Zimmer, puppies start testing their testers after the third week. "(They) see if we really mean it," she said, "with their eyes looking at us all the time."

Miss Stamm, who has been a volunteer for 22 years, said she just watches the puppies to see if they're "willing, stubborn or playful."

FROM THERE, Alfred went outside again where nine women graded him on temperament, intelligence, hearing and body movements. They checked his hearing with blasts of a horn, buzzer and chimes; then watched as two loud gun blasts sounded, an indication as to how he will react to the noises of the "outside" world.

The gun blasts didn't bother Alfred, who continued his sniffing adventure around the judging area. He also played with his image in the mirror, an indication, said Mrs. Zimmer, of intelligence.

HIS LAST STOP was the weighing and measuring room where volunteers Bernice Irwin of Kentfield and Celine Kelly of San Rafael checked to see if he was growing and developing properly. Alfred's weight checked in at nine pounds.

As Alfred was escorted lovingly to his cage after the 20-minute day with the volunteers, Mrs. Zimmer nodded that he "had been very good" during this week's testing. If he makes it, he'll spend a year at home with a 4-H member, a year of training at Guide Dogs and then a month with his new owner before starting his career of devoted service.

"We love them all," said Mrs. Zimmer of the puppies. "We all want to pat and kiss them" all the time.

If you're interested in the program, it may be a while before an opening comes up. There's a long waiting list and Mrs. Zimmer, who has been there since 1953, said the "girls just don't quit."

IT'S ALL OVER until next Thursday when once again the women volunteers will urge their pupils through the tests that may someday mean a diploma as a full-fledged guide dog. (Photos by Ty Barbour)

THE LAST WORD

If The I-J Women's Section Changes, What Should It Be?

By BETH ASHLEY

A woman walked by the door of the women's department last week, escorting a group of CampFire Girls on tour of the I-J plant.

"I hope you're going to stop writing about all those weddings," she said. "Write about what women are really doing."

The women's department staff, thirsting to write tomes of major significance, waved and commented assent.

"Right on," we said.

But as news writers we knew: what women are really doing — some of them anyway, judging from the items that cross our desk — is having weddings.

And the I-J, as a local newspaper, should print their news.

HER COMMENT opened up continuing thoughts about just what this department should print. Should there be a women's section at all?

There's a school of thought that says a women's section is an insult to women. It implies that women aren't interested in general news elsewhere in the paper. It says to men: skip these pages, there's nothing in stories about women's interests that you should read.

"In these days of women's lib," one reader wrote, "shouldn't you be called the Person Editor? Of the Person's Pages?

NEWSPAPERS throughout the country are wrestling with this question. Big city papers, almost wholesale, have abandoned such titles as "Women's Pages" and "Society."

What have they come up with? The answer is, "Er — nothing, really." There's "Style" (Washington Post), "View" (Los Angeles Times), "Scene" (San Francisco Examiner). There's "Tempo," and "Family" and "People." The New York Times has an unobtrusive line at the top of its non-news pages that says "family food fashions furnishings."

And in these sections are features, mostly about people, but sometimes about consumerism, home furnishings, health tips, recipes, fashions (men and women's), advice to the lovelorn and how to raise the biggest zucchinis.

ARE THESE PROPER fixtures for a newspaper? Do only women care about prices and cooking, gardening and a happy love life? If you decide these features are of interest to both sexes, what do you call your page?

The way we see it, in a newspaper like the I-J, the newsworthy things local women are doing should be reported. The things local women are interested in should be examined. The things women are doing elsewhere should also be explored — if there's relevance, or useful information, or amusement to be gleaned.

MOST NEWS HAS been desexed, and the best features are those which address common human concerns and pastimes. Maybe men's news, too, should be on the "women's" pages.

Just when we consider doing away with a regular fixture of this section — a crochet pattern, for instance — in comes a report that the crochet pattern is extremely high in reader response.

The overriding purpose of these pages is to print what interests our readers.

Maybe one day soon we'll abandon the name "Marin Women." Probably we'll shift the story emphasis a bit, change columnists here and there.

But what'll we call it? And what kind of stories would you like to see?

Skilled Workers Project Slated

The U.S. Office of Education has awarded a half-million dollar project grant to the American Home Economics Association to create and coordinate a training and employment system that "ultimately will enhance the image and salary of the whole pool of workers who use home-related skills in their jobs."

According to Dr. Doris Hanson, executive director of AHEA, the primary objective of the project is to develop and validate a nationally-standardized system of curriculum modules which will certify workers as "skilled" rather than "unskilled," provide logical avenues for career advancement and mobility, upgrade the quality of human services and bring dignity and self-respect to the human service workers.

Annual 'Vintage Sound' Concert Set At Masson

The third annual Paul Masson "Vintage Sounds" concerts beginning Sept. 7 will benefit Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

The four concerts will be held each Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the vineyard in Saratoga. Artists to appear are the George Shearing Trio, Sept. 7 and 8; "Sonny" Terry and Brownie McGhee, Sept. 14 and 15; Oscar Brown Jr., Sept. 21 and 22, and Dizzy Gillespie with the Vernon Alley Trio, Sept. 28 and 29.

Also appearing during the concerts will be Simon, Tressa Lewis, a blues and jazz singer with the Vernon Alley Trio; John Thomas, folk singer and guitarist and Karlos and Nyomi.

Dean M. Jennings, executive producer of the jazz and folk rock series said the concerts netted $1740 in 1972 for replacement of the birds at the Lagoon at the San Francisco Palace of Fine Arts and in 1973 it netted $2500 for the Bay Area Sickle Cell Anemia research organization, S.C.A.R.E.

Couple Wed In Novato Church Rite

Patricia Mary Swensen and Paul Arthur Pedroli, both of Novato, were married last week at St. Anthony of Padua Church in Novato.

Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle D. Swensen, was attended by Laura Keenan of Greenbrae as maid of honor.

Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pedroli. His brother is Brian Pedroli, who served as best man, and his sister is Patsy Green of Novato.

Paul's ushers were Greg Noonan and Mike Allen, also of Novato.

A reception was held at Marin Country Club. The bridal pair is visiting Oahu and Maui before returning to Novato to live.

An employee of Wells Fargo Bank in Novato, Patricia attended Ursuline High School in Santa Rosa and College of Marin. She has two sisters, Dorothy Varellas of San Francisco and Linda Burdusis of Pleasanton.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Novato High School and is employed by Automatic Tube Co. in San Rafael.

"C'mon baby," murmured puppy trainer Peggy ter Laare of Woodacre as she led the romping 8-week-old Golden Retriever up the stairs. "This guy is gonna like stairs like I don't know what."

This is the third Thursday that Mrs. ter Laare has worked with her charge. He and the rest of his puppy friends are going through a five-week "puppy testing" program staffed by volunteers at Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

TWENTY-EIGHT WOMEN volunteers staff the once-a-week, year-long program, spending two to three hours evaluating the personality, intelligence, motor reactions and determination of these potential graduates of the school's kennels.

Mini-sized barking echoes down the hall of the kennel as the women pick up their assigned pups, each identified by ingenious patch cuttings on his (or her) fur. At 10 a.m., everyone is gathered to begin the morning's activities.

Alfred (as we dubbed him) was led out of his cage by Mrs. ter Laare, a volunteer since 1972. While he romped through the series of tests, she and the other volunteers were keeping a close eye on his behavior. They're determining if the dogs will ultimately become future guide dogs.

AS HIS CHUBBY little legs ran to keep up, Mrs. ter Laare noted that he has "been heeling all along." He's very responsive and very sweet."

Next he struggled joyfully to the top and back down the makeshift stairs, his only hindrance his short legs. "A lot of small puppies are afraid of stairs," explained program supervisor Fred Maynard.

He walked easily across the facsimile of a city street grating; if he balks at this task, it could mean rejection from his future career.

Next, he went indoors where Emilie Stamm of San Francisco commanded him to sit, come, and fetch. "That's a real good boy," she said as Alfred sat. "You're something else," she complimented as he ran to her with tail wagging.

WHEN HE POUNCED on the bright orange ball and returned it to his tester, the two women sitting behind the glass partition gave Alfred an "above average" rating.

He got all threes and fours, said grader Evelyn Hoffman of San Rafael, a volunteer since 1964. Sometimes, added supervisor of volunteers, MoZelle Zimmer, puppies start testing their testers after the third week. "(They) see if we really mean it," she said, "with their eyes looking at us all the time."

Miss Stamm, who has been a volunteer for 22 years, said she just watches the puppies to see if they're "willing, stubborn or playful."

FROM THERE, Alfred went outside again where nine women graded him on temperament, intelligence, hearing and body movements. They checked his hearing with blasts of a horn, buzzer and chimes; then watched as two loud gun blasts sounded, an indication as to how he will react to the noises of the "outside" world.

The gun blasts didn't bother Alfred, who continued his sniffing adventure around the judging area. He also played with his image in the mirror, an indication, said Mrs. Zimmer, of intelligence.

HIS LAST STOP was the weighing and measuring room where volunteers Bernice Irwin of Kentfield and Celine Kelly of San Rafael checked to see if he was growing and developing properly. Alfred's weight checked in at nine pounds.

As Alfred was escorted lovingly to his cage after the 20-minute day with the volunteers, Mrs. Zimmer nodded that he "had been very good" during this week's testing. If he makes it, he'll spend a year at home with a 4-H member, a year of training at Guide Dogs and then a month with his new owner before starting his career of devoted service.

"We love them all," said Mrs. Zimmer of the puppies. "We all want to pat and kiss them" all the time.

If you're interested in the program, it may be a while before an opening comes up. There's a long waiting list and Mrs. Zimmer, who has been there since 1953, said the "girls just don't quit."

IT'S ALL OVER until next Thursday when once again the women volunteers will urge their pupils through the tests that may someday mean a diploma as a full-fledged guide dog. (Photos by Ty Barbour)

FEELING A LITTLE perplexed, Alfred is held by Celine Kelly of San Rafael while Bernice Irwin of Kentfield shaves a little fur from his right shoulder. That identifies him as the second male of the litter.

If The I-J Women's Section Changes, What Should It Be?

By BETH ASHLEY

A woman walked by the door of the women's department last week, escorting a group of CampFire Girls on tour of the I-J plant.

"I hope you're going to stop writing about all those weddings," she said. "Write about what women are really doing."

The women's department staff, thirsting to write tomes of major significance, waved and commented assent.

"Right on," we said.

But as news writers we knew: what women are really doing — some of them anyway, judging from the items that cross our desk — is having weddings.

And the I-J, as a local newspaper, should print their news.

HER COMMENT opened up continuing thoughts about just what this department should print. Should there be a women's section at all?

There's a school of thought that says a women's section is an insult to women. It implies that women aren't interested in general news elsewhere in the paper. It says to men: skip these pages, there's nothing in stories about women's interests that you should read.

"In these days of women's lib," one reader wrote, "shouldn't you be called the Person Editor? Of the Person's Pages?

NEWSPAPERS throughout the country are wrestling with this question. Big city papers, almost wholesale, have abandoned such titles as "Women's Pages" and "Society."

What have they come up with? The answer is, "Er — nothing, really." There's "Style" (Washington Post), "View" (Los Angeles Times), "Scene" (San Francisco Examiner). There's "Tempo," and "Family" and "People." The New York Times has an unobtrusive line at the top of its non-news pages that says "family food fashions furnishings."

And in these sections are features, mostly about people, but sometimes about consumerism, home furnishings, health tips, recipes, fashions (men and women's), advice to the lovelorn and how to raise the biggest zucchinis.

ARE THESE PROPER fixtures for a newspaper? Do only women care about prices and cooking, gardening and a happy love life? If you decide these features are of interest to both sexes, what do you call your page?

The way we see it, in a newspaper like the I-J, the newsworthy things local women are doing should be reported. The things local women are interested in should be examined. The things women are doing elsewhere should also be explored — if there's relevance, or useful information, or amusement to be gleaned.

MOST NEWS HAS been desexed, and the best features are those which address common human concerns and pastimes. Maybe men's news, too, should be on the "women's" pages.

Just when we consider doing away with a regular fixture of this section — a crochet pattern, for instance — in comes a report that the crochet pattern is extremely high in reader response.

The overriding purpose of these pages is to print what interests our readers.

Maybe one day soon we'll abandon the name "Marin Women." Probably we'll shift the story emphasis a bit, change columnists here and there.

But what'll we call it? And what kind of stories would you like to see?

Skilled Workers Project Slated

The U.S. Office of Education has awarded a half-million dollar project grant to the American Home Economics Association to create and coordinate a training and employment system that "ultimately will enhance the image and salary of the whole pool of workers who use home-related skills in their jobs."

According to Dr. Doris Hanson, executive director of AHEA, the primary objective of the project is to develop and validate a nationally-standardized system of curriculum modules which will certify workers as "skilled" rather than "unskilled," provide logical avenues for career advancement and mobility, upgrade the quality of human services and bring dignity and self-respect to the human service workers.

The AHEA project represents the first single program to be implemented on a national scale.

Paul's ushers were Greg Noonan and Mike Allen, also of Novato.

A reception was held at Marin Country Club. The bridal pair is visiting Oahu and Maui before returning to Novato to live.

An employee of Wells Fargo Bank in Novato, Patricia attended Ursuline High School in Santa Rosa and College of Marin. She has two sisters, Dorothy Varellas of San Francisco and Linda Burdusis of Pleasanton.

Annual 'Vintage Sound' Concert Set At Masson

The third annual Paul Masson "Vintage Sounds" concerts beginning Sept. 7 will benefit Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

The four concerts will be held each Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the vineyard in Saratoga. Artists to appear are the George Shearing Trio, Sept. 7 and 8; "Sonny" Terry and Brownie McGhee, Sept. 14 and 15; Oscar Brown Jr., Sept. 21 and 22, and Dizzy Gillespie with the Vernon Alley Trio, Sept. 28 and 29.

Also appearing during the concerts will be Simon, Tressa Lewis, a blues and jazz singer with the Vernon Alley Trio; John Thomas, folk singer and guitarist and Karlos and Nyomi.

SEW SIMPLE

Eliminating Seam Is Unwise

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate

DEAR EUNICE,

I am in the process of making bridesmaids' dresses for my daughter's wedding. They have selected rather simple patterns, but there is a seam directly down the center front of the dress. Perhaps it won't be as noticeable as I imagine. However, with your approval, I would like to eliminate this seam altogether. Would I be wrong doing this? — MRS. S.K.

DEAR MRS. S.K.

There are several reasons why there would be a seam at the center front of a garment. First, perhaps the fabric was not wide enough to cut without the seam. Skirts have so much more fullness today than with the simple A-line dresses, that depending on the width of the fabric, perhaps a seam is necessary.

I have found, too, that when there is a seam at the center front, it is usually shaped. Sometimes it is indented slightly at the waist, giving it a closer fit to the body and very often it is flared out at the hemline to help achieve the slightly wider and more flowing skirt.

I think you will normally find more garments with seams at the center front if they are cut without a waistline seam. When a waistline seam is cut into the pattern, there are other ways of gaining bodice fit and flare at the hem.

I think you will also find that the seam will not be noticed and because of the cut of the garment you would be unwise to eliminate it.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have my closet filled with shirtwaist dresses and I must admit, I do love them. They are flattering and feminine to everyone. My pet peeve in blouses and dresses is the vertical buttonholes. They simply will not stay buttoned and I think I am speaking for everyone in the world who has a shirt or shirtwaist which has those vertical buttonholes (there ought to be a law against them). Why can't they be made horizontal like they are on every other type garment? — MRS. M.T.

DEAR MRS. M.T.:

This is a very common complaint in women's clothes. Guess the men don't complain because their shirts are fitted so loosely (they wouldn't put up with such a thing if they had the same trouble we do).

The reason for the vertical buttonholes is the design of the garment, where there is a front band or plastron and the buttonholes are centered on this band. There is no way you could use a horizontal buttonhole and have your button end up at the center of the band, without the buttonhole extending off the band completely.

If you are large in the bustline, this is an extra problem because there would be more strain on this area and I can see that the buttons would be constantly open.

I would suggest you find a blouse or a dress pattern which has a shirt look. Instead of a separate band at the front, you will find a standard closing without this separate piece of fabric. The appearance will be almost the same, however it won't have quite the same tailored look.

If your pattern doesn't have the separate band for the front closing, you may make your buttonholes in the horizontal position just as you would on coats and suits. Anything to make a garment more comfortable can also make it a "winner."

DEAR EUNICE,

I need help with cording. I am making a bedspread with boxed corners. When I apply the cording to one side of the fabric it looks smooth, but when I join the second piece of fabric it is never flat and the stitching isn't close enough to the cording. Please help. — VIRGINIA P.

DEAR VIRGINIA P.

The cording should be applied the same, whether you are making pillows, spreads, or a garment for yourself. If you follow the instructions carefully, you should have perfect results every time.

Cording should be covered with the same fabric as your spread, or a contrast if desired; however, it must be cut on the bias. Be sure when stitching it close to the cording that you keep the bias even or you will end up with diagonal wrinkles.

Cut the excess fabric from the covered cord to a seam allowance of 5/8 inch. Place the cording on one section of the spread (or one section of your garment), keeping the cut edges of the seam extension of the bias even with the cut edge of the garment. Pin or baste in place and machine stitch on the same stitching you had on the cording.

It is a good idea to use the cording or zipper foot for this so that you can get very close to the cord itself. This stitching will later be your guide stitching for the final steps, so be sure it is accurate.

Lastly, place the second section of your spread (or garment) over the first, right sides together, with the seam extending. Pin from the side where you can already see a row of machine stitching where you stitched the cording to the first section.

The final step is to machine stitch over your first stitching. Again, be sure to use the cording foot. If your stitching is accurate, you should have beautiful results, with no guesswork involved.

For your informative booklet on sleeves, send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902. Ask for "All About Sleeves."

This friend didn't die a normal death. He was killed on a motorcycle when a motorist didn't see him coming after he (the motorist) ran a stop sign.

At the funeral, the friends who cried were comforted by the others. Charlie left us, but we will always remember all the good times we shared.

Yes, there are good times, bad times, happy and sad times shared with friends but without them, there is nothing. — JOYCE

SEW SIMPLE

Eliminating Seam Is Unwise

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate

DEAR EUNICE,

I am in the process of making bridesmaids' dresses for my daughter's wedding. They have selected rather simple patterns, but there is a seam directly down the center front of the dress. Perhaps it won't be as noticeable as I imagine. However, with your approval, I would like to eliminate this seam altogether. Would I be wrong doing this? — MRS. S.K.

DEAR MRS. S.K.

There are several reasons why there would be a seam at the center front of a garment. First, perhaps the fabric was not wide enough to cut without the seam. Skirts have so much more fullness today than with the simple A-line dresses, that depending on the width of the fabric, perhaps a seam is necessary.

I have found, too, that when there is a seam at the center front, it is usually shaped. Sometimes it is indented slightly at the waist, giving it a closer fit to the body and very often it is flared out at the hemline to help achieve the slightly wider and more flowing skirt.

I think you will normally find more garments with seams at the center front if they are cut without a waistline seam. When a waistline seam is cut into the pattern, there are other ways of gaining bodice fit and flare at the hem.

I think you will also find that the seam will not be noticed and because of the cut of the garment you would be unwise to eliminate it.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have my closet filled with shirtwaist dresses and I must admit, I do love them. They are flattering and feminine to everyone. My pet peeve in blouses and dresses is the vertical buttonholes. They simply will not stay buttoned and I think I am speaking for everyone in the world who has a shirt or shirtwaist which has those vertical buttonholes (there ought to be a law against them). Why can't they be made horizontal like they are on every other type garment? — MRS. M.T.

DEAR MRS. M.T.:

This is a very common complaint in women's clothes. Guess the men don't complain because their shirts are fitted so loosely (they wouldn't put up with such a thing if they had the same trouble we do).

The reason for the vertical buttonholes is the design of the garment, where there is a front band or plastron and the buttonholes are centered on this band. There is no way you could use a horizontal buttonhole and have your button end up at the center of the band, without the buttonhole extending off the band completely.

If you are large in the bustline, this is an extra problem because there would be more strain on this area and I can see that the buttons would be constantly open.

I would suggest you find a blouse or a dress pattern which has a shirt look. Instead of a separate band at the front, you will find a standard closing without this separate piece of fabric. The appearance will be almost the same, however it won't have quite the same tailored look.

If your pattern doesn't have the separate band for the front closing, you may make your buttonholes in the horizontal position just as you would on coats and suits. Anything to make a garment more comfortable can also make it a "winner."

DEAR EUNICE,

I need help with cording. I am making a bedspread with boxed corners. When I apply the cording to one side of the fabric it looks smooth, but when I join the second piece of fabric it is never flat and the stitching isn't close enough to the cording. Please help. — VIRGINIA P.

DEAR VIRGINIA P.

The cording should be applied the same, whether you are making pillows, spreads, or a garment for yourself. If you follow the instructions carefully, you should have perfect results every time.

Cording should be covered with the same fabric as your spread, or a contrast if desired; however, it must be cut on the bias. Be sure when stitching it close to the cording that you keep the bias even or you will end up with diagonal wrinkles.

Cut the excess fabric from the covered cord to a seam allowance of 5/8 inch. Place the cording on one section of the spread (or one section of your garment), keeping the cut edges of the seam extension of the bias even with the cut edge of the garment. Pin or baste in place and machine stitch on the same stitching you had on the cording.

It is a good idea to use the cording or zipper foot for this so that you can get very close to the cord itself. This stitching will later be your guide stitching for the final steps, so be sure it is accurate.

Lastly, place the second section of your spread (or garment) over the first, right sides together, with the seam extending. Pin from the side where you can already see a row of machine stitching where you stitched the cording to the first section.

The final step is to machine stitch over your first stitching. Again, be sure to use the cording foot. If your stitching is accurate, you should have beautiful results, with no guesswork involved.

For your informative booklet on sleeves, send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902. Ask for "All About Sleeves."

Mill Valley Man Dreams Of Glory In Yo-Yo World

By MARC LITTMAN

Steven A. Ball arched his wrist and a spinning yellow yo-yo eased back into his hand.

He spread his fingers and the small plastic globe sprang from his grip and quickly grew taut at the end of its four-foot string. It dropped to the ground them skipped lightly along the sidewalk for several seconds before Ball drew it back, apparently effortlessly.

It wasn't as easy as it looked.

"That yo-yo is traveling at speeds of up to 180 miles per hour. Sometimes you can't even see it," Ball said as he practiced in front of his Organic Hair Care Center in Mill Valley.

He cocked his wrist again and the yo-yo swung out and wrapped itself twice around both his arms, the spinning disc suspended.

Ball was silent as he gazed intently at the twirling yo-yo, oblivious to the steady stream of people — mostly children with eyes full of admiration — who passed by.

One elderly woman stopped to ask how long it had taken him to become so accomplished.

"I'm 32 now and I've been playing with yo-yos since I was seven years old," Ball answered as he launched into another trick.

He became serious about the sport two years ago while recuperating from a back injury.

A trim, muscular man, he said he first mastered the 10 basic tricks outlined in a Duncan Yo-Yo book from "walking the dog" to "double or nothing" and then began to improvise.

"It's crative, playing with yo-yos," he said. "It's a kinetic brain exercise that balances the mind."

He was fortunate to be able to train "with an expert." John Garber, a former supervisor for the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department. "But an expert will only show you a trick once and that's it," Ball said.

For the past year and a half, he's been practicing three hours a day during the summer and five hours a day in the winter.

Ball, whose beauty salon has been written up in magazines such as Redbook and McCall's for introducing the use of herbs to the cosmetology industry, said he's occasionally driven away customers by his daily practice in the shop.

"Some people are afraid the thing's going to fly off the end and hit them," he said.

The amiable Mill Valley resident — who is single — is a familiar figure to the operators of a local drug store where he regularly buys four new Duncan yo-yos a week, along with 14 packages of strings.

"The centrifugal force just blows a yo-yo apart," Ball. (who never goes anywhere without one) explained.

Ball recalled that when he was a child living in Los Angeles, representatives of Duncan Yo-Yo Co. would come to a neighborhood park and perform tricks and pass out autographed photographs.

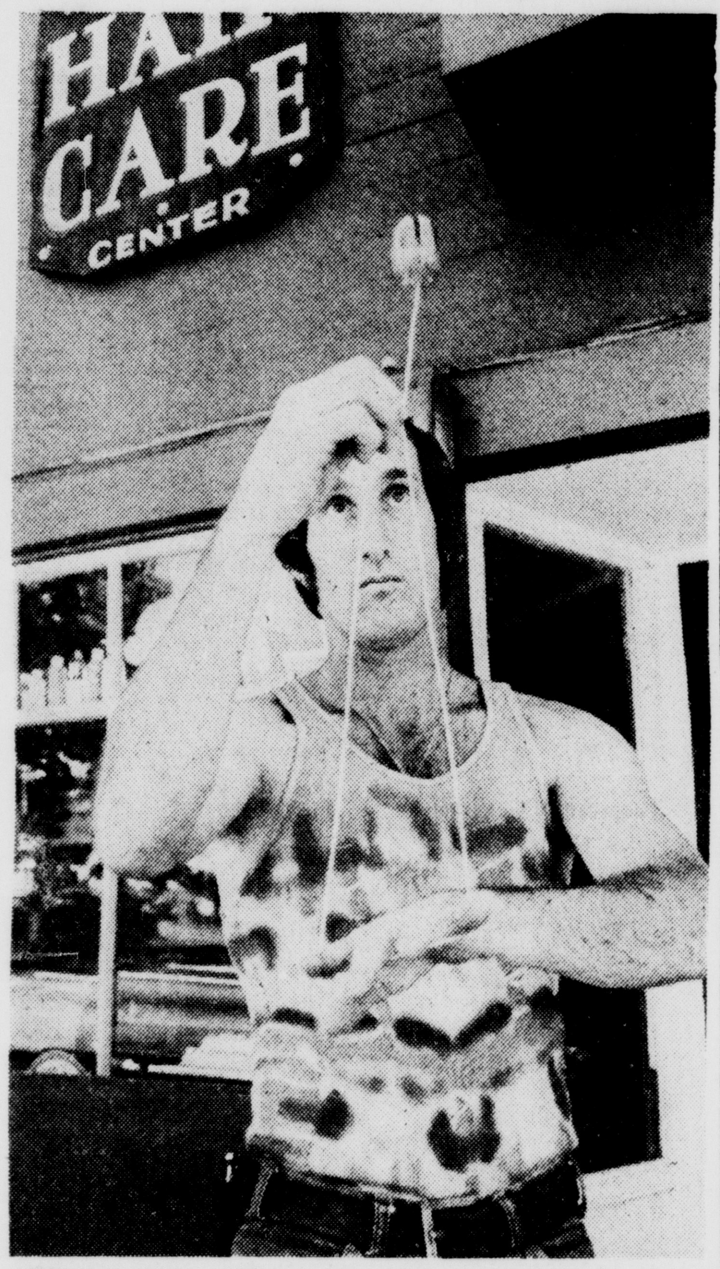
He has dreams of becoming a demonstrator for Duncan since he loves being around children. (He's judged yo-yo tournaments in Mill Valley although he has never entered a competition.)

"I wrote Duncan a letter of application (for the demonstrator's job) but they just sent me back some strings," Ball said.

But he hasn't given up.

"There's no great rush. I'm not ready now and maybe they're keeping their eye on me," Ball said, concentrating on another difficult trick.

"But just wait a couple years. I'm going to be the Evel Knievel of the yo-yo world."



YO-YO MAN — Steven A. Ball, 32, practices yo-yo tricks in front of his Organic Hair Care Center in Mill Valley. Ball aspires to be the "Evel Knievel of the yo-yo world" in a couple of years.

Westrum Not Man For Job

"They say that Adversity is a better teacher than prosperity." With these words Giant manager Wes Westrum opened his post game comments Tuesday night.

The Giants had just completed the second game of a two-game series with Houston. In this short series, the Giants pitching staff had somehow managed to give up 37 hits. Two games: 37 hits!

WES WESTRUM is a fine person. He is softspoken and friendly. He is honestly concerned about the individual feelings of his players. For all of the above reasons he is not the man to manage the San Francisco Giants.

I have a feeling, and that's all it is, that Westrum has not been signed to a contract to manage next year. I think that Horace Stoneham's announcement that Westrum would be back was simply made to keep the press off his and Wes' backs. I think that Wes will quietly step down at the end of the year and that a new manager will be named.

IF MY SPECULATION proves to be correct then the question of choice of manager once again pops up. Frank Luchessi third base coach for the Texas Rangers, had been mentioned as a possible choice when Charlie Fox was on his way out. Luchessi is a North Beach San Franciscan. He briefly managed the Philadelphia Phillies. He is very popular and well respected by the players at Texas. They were disappointed to learn that Westrum had apparently been extended through next year. They wanted Frank to get the job.

I talked briefly to Frank Luchessi about the Giant managing job. I mentioned to him that he had been prominently mentioned in the San Francisco press. Luchessi replied that he was aware that his name had been brought up but that he hadn't talked to the Giants. We talked about the City and as the conversation broke up he said that "something might still happen." Very interesting.

Let's get back to Wes Westrum and this year. He is extremely surprised at the way some of the Giants are playing. He said, "I'd been led to believe that these guys could play." I asked if he felt he'd been given bad information or that the players had been rushed along. He thought that a little of both had happened. He said, "When I came up here I had some definite ideas about the team. Very little has happened to change my earlier opinions."

WES WOULDN'T single out anyone for special criticism because he didn't feel it would benefit the situation. He did say that trades would be made and that a number of players would be brought up from the minor leagues at the end of this year. He felt that, "Maybe that will wake somebody up."

For someone to be woken up, they must first be asleep. Wes Westrum may have inadvertently touched on the major problem. It's going to take a very strong-minded person to come in and arouse the sleeping Giants.

Schlee Talking His Way To PGA Title

Confident Leader Is Stroke Up

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — A one stroke lead at the halfway stage of a tournament can hardly be considered decisive. It's even less so in one of the big-four championships, but John Schlee appears to be talking his way to the PGA title.

In the locker room the players kid the 35-year-old Texan about his love of astrology. They may live to regret the fact they did not take him seriously.

Schlee shot a 67 yesterday to go with his opening 68 for a 36-hole total of 135, five-under-par, and a one-stroke lead over Hubie Green, winner of three tourneys this term and over $160,000 in winnings. Green shot a 68.

"My signs are in the right alignment," Schlee has insisted all week. He's helped the signs by keeping the ball on the fairway and making the putts he's supposed to make.

As defending champion Jack Nicklaus said, "to shoot 135 here this week is tremendous golf."

Nicklaus spoke before Gary Player, his great friend and rival, went out on the course to tie the tournament record, held by Nicklaus and Bobby Nichols, with a six-under-par 64.

The 64, which included a run of six birdies in seven holes from the eighth, left Player, winner of the Masters and British Open earlier this year, tied with South African countryman, Bobby Cole, on 137. Cole shot a 68 yesterday.

A further stroke back stood Nicklaus, following his second straight 69, with Lee Trevino alone on 139 after a 66 yesterday which was the tournament low until Player began his hot streak.

(UPI Telephoto)

Schlee said you have to be lucky to win a championship. He was lucky Friday. He completed his round yesterday heavy rain forced a 45-minute postponement in play.

When he needed a stroke of genius to get out of trouble he pulled it out. At the ninth he was on the edge of the green, some 80-feet from the cup. He chipped in. Birdie!

But Green, disqualified in the third round of last year's PGA at Canterbury for handing in an incorrect scorecard, was not about to be upstaged.

After the rain delay, with his ball resting in casual water, he came up with a 25-foot birdie putt, his fourth, to put himself back on course after making successive bogeys at the 12th and 13th just as the heavens opened up.

"I don't like playing in the rain. I prefer not to play in the rain," said Green.

Player, a two-time winner of the tournament, had a similarly inspired run en route to his second Masters title last April.

"I've had several such runs," Player said of his birdie barrage, but he was disappointed about his bogey on No. 17 which cost him the outright tournament record. "I'd have liked that record," said the man who has won 99 tournaments in 22-years of globetrotting.

Player fashioned his round with accurate iron play and dead-eye putting. He canned putts ranging from 25 to just 2 feet for his birds.

Nicklaus was upset even before he arrived at the first tee. His caddie complained of "tired feet" and failed to show and Jack had to go out with a new man. He started with a bogey, made another at the fifth, but then got his game under control and made three birdies to post his second straight 69.

Cole, who has played in the shadow of Player all his young golfing life, missed eight fairways, but recovered well enough to post his two-under 68.

Seventy eight players with scores of 149 or better made the cut, but Tom Weiskopf was not one of them.

Boston's Mastery Over A's Is Mystifying

OAKLAND (UPI) — Vida Blue, whose non-heart attack earlier in the week had everyone except the star lefthander hitting the panic button, trys to get the Oakland A's straightened out today against the one ball club they haven't beaten—the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox, behind Bill Lee's clutch pitching in the face of four Boston errors, defeated the A's 6-2 last night and now hold a 6-1 season's edge on the defending World Champions, whom they may face in the American League playoffs.

Blue hasn't pitched in more than a week but yesterday he told Manager Alvin Dark he was ready to go.

"I feel fine," Blue said. "I think too much was made of my problem. It was a case of eating heavy food late at night. Sure, it scared me, but I never thought for a minute I was sick. Now, I want to take my regular turn. About the only complaint I have at the moment is that they made me spend too much time in bed."

When Blue faces the Red Sox, the A's' lead in the American League West will be down to 6 ½ games, still a comfortable one, but by no means insurmountable with 48 games left.

Both Manager Darrell Johnson of the Red Sox and Dark can't explain why Boston, which leads the AL East by four games, has had so much success against Oakland this year.

"They are a good ball club," said Johnson, "which makes it even tougher for me to explain why we have had so much luck against them. I hope it continues."

"It just seems as if we play bad ball every time we face them," said Dark. "They are a fine hitting club but that doesn't really explain it."

Lee of Terra Linda scattered nine hits in winning his 13th game in 23 decisions. Two errors figured in the A's' first run and Joe Rudi drove in the second with a long homer.

"We stay in the best sleeping hotel in the league here, and there's not much to do nights in Oakland, so we felt strong," said Lee, all business on the mound and all jokes afterward.

The Red Sox, meanwhile, jumped starter Ken Holtzman for three hits, an infield out and an error to score four runs in the second, and that was all the help Lee needed.

A's owner Charlie Finley, probably convinced the Red Sox will be his team's opponents in the playoffs, has assigned Coach Bobby Hofman to scout Boston full time from now to the end of the season. Hofman will remain in the bullpen this weekend then trail the Red Sox for their remaining 48 games.

Giants' Consistent Pitcher

CHICAGO (AP) — San Francisco's Jim Barr, known to teammates as the Giants' most consistent pitcher, has piled up six wins in a row, the last two of them shutouts.

"No doubt about it," Giants' manager Wes Westrum declared yesterday after Barr held the Chicago Cubs to six singles and went on to a 3-0 victory. "Barr is our most consistent pitcher."

The victory for Barr, who mixed slow curves and sliders with fastballs, was also the fifth loss in a row for the Cubs, who are stumbling along in last place in the National League East.

"He's tough," Cub slugger Billy Williams said of Baar.

Marinwood To Try Again Today

I-J Special Report

SANTA ANA — Center fielder Mike McCarthy put on a power display with a pair of home runs, but it wasn't enough as Marinwood-Lucas Valley lost to Lennox of Los Angeles, 14-4 last night in the Senior Little League western regional playoffs.

Each team has now beaten thbeother once, and they were to meet a final time this morning to decide who will represent the region in the baseball World Series starting Monday in Gary, Ind.

McCarthy blasted a solo homer in the second for Marinwood's first run and added a two-run shot in the fourth. Tom Kunst drove home Wayne Berger with a second-inning double for the other run.

Tony Costa, who won the regional opener against Portland, Ore., was named by manager Sesto Lucchi to pitch the final game. Costa also won the first and last games of the Division II tournament in Cupertino last week.

Progress Reported In NFL Bargaining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Football League owners and players went back into bargaining sessions today with a federal mediator after the first few games of a full slate of pre-season contests showed fan reluctance to attend the strike-bound games. (See other NFL story, page 13.)

W.J. Usery, Jr., head of the Mediation and Conciliation Service, indicated that progress was being made in talks aimed at settling the 41-day old strike.

He declared during yesterday's 10 hours of bargaining talks that the negotiations were getting "down into a manageable area" and added "there has been some movement in some areas but nobody has committed themselves yet."

After adjourning the talks until 10 a.m. EDT today, Usery told newsmen that "things have been up and down but we had a damn fine session today."

In two exhibition games at Washington and Baltimore last night, an estimated 21,000 paid customers turned up at the two stadium that normally hold 115,000 spectatars.

Terry Bledsoe, spokesman for the owners, shrugged off the absence of fans at the two games as far as the strike situation is concerned.

"The difference is far greater than one crowd or two in this situation," he said. "We're not happy about the small crowds but we expect it's a problem that will resolved when the kids (rookies and free agents) get some experience and our veterans start coming to camp."

Veterans continue to trickle into camp, but the NFL teams are still a far cry from their usual caliber and fans continue to take advantage of the opportunity to obtain refunds for their exhibition tickets.

Additionally, the television networks are reassessing their positions in regard to televising exhibition games, seeking a reduction in the contract rate or considering turning off their cameras until the strike is settled and the veterans report to camp.

MARK SET BY GERARD IN ARCHERY

OXFORD, Ohio — Thirteen-year-old Mike Gerard of San Rafael has shattered the record for total scoring in the U.S. National Outdoor Target archery championships at Miami University. The competition ended yesterday.

Gerard, who three weeks ago won the young adults limited division at the U.S. Field Archery meet in Golden, Colo., won in nine categories here to take the junior championship with a total of 3,080 points. The previous record was 2,840, set last year.

Gerard won the 900 signle round, 900 double round, 50 yards and 40 yards competition, all U.S. events. He also took international events at 25, 35, 45 and 55 meters, and had the highest total score in them.

Westrum Not Man For Job

"They say that Adversity is a better teacher than prosperity." With these words Giant manager Wes Westrum opened his post game comments Tuesday night.

The Giants had just completed the second game of a two-game series with Houston. In this short series, the Giants pitching staff had somehow managed to give up 37 hits. Two games: 37 hits!

WES WESTRUM is a fine person. He is softspoken and friendly. He is honestly concerned about the individual feelings of his players. For all of the above reasons he is not the man to manage the San Francisco Giants.

I have a feeling, and that's all it is, that Westrum has not been signed to a contract to manage next year. I think that Horace Stoneham's announcement that Westrum would be back was simply made to keep the press off his and Wes' backs. I think that Wes will quietly step down at the end of the year and that a new manager will be named.

IF MY SPECULATION proves to be correct then the question of choice of manager once again pops up. Frank Luchessi third base coach for the Texas Rangers, had been mentioned as a possible choice when Charlie Fox was on his way out. Luchessi is a North Beach San Franciscan. He briefly managed the Philadelphia Phillies. He is very popular and well respected by the players at Texas. Luchessi replied that he was aware that his name had been brought up but that he hadn't talked to the Giants. WES WOULDN'T single out anyone for special criticism because he didn't feel it would benefit the situation. He did say that trades would be made and that a number of players would be brought up from the minor leagues at the end of this year. He felt that, "Maybe that will wake somebody up."

For someone to be woken up, they must first be asleep. Wes Westrum may have inadvertently touched on the major problem. It's going to take a very strong-minded person to come in and arouse the sleeping Giants.

Giants' Consistent Pitcher

CHICAGO (AP) — San Francisco's Jim Barr, known to teammates as the Giants' most consistent pitcher, has piled up six wins in a row, the last two of them shutouts.

"No doubt about it," Giants' manager Wes Westrum declared yesterday after Barr held the Chicago Cubs to six singles and went on to a 3-0 victory. "Barr is our most consistent pitcher."

The victory for Barr, who mixed slow curves and sliders with fastballs, was also the fifth loss in a row for the Cubs, who are stumbling along in last place in the National League East.

"He's tough," Cub slugger Billy Williams said of Baar.

Marinwood To Try Again Today

I-J Special Report

SANTA ANA — Center fielder Mike McCarthy put on a power display with a pair of home runs, but it wasn't enough as Marinwood-Lucas Valley lost to Lennox of Los Angeles, 14-4 last night in the Senior Little League western regional playoffs.

Each team has now beaten thbeother once, and they were to meet a final time this morning to decide who will represent the region in the baseball World Series starting Monday in Gary, Ind.

McCarthy blasted a solo homer in the second for Marinwood's first run and added a two-run shot in the fourth. Tom Kunst drove home Wayne Berger with a second-inning double for the other run.

Tony Costa, who won the regional opener against Portland, Ore., was named by manager Sesto Lucchi to pitch the final game. Costa also won the first and last games of the Division II tournament in Cupertino last week.

Brock Is Ahead Of Wills' Pace

THE TIPOFF:

There could be fireworks if some of the inducements used by NFL clubs to get vets to cross picket lines become public.

Q. How does Lou Brock's rate of stealing bases compare to previous seasons? Also, is it anywhere close to Maury Wills' pace in 1962, the year he stole 104 bases? — Steve Will, Harvard, Neb.

At the All-Star break, with the season little more than half over, Lou was already approaching his all-time best season total of 74 (set in 1966, when he was a callow 27-year-old). And he has been running consistently ahead of Wills, except you have to remember Maury pilfered 48 sacks in his last 55 games. Irv Kaze, the new National League facts dispenser, reminds us that Brock is a fast finisher, too.

Q. What airline do the Oakland Athletics fly? How often do the players' wives accompany them? Who is Bert (Campy) Campaneris roommate? — Audrey Togerson, Newark, Calif.

The A's vary their flight accommodations, according to the city they're visiting. Their wives are seldom along, except on special occasions such as a World Series. Campaneris, the veteran Athletic with the greatest seniority, rooms alone. Incidentally, the Bert in his name is short for Dagoberto.

Q. Could you tell me what distance runner Steve Prefontaine is doing? Does he plan to compete in the '76 Summer Games in Montreal? — Kaye Harris, Lenoir City, Tenn.

Prefontaine is competing this summer on the European track circuit and lost recently to the great Emiel Puttemans of Belgium. Steve, noramlly a gregarious soul, has been mum on his availability for the Olympics — the pro track people have been after him pretty heavy to run for money before '76.

Q. For the last 13 years I have coached basketball at the amateur and semi-professional level. Where might I go or whom should I see to acquire a license for a basketball school? — Earl White, San Jose, Calif.

No license required, according to Bob Feerick, the former general manager of the Golden State Warriors, who runs his own school in California's High Sierra. You just go out and get a place and announce you have a school.

Q. Can you tell me if there is Olympic or other international weight-lifting competition in the bench press? If so, what is the current record held in the 150-pound class? — Tom Geier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

There is no Olympic competition in that event. Olympics are restricted to two-hand snatch and two-hand clean and jerk. But there will be a World Power Meet in York, Pa., this November in which there will be bench press competition along with the squat and the deadlift. The American record in the 148-pound class is 362½ pounds, held by William Thurber of Lawndale, Calif.

Q. Whatever happened to my childhood idol Bob Hoffman, who coached the Olympic weightlifting team in the '30s and '40s? How old is he and is he still lifting weights? Even though he was a first-class egotist, he was a real inspiration to me. — John Nicolini, Oakland, Calif.

Bob Hoffman, going on 76 years young, still trains regularly and maintains a 52-inch chest and 35-inch waist. He's just back from the Pan-Am weightlifting games in Mexico City, where he helped coach our weightlifting team. And of course he still makes bar bells in York, Pa., though he no longer breaks chains with his massive chest.

PARTING SHOT:

Fred Williamson has a glittering off-field personality, but I just don't see the chemistry between him and Howard Cosell working out right. The egos are too great.

GIANTS

"Good control. He put the ball where he wanted. Pitched everybody outside. He keeps the ball away from everybody, so nobody gets a decent out."

The Giants, more than 20 games off the pace in the National League West, benefited from bases-empty homers off the bats of Gary Matthews and Dave Kingman.

Matthews' blast off Steve Stone in the fourth inning furnished the only margin Barr needed. Stone was lifted in the fifth when a double by third baseman Bruce Miller drove in another run.

Burt Hooton finished the fifth but not before serving up the home run pitch to Kingman.

Jim Todd and Dave LaRoche held the Giants scoreless for the rest of the game, but the Cubs remained feeble at the plate.

Old Timers Have Day In Baseball

Unsure Northrup Leads Win

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Jim Northrup, who had severe doubts about going to his new team, wasted no time in making friends.

The 35-year-old outfielder, acquired by Montreal two days ago from the Detroit Tigers, for whom he had played nine years, at first balked about going to the Expos. But after talking it over with his family, he decided to join them and arrived at Houston in time for last night's game.

As far as Montreal was concerned, Northrup didn't arrive a moment too soon. "The Grey Fox," as he was known in Detroit, delivered a solo homer to tie the score in the seventh inning then singled and scored the go-ahead run in the ninth to lead the Expos to a 4-3 victory over the Astros.

"I was told (of the trade) in the locker room and I hadn't even had time to talk with my wife. I wasn't sure she wanted to go to Canada and I didn't want to spend six weeks away from home."

WELL, UMP? — Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa and Braves' runner Mike Lum looked to the umpire for a call on a pickoff play at second base last night in Philadelphia. Lum was safe.

(UPI Telephoto)

Northrup said if his family had vetoed the move to Montreal, he would not have reported. But when he approached them about it, he said they were enthusiastic. The family decided they would catch Jim at all the Montreal home games.

"It is like a breath of fresh air to get away from Detroit," added Northrup. "They (the Detroit fans) were getting on me pretty hard and it's probably best that I got out of there."

In other NL games, St. Louis defeated Los Angeles 5-3, New York topped Cincinnati 4-1, Pittsburgh whipped San Diego 7-3, Atlanta nipped Philadelphia 3-2 in 11 innings and San Francisco blanked Chicago 3-0.

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 3

Ted Simmons celebrated his 25th birthday by hitting a two-out grand slam homer in the sixth inning which enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Dodgers in a battle of division leaders.

Mets 4, Reds 1

Don Hahn's three-run homer and combined four-hit pitching of Bob Apodaca and Tug McGraw helped the Mets defeat the Reds and prevented second place Cincinnati from gaining on Los Angeles in the NL West.

Pirates 7, Padres 3

A pair of errors by shortstop Enzo Hernandez allowed the Pittsburgh to score three runs in the first inning and the Pirates went on from there behind the eight-hit pitching of Jim Rooker to notch their fifth consecutive triumph and 19th in their last 27 games.

Braves 3, Phillies 2

Ralph Garr doubled and scored the winning run on Darrell Evans' sacrifice fly in the 11th inning to give the Braves a victory over the Phillies.

Cepeda Stars For Royals

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Gaylord Perry says he's feeling "great."

But you'd think it was just the opposite the way they're going now.

Perry, who hasn't won a game since July 3 when he won his 15th straight, suffered his sixth straight loss last night when the Indians lost to the Chicago White Sox 5-3.

Cepeda, back in the majors for just five games after being released by Boston in spring training, drove in five runs to pace the Kansas City Royals to a 13-3 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I felt great tonight," Perry said after he took a 2-0 lead into the sixth when he was tagged for four runs including back-to-back homers by Pat Kelly and Jorge Orta. He also gave up a homer to Dick Allen in the eighth inning.

Cepeda, who's 7-for-23 with 10 RBIs in five games, joined the Royals last Tuesday and is being paid for just the last two months of the year.

"I've been lucky," he said, "I don't feel real good yet. I hadn't played in 10 days before I started here."

Cepeda drove in his five runs with a pair of doubles and Amos Otis added a three-run triple to the Royals' attack.

In the other games, Minnesota downed Baltimore 6-2, Texas beat Detroit 4-3 in 14 innings, Boston downed Oakland 6-2 and California downed New York 7-1.

Twins 6, Orioles 2

Steve Brye doubled in the first and second innings to highlight a pair of two-run rallies as Minnesota downed Baltimore.

Rangers 4, Tigers 3

Angles 7, Yanks 1

Bobby Valentine knocked in three runs with a pair of singles and Frank Tanana won his first game as a starter since May 25 as California downed New York.

A.L. President On Spot

Combined AP & UPI

OAKLAND — A group of Oakland A's fans, under threat of possible perjury charges, put American League President Lee McPhail on the spot today. But it could wind up being a meaningless exercise.

The group, calling itself A's Fans for Local Ownership, wants McPhail to disclose what he knows about moving an existing A.L. franchise to Seattle.

McPhail was quoted in a Seattle Times story written by Hy Zimmerman as saying he intended to move an "existing team" to Seattle. But McPhail refused to identify the team he had in mind. In their letter to McPhail, the Oakland fans demanded that McPhail end the secrecy as to which A.L. team he has in mind for Seattle. Reportedly, the three teams in question are the A's, Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles.

The letter suggests that as taxpayers the fans could bring a lawsuit if the American League has intentions of moving the A's from Oakland. The group also asked McPhail to issue a statement, under penalty of perjury, that the A's are not the 'existing team' (you) referred to in (your) Seattle news conference and that the American League will not, under any condition, permit the A's to be moved from Oakland."

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Brock Is Ahead Of Wills' Pace

THE TIPOFF:

There could be fireworks if some of the inducements used by NFL clubs to get vets to cross picket lines become public.

Q. How does Lou Brock's rate of stealing bases compare to previous seasons? Also, is it anywhere close to Maury Wills' pace in 1962, the year he stole 104 bases? — Steve Will, Harvard, Neb.

At the All-Star break, with the season little more than half over, Lou was already approaching his all-time best season total of 74 (set in 1966, when he was a callow 27-year-old). And he has been running consistently ahead of Wills, except you have to remember Maury pilfered 48 sacks in his last 55 games. Irv Kaze, the new National League facts dispenser, reminds us that Brock is a fast finisher, too.

Q. What airline do the Oakland Athletics fly? How often do the players' wives accompany them? Who is Bert (Campy) Campaneris roommate? — Audrey Togerson, Newark, Calif.

The A's vary their flight accommodations, according to the city they're visiting. Their wives are seldom along, except on special occasions such as a World Series. Campaneris, the veteran Athletic with the greatest seniority, rooms alone. Incidentally, the Bert in his name is short for Dagoberto.

Q. Could you tell me what distance runner Steve Prefontaine is doing? Does he plan to compete in the '76 Summer Games in Montreal? — Kaye Harris, Lenoir City, Tenn.

Prefontaine is competing this summer on the European track circuit and lost recently to the great Emiel Puttemans of Belgium. Steve, noramlly a gregarious soul, has been mum on his availability for the Olympics — the pro track people have been after him pretty heavy to run for money before '76.

Q. For the last 13 years I have coached basketball at the amateur and semi-professional level. Where might I go or whom should I see to acquire a license for a basketball school? — Earl White, San Jose, Calif.

No license required, according to Bob Feerick, the former general manager of the Golden State Warriors, who runs his own school in California's High Sierra. You just go out and get a place and announce you have a school.

Q. Can you tell me if there is Olympic or other international weight-lifting competition in the bench press? If so, what is the current record held in the 150-pound class? — Tom Geier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

There is no Olympic competition in that event. Olympics are restricted to two-hand snatch and two-hand clean and jerk. But there will be a World Power Meet in York, Pa., this November in which there will be bench press competition along with the squat and the deadlift. The American record in the 148-pound class is 362½ pounds, held by William Thurber of Lawndale, Calif.

Q. Whatever happened to my childhood idol Bob Hoffman, who coached the Olympic weightlifting team in the '30s and '40s? How old is he and is he still lifting weights? Even though he was a first-class egotist, he was a real inspiration to me. — John Nicolini, Oakland, Calif.

Bob Hoffman, going on 76 years young, still trains regularly and maintains a 52-inch chest and 35-inch waist. He's just back from the Pan-Am weightlifting games in Mexico City, where he helped coach our weightlifting team. And of course he still makes bar bells in York, Pa., though he no longer breaks chains with his massive chest.

PARTING SHOT:

Fred Williamson has a glittering off-field personality, but I just don't see the chemistry between him and Howard Cosell working out right. The egos are too great.

"Good control. He put the ball where he wanted. Pitched everybody outside. He keeps the ball away from everybody, so nobody gets a decent out."

The Giants, more than 20 games off the pace in the National League West, benefited from bases-empty homers off the bats of Gary Matthews and Dave Kingman.

Matthews' blast off Steve Stone in the fourth inning furnished the only margin Barr needed. Stone was lifted in the fifth when a double by third baseman Bruce Miller drove in another run.

Burt Hooton finished the fifth but not before serving up the home run pitch to Kingman.

Old Timers Have Day In Baseball

Unsure Northrup Leads Win

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Jim Northrup, who had severe doubts about going to his new team, wasted no time in making friends.

The 35-year-old outfielder, acquired by Montreal two days ago from the Detroit Tigers, for whom he had played nine years, at first balked about going to the Expos. But after talking it over with his family, he decided to join them and arrived at Houston in time for last night's game.

As far as Montreal was concerned, Northrup didn't arrive a moment too soon. "The Grey Fox," as he was known in Detroit, delivered a solo homer to tie the score in the seventh inning then singled and scored the go-ahead run in the ninth to lead the Expos to a 4-3 victory over the Astros.

"I was told (of the trade) in the locker room and I hadn't even had time to talk with my wife. I wasn't sure she wanted to go to Canada and I didn't want to spend six weeks away from home."

WELL, UMP? — Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa and Braves' runner Mike Lum looked to the umpire for a call on a pickoff play at second base last night in Philadelphia. Lum was safe.

(UPI Telephoto)

Northrup said if his family had vetoed the move to Montreal, he would not have reported. But when he approached them about it, he said they were enthusiastic. The family decided they would catch Jim at all the Montreal home games.

"It is like a breath of fresh air to get away from Detroit," added Northrup. "They (the Detroit fans) were getting on me pretty hard and it's probably best that I got out of there."

In other NL games, St. Louis defeated Los Angeles 5-3, New York topped Cincinnati 4-1, Pittsburgh whipped San Diego 7-3, Atlanta nipped Philadelphia 3-2 in 11 innings and San Francisco blanked Chicago 3-0.

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 3

Ted Simmons celebrated his 25th birthday by hitting a two-out grand slam homer in the sixth inning which enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Dodgers in a battle of division leaders.

Mets 4, Reds 1

Don Hahn's three-run homer and combined four-hit pitching of Bob Apodaca and Tug McGraw helped the Mets defeat the Reds and prevented second place Cincinnati from gaining on Los Angeles in the NL West.

Pirates 7, Padres 3

A pair of errors by shortstop Enzo Hernandez allowed the Pittsburgh to score three runs in the first inning and the Pirates went on from there behind the eight-hit pitching of Jim Rooker to notch their fifth consecutive triumph and 19th in their last 27 games.

Braves 3, Phillies 2

Ralph Garr doubled and scored the winning run on Darrell Evans' sacrifice fly in the 11th inning to give the Braves a victory over the Phillies.

Cepeda Stars For Royals

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Gaylord Perry says he's feeling "great."

But you'd think it was just the opposite the way they're going now.

Perry, who hasn't won a game since July 3 when he won his 15th straight, suffered his sixth straight loss last night when the Indians lost to the Chicago White Sox 5-3.

Cepeda, back in the majors for just five games after being released by Boston in spring training, drove in five runs to pace the Kansas City Royals to a 13-3 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I felt great tonight," Perry said after he took a 2-0 lead into the sixth when he was tagged for four runs including back-to-back homers by Pat Kelly and Jorge Orta. He also gave up a homer to Dick Allen in the eighth inning.

Cepeda, who's 7-for-23 with 10 RBIs in five games, joined the Royals last Tuesday and is being paid for just the last two months of the year.

"I've been lucky," he said, "I don't feel real good yet. I hadn't played in 10 days before I started here."

Cepeda drove in his five runs with a pair of doubles and Amos Otis added a three-run triple to the Royals' attack.

In the other games, Minnesota downed Baltimore 6-2, Texas beat Detroit 4-3 in 14 innings, Boston downed Oakland 6-2 and California downed New York 7-1.

Twins 6, Orioles 2

Steve Brye doubled in the first and second innings to highlight a pair of two-run rallies as Minnesota downed Baltimore.

Rangers 4, Tigers 3

Angles 7, Yanks 1

Bobby Valentine knocked in three runs with a pair of singles and Frank Tanana won his first game as a starter since May 25 as California downed New York.

A.L. President On Spot

Combined AP & UPI

OAKLAND — A group of Oakland A's fans, under threat of possible perjury charges, put American League President Lee McPhail on the spot today. But it could wind up being a meaningless exercise.

The group, calling itself A's Fans for Local Ownership, wants McPhail to disclose what he knows about moving an existing A.L. franchise to Seattle.

McPhail was quoted in a Seattle Times story written by Hy Zimmerman as saying he intended to move an "existing team" to Seattle. But McPhail refused to identify the team he had in mind. In their letter to McPhail, the Oakland fans demanded that McPhail end the secrecy as to which A.L. team he has in mind for Seattle. Reportedly, the three teams in question are the A's, Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles.

The letter suggests that as taxpayers the fans could bring a lawsuit if the American League has intentions of moving the A's from Oakland. The group also asked McPhail to issue a statement, under penalty of perjury, that the A's are not the 'existing team' (you) referred to in (your) Seattle news conference and that the American League will not, under any condition, permit the A's to be moved from Oakland."

Attendance Figures Watched

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

National Football League owners will be keeping their eyes on the attendance figures tonight as the strike-plaugued league goes through its second week of pre-season play and if last night is any indication, they'll be seeing lots of empty seats.

The NFL, which lost anywhere from $2 to $4 million in tickets last week (depending on who you believe) could be in for a worse beating this week. Only 14,786 fans were on hand to watch the Houston Oilers crush the Redskins 48-3 in Washington's 54,000 seat Robert F. Kennedy Stadium and only 6,792 showed up in the 60,000- seat Municipal Stadium in Baltimore to watch the Detroit Lions down the Colts 6-3.

Seven more games are scheduled today, one tomorrow night and three Monday night and by all indications, fans are taking advantage of the league's offer to refund tickets for the duration of the NFL Players Association Strike.

The New York Giants are at New England tomorrow night and Monday night, Buffalo is at Kansas City, San Francisco at Cleveland and Chicago at Pittsburgh.

From random figures available, about 30,000 are expected in the 70,000-seat University of California Memorial Stadium for the Oakland-Atlanta game and about 25,000 were expected to watch Philadelphia-Cincinnati at the 56,000-seat Riverfront Stadium despite the return of linebacker Bill Bergey in an Eagle uniform.

Bergey was traded from Cincinnati this summer when he signed a World Football League contract but then had it torn up when he signed a fiveyear contract with the Eagles.

In the games last night, James Foote threw two TD passes and running back Steve Coleman threw another as the Oilers manhandled Washington. David Wooley ran three yards for a TD with six minutes left to lead Detroit over Baltimore.

FOR AMERICA'S CUP RACE

Challengers Getting Better

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The improved performance of potential challengers is causing more concern each day for U.S. boats in the America's Cup race.

Experts say the performance of Southern Cross, the primary Australian entry, and France, the only European candidate, made the skippers of such boats as Intrepid, Courgeous and Mariner.

In particular, the Americans are concerned about the fact that foreign craft appear to be doing particularly well on the downwind courses.

In developments yesterday, Jack Shaw, a sailor aboard the Southern Cross, injured his head when struck by a new mainsill. The wound required eight stitches and he will be out about three days.

Jack Summers, also of the Southen Cross, is recuperating from broken ribs.

But Bruno Bich, managing the French syndicate, remains critical of the Australians who have charged the French with abusing their course regulations.

"They came at us with a motorboat and we came here to race sailboats.

Aug. 20 Playoff Opener For Gaters

A spokesman said the Denver Racquets or the Minnesota Buckskins would oppose the Bay Area entry in the match.

Watergate Takes Market Up, Down

NEW YORK (UPI) — As the curtain fell on the Watergate drama this week, the stock market soared on rumors, then retreated on the reality of the first presidential resignation in U.S. history.

The result for the week on the New York Stock Exchange was a gain of 24.72 points in the widely followed Dow Jones industrial average, an indicator of blue chip stocks where much of the action centered. Activity picked up, with most of the increase on the upside.

Rumors that President Nixon would voluntarily leave office swept Wall Street early in the week, carrying the market 45 points higher in the first three sessions. A flurry of White House denials failed to dampen investors' hopes that a new administration would devote its full attention to the nation's economic ills.

But on Thursday, with Nixon's resignation virtually assured, traders cashed in on their gains and sent the market into a skid. The selling continued through yesterday as the financial community weighed the impact of Nixon's Thursday night address announcing his decision to step down and the profit-takers dominated most of the action.

Reaction on Wall Street to Vice President Gerald Ford's succession to the presidency generally was favorable, but the financial community remained cautious about his economic policies, which are a complete unknown.

Analyst Saul Smerling of Standard & Poor's Corp., noting the shock value of Nixon's resignation already has worn off, said "aside from any short term flurries, the market is going to sit back and see what economic programs will develop. The market may well need some time to consolidate."

Even on Thursday as the country awaited Nixon's expected resignation in his scheduled television address, two gloomy economic reports jolted investors and fueled concern over inflation.

The Labor Department's announcement that wholesale prices had climbed at a 44.4 per cent annual rate in July accounted for some of Thursday's market weakness. After the close, the Federal Reserve disclosed that business borrowing at 12 major New York City banks rose $73 million in the week ended Wednesday, raising the prospect of still higher interest rates and setting the tone for Friday's continued market slide.

But one economic verdict this week indicated inflationary pressure may be leveling off. The Fed revealed consumer installment credit rose by $1.09 billion in June, down sharply from $1.26 billion in May.

Now that impeachment has been removed from the "three I's"-Wall Street jargon for the inflation, interest rates and impeachment which have dogged the market for the past ten months — investors should tailor their moves to resolution of purely economic problems.

The Dow Jones industrial average added 24.72, closing the week at 777.30. The blue chip indicator rose 23.78 points in its best gain of the week Wednesday on news Nixon's GOP supporters in Congress had mutinied and the President's resignation was imminent.

The market plunged 21.16 points before closing early on Nov. 22, 1963 when President Kennedy was assassinated and soared 20.58 points the day after President Johnson announced he would not seek another term in office.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up 2.27 to 80.86. Of the 1,961 issues traded, there were 1,337 gainers, 416 losers.

Sales totaled 66,066,920 shares heavier than the 55,549,010 the week before, and compared with 62,029,790 a year earlier.

The most active issue was Clorox Co., with 1,117,800 shares changing hands. It closed up 1 at 9 ½. Polaroid was second, down 1 ½ to 26 ¾ on 687,400 shares.

Marcor Inc. was third, ahead 3 ¾ to 27 ½ on 647,000 shares. Mobil Oil reached agreement to make a cash tender offer for Marcor at $35 per common share and $70 for each share of the company's Series "A" preferred stock. Mobil lost ¾.

The biggest mover was Revco, down 10 ⅞ to 13 ½. The discount drug chain dropped dramatically following a preliminary earnings report that failed to meet earlier predictions.

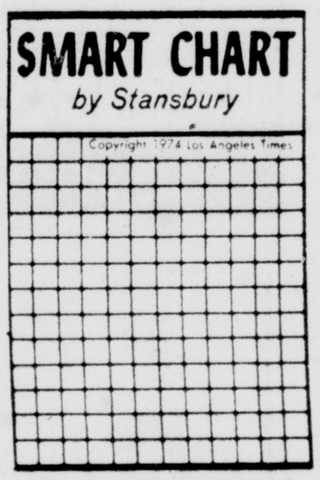
Williams Companies gained 5 ¾ to 62 ⅝ after reporting its second quarter net jumped to $2.17 per share from $1.54 a year ago.

The motors were stronger with G.M. picking up 2 ¾, American Motors 1 ½, and White Motors 1 ½. Sales of U.S. automakers fell 17.8 per cent in July from a year ago, but the annual sales rate for the month was the best so far this year. In addition, American Motors announced its net earnings climbed 12.4 per cent to $19 million in the April-June period over the same period last year.

The blue chips moved higher. Leading the way, Eastman Kodak picked up 4, United Aircraft 3, and International Paper 2 ½.

The glamors also saw some gains. IBM rose 9 ½, Digital Equipment 3 ¾, and McDonald's 2 ⅝. On the losing side, however, Texas Instruments dropped 4 ⅝ and Polaroid 1 ½.

Gold mining issues turned lower. Campbell Red Lake fell 1 ⅞, Dome Mines 1 ⅝, and ASA Ltd. 7/8.



"Our earnings are always reported conservatively."

WEEK IN BUSINESS

The Labor Department's announcement that wholesale prices had climbed at a 44.4 per cent annual rate in July accounted for some of Thursday's market weakness. After the close, the Federal Reserve disclosed that business borrowing at 12 major New York City banks rose $73 million in the week ended Wednesday, raising the prospect of still higher interest rates and setting the tone for Friday's continued market slide.

But one economic verdict this week indicated inflationary pressure may be leveling off. The Fed revealed consumer installment credit rose by $1.09 billion in June, down sharply from $1.26 billion in May.

Now that impeachment has been removed from the "three I's"-Wall Street jargon for the inflation, interest rates and impeachment which have dogged the market for the past ten months — investors should tailor their moves to resolution of purely economic problems.

The Dow Jones industrial average added 24.72, closing the week at 777.30. The blue chip indicator rose 23.78 points in its best gain of the week Wednesday on news Nixon's GOP supporters in Congress had mutinied and the President's resignation was imminent.

The market plunged 21.16 points before closing early on Nov. 22, 1963 when President Kennedy was assassinated and soared 20.58 points the day after President Johnson announced he would not seek another term in office.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up 2.27 to 80.86. Of the 1,961 issues traded, there were 1,337 gainers, 416 losers.

The most active issue was Clorox Co., with 1,117,800 shares changing hands. It closed up 1 at 9 ½. Polaroid was second, down 1 ½ to 26 ⅞ on 687,400 shares.

Marcor Inc. was third, ahead 3 ¾ to 27 ½ on 647,000 shares. Mobil Oil reached agreement to make a cash tender offer for Marcor at $35 per common share and $70 for each share of the company's Series "A" preferred stock. Mobil lost ¾.

The biggest mover was Revco, down 10 ⅞ to 13 ½. The discount drug chain dropped dramatically following a preliminary earnings report that failed to meet earlier predictions.

Williams Companies gained 5 ⅞ to 62 ⅝ after reporting its second quarter net jumped to $2.17 per share from $1.54 a year ago.

The motors were stronger with G.M. picking up 2 ⅞, American Motors 1 ½, and White Motors 1 ½. Sales of U.S. automakers fell 17.8 per cent in July from a year ago, but the annual sales rate for the month was the best so far this year. In addition, American Motors announced its net earnings climbed 12.4 per cent to $19 million in the April-June period over the same period last year.

The blue chips moved higher. Leading the way, Eastman Kodak picked up 4, United Aircraft 3, and International Paper 2 ½.

The glamors also saw some gains. IBM rose 9 ½, Digital Equipment 3 ⅞, and McDonald's 2 ⅝. On the losing side, however, Texas Instruments dropped 4 ⅝ and Polaroid 1 ½.

Gold mining issues turned lower. Campbell Red Lake fell 1 ⅞, Dome Mines 1 ⅝, and ASA Ltd. 7/8.

Money Woes Plaguing Game Dept.

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Because of increased cost of wildlife and ecology programs, the state Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems, a department official testified today.

"For several years we have been struggling with finances and have sought ways to maintain our diverse fish and wild life programs," said E. C. Fullerton, deputy director of the department, "while at the same time meeting the increased demands for environmental programs."

Fullerton testified before the Assembly Ways and Means subcommittee on resources. The subcommittee will hold at least one more hearing on the funding of the Fish and Game Department.

The department's $25.7 million budget is primarily funded through sports license fees.

Fullerton supported a measure (SB1650) by Sen. Dennies E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, which would allow a $5 million increase, in fishing and hunting licenses.

"The Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems," he said. "Hopefully the immediate fiscal crisis will be relieved upon the passage and signing of the license increase bill."

He said the increase in license fees will allow the department only "to continue programs at existing levels for a limited time only."

"Recognizing there are those who will accuse the department of following the old bureaucratic approach to solving all problems by seeking additional funds," he said, "we honestly and sincerely do not have other reasonable alternatives to present."

He said the department needs approximately $8 million more to operate at the same level.

He said all ot the department's present $2 million budget for environmental services work is spent in response to projects and problems not caused by the fish and game license buyer."

But said it is not fair to expect the hunter and fisherman to pick up the cost of programs and projects that are not directly beneficial to him.

Job Seekers Are Warned About Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Secretary of Labor has written "Dear Editor" letters to call to their attention to the price of a hamburger in Alaska.

The thrust of his memorandum was that job seekers should be encouraged to avoid Alaska.

"A good many workers are being lured to Alaska by stories of high paying jobs on the oil pipeline, only to find no work and great hardship when they get there," according to the secretary, Peter Brennan.

"No one seeking work should go to Alaska without a job commitment in writing from an employer before leaving home," he said.

"Alaska is a grand and beautiful state, but it is no place to be a stranger and stranded without a job," he said. "A hamburger, for instance, cost $2 or more and a milkshake about $1.60.

"Whatever you can do through your paper to get this information to the workers in your community who may be considering seeking jobs in Alaska will be of great service in preventing hardships for them and additional problems for the state of Alaska," he concluded.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

Leading Right Suit May Not Be Enough For Staging A Defeat

In some bridge hands it may be fairly easy to pick the right suit for a lead or a switch. It may also be necessary to pick the right card in that suit.

Opening lead — ♡ J

West opens the jack of hearts, and dummy's queen wins the first trick. A club is returned from dummy, and East takes the king.

East must now think before he leads. A heart return is pretty clearly hopeless. Since South's jump to two notrump shows strength in each of the unbid suits, South is marked with the ace of hearts.

It is no great feat for East to see that a switch to spades is in order. Still, it's an important first step; many players would automatically return a heart and give up all hope of defeating the contract.

If East returns the three of spades, South plays low. West wins with the queen of spades but is unable to continue the attack. South has time to develop the clubs.

East can defeat the contract by switching to the ten of spades. If South plays low, East holds the trick and leads another spade. If South plays the jack, West wins with the queen of spades and returns the king to capture dummy's nine and force out the ace at the same time. Either way, the defenders get three spades and two clubs, defeating the contract.

How does East know that South has A-J-x of spades? He doesn't. If South has some other holding, the lead of the ten costs nothing; and if South has A-J-x, the lead of the ten is vital.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠- A J 2
♥- A 8 5
♦- K J 9 5
♣- 9 8 6

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds.

It's dangerous to jump to two no-trump with one of the unbid suits wide open. Show a suit, such as it is, and await developments. If partner rebids in no-trump, you will raise to game; otherwise, you may have to show the heart support and settle for a game in hearts.

Money Woes Plaguing Game Dept.

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Because of increased cost of wildlife and ecology programs, the state Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems, a department official testified today.

"For several years we have been struggling with finances and have sought ways to maintain our diverse fish and wild life programs," said E. C. Fullerton, deputy director of the department, "while at the same time meeting the increased demands for environmental programs."

Fullerton testified before the Assembly Ways and Means subcommittee on resources. The subcommittee will hold at least one more hearing on the funding of the Fish and Game Department.

The department's $25.7 million budget is primarily funded through sports license fees.

Fullerton supported a measure (SB1650) by Sen. Dennies E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, which would allow a $5 million increase, in fishing and hunting licenses.

"The Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems," he said. "Hopefully the immediate fiscal crisis will be relieved upon the passage and signing of the license increase bill."

He said the increase in license fees will allow the department only "to continue programs at existing levels for a limited time only."

"Recognizing there are those who will accuse the department of following the old bureaucratic approach to solving all problems by seeking additional funds," he said, "we honestly and sincerely do not have other reasonable alternatives to present."

He said the department needs approximately $8 million more to operate at the same level.

He said all ot the department's present $2 million budget for environmental services work is spent in response to projects and problems not caused by the fish and game license buyer."

But said it is not fair to expect the hunter and fisherman to pick up the cost of programs and projects that are not directly beneficial to him.

Job Seekers Are Warned About Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Secretary of Labor has written "Dear Editor" letters to call to their attention to the price of a hamburger in Alaska.

The thrust of his memorandum was that job seekers should be encouraged to avoid Alaska.

"A good many workers are being lured to Alaska by stories of high paying jobs on the oil pipeline, only to find no work and great hardship when they get there," according to the secretary, Peter Brennan.

"No one seeking work should go to Alaska without a job commitment in writing from an employer before leaving home," he said.

"Alaska is a grand and beautiful state, but it is no place to be a stranger and stranded without a job," he said. "A hamburger, for instance, cost $2 or more and a milkshake about $1.60.

"Whatever you can do through your paper to get this information to the workers in your community who may be considering seeking jobs in Alaska will be of great service in preventing hardships for them and additional problems for the state of Alaska," he concluded.

The Editor's Notebook

The Martyr Complex Of Richard Nixon

Its imminence impels one to recall personal contacts with Nixon over the years.

It must have been a quarter of a century since Richard M. Nixon paid his first political visit to Marin. At the time he was a young congressman whose only claim to note was that he won his seat by beating an "unbeatable" liberal Democrat in a Democratic era when Republicans couldn't lick stamps.

He came to Marin on a ground-laying trip with his eye already on a U.S. Senate seat.

Nixon met for dinner with a bare handful of Marinites at the old Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse. He spoke briefly but effectively after dinner, outlining what Republicans must do to recapture voter support. He was lucid in stating the problems and said, in effect, that Republicans must suggest solutions which would be more attractive that those which Democratic officeholders were trying.

It all made sense.

Trouble was, when Nixon ran for the Senate, his campaign speeches contained no specific recommended solutions to the problems of the time.

DURING THAT first, successful campaign for the U.S. Senate, Nixon surprised many by turning up with his wife and station wagon outside the gate to the old Northwestern Pacific Railroad yard at Tiburon, during the lunch hour. He was photographed, of course, chatting amiably with railroad yard workers.

It was an impressive picture. It helped relate Nixon to the working man, in the voters' eyes.

That may be about as close to the working man as Nixon ever got.

As that first Senate campaign drew to a close, Nixon made a curious, private remark which this writer has often had occasion to recall.

"We," he said, apparently referring to himself and to his campaign, "are going to surprise a lot of people by polling a lot of votes in areas which are supposed to be solidly Democratic."

He referred to the opposition as "they" and attributed to "them" the objective of somehow plotting to ruin "us."

Some have suggested that Nixon has long had a kind of persecution complex and perhaps that is why he was so intent on covering up Watergate, so "they" could not use it to destroy "us."

DURING NIXON'S final term as vice president, when he had his eye on the White House as Eisenhower's immediate successor, he addressed an overflow crowd at a meeting of the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

He adopted the attitude of the local boy who has made good in the distant big city and longs to fraternize once again with the old gang just like in the old days.

He was wishing, he said, that he could drop into the newspaper offices of California and talk personally and candidly with each editor and/or publisher, just like in the old days.

Trouble was, this writer couldn't find anybody in the audience with whom Nixon ever dropped in for a personal, candid talk — ever.

In a small, private reception before the massive public reception for all of California's assembled newspaper publishers, Nixon confessed privately that such occasions required great effort for him; that he really didn't meet people easily.

But he went on projecting for the public an entirely different image.

WHEN NIXON RAN for governor of California, after his defeat for the presidency by John F. Kennedy, the California Press Association decided to invite both the challenger, Nixon, and the governor, Pat Brown, to speak at the association's annual meeting.

The editor assigned to extend the invitation to Brown — not a particularly close friend or strong supporter of Brown's — simply picked up the phone, dialed the governor's office in Sacramento, stated his name and his business, and shortly found himself talking to Governor Brown personally.

Pat Brown may not be exactly an intellectual giant, but he isn't stupid. If an invitation to address a state press association arrived in an election year, he wanted to give it his immediate, personal attention.

What a contrast with the Nixon invitation! It was to be extended personally by the president of the California Press Association — a former Orange County newsman who had known Nixon personally 'way back when.

That pour soul telephoned the Nixon headquarters repeatedly, sent letters, talked to supposed members of the Nixon palace guard —all without a direct response from Nixon, ever.

Nixon was as isolated in his own campaign headquarters in the California gubernatorial race as he was later to become in the White House.

NOW, AS THIS is written Thursday morning before leaving town on a short business trip, shadows of the tragedy grow longer and darker. The climax approaches. The man who had such great opportunities in his lifetime has finally blown it all.

He unquestionably will say to himself in sincerest belief, "They finally got us."

And he probably will live out his life firmly convinced that he is a martyr, finally "got" by "them."

Comes The Revolution!

We read recently that if America's farmland were to be divided equally among its populace, it would provide about 25 acres and a fifth of a cow per family.

If this weird dream were to come true, we hope we get 25 acres in Marin or Sonoma and not some desolate, dryland place on the Nevada-Utah border. We'd even give up our share of the communal cow for such a solution.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the San Rafael City Council for its decision to place proposed purchase of the Dollar Estate on the November ballot.

BRICKBATS to Marin County probation and social workers and their union, Local 535 of Service Employees International Union, for demanding "free ride" inclusion in an enriched retirement plan for which other county employees must pay extra.

BOUQUETS to members of the Marin County Central Investigative Unit — police officers who do additional duty, without payment, in an effort to curb burglary in the county.

Candidate Hails Warm Springs Dam 'Demise'

The heart of every true conservationist/economist must be leaping with joy at the rapid and timely demise of the Warm Springs Dam.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas placed an injunction on the dam pending further studies, Congress has cut allocations for the dam by many millions, and the Sonoma Task Force has forced the issue onto its November ballot. That's all good news!

The work still lies ahead however, and we in Marin must do our share to see the dam defeated. The Army Corps of Engineers designed a project of overkill proportions with an open price tag which will affect Marin. If the dam is built, Sonoma will have water for Marin beyond our wildest growth needs, to say nothing of what it will do to Sonoma and northern counties. The dam has not been declared earthquake safe, nor has the water been found to be free of possibly damaging pollutants. All this for an uncalculated sum from start to finish!

Torture Of Geese In France Described

This letter is to alert readers to the torturous methods by which geese and ducks in France are forcefed to produce the abnormal liver used in pate de foie gras, and to urge they stop buying it. The cruel treatment of these highly intelligent creatures is outrageous.

An article in the December, 1973, issue of the Ark (English) by a woman living in France states: "Now, modern factory farming methods are used, and in order to increase production and save labour, hand feeding has been replaced by machinery. The unfortunate bird is pressed into a small metal cage and immobilized by a steel collar. A funnel is then thrust into its throat down which the machine pours the feed, the only manual work needed being to massage its passage down the gullet. The aim of this barbaric procedure is to enlarge the liver to 10 times its normal size, causing a state of hypertrophy and consequent pain."

The French paper Le Sud-Ouest published a photograph of a goose imprisoned in this device, its head pulled upward and beak forced wide, subtitled, "The tears falling from this goose's eye are of blood." A vet told me this is due to intense pressure on the delicate tissues of the throat and eye area.

Pate is made chiefly of pork liver; goose or duck livers only add a taste thrill for the gastronome. Must such intense suffering provide this unnecessary fillip for jaded taste buds?

I have asked Congressman John Burton to introduce a bill to prohibit the import of any pate containing goose or duck liver. Readers are urged to write him at 1610 Longworth Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20515, expressing their support. Let us put an end to the daily torture of these poor defenseless birds.

What The Well-Dressed Tourist Is Wearing In Washington

WASHINGTON — The new summer fashions for American tourists visiting Washington have recently been released, and from all indications the clothes are going to be more formal than in previous years.

The source of this information was Sophie Glutz, the famous Washington tourist fashion expert, who said, "It appears now that women will be wearing more stretch pants than Bermuda shorts when visiting the public monuments."

"Does this mean that women tourists visiting this town will no longer be wearing blue jeans and sweat shirts?"

"Oh, I wouldn't rule that out completely. In the daytime you may find a certain number of women in blue jeans and sweatshirts, as well as shorts, but in the evening they will probably change into slacks, stretch pants and blouses."

"IS IT TRUE that the short shorts are out?"

"They are after 4 o'clock. Of course, many tourists will still visit the White House and the Lincoln Memorial in short shorts, but we're recommending longer shorts for the Senate and House of Representatives."

"I think that's wise," I said. "What about skirts?"

"Skirts are awfully dressy for sightseeing in Washington, but some women will wear them with halters and bare midriffs and open-toed sandals."

"What about dresses and suits for women?"

"Heaven forbid! A woman tourist wouldn't be seen dead in a dress or suit. All the other tourists would laugh at her."

"WHAT ABOUT stlyles?"

"Keeping your hair in curlers while sightseeing still seems to be the rage. The large colored plastic curlers which stick out all over your head are coming back in again."

"How about face cream?"

"It's optional. Many women tourists prefer it to suntan oil as suntan oil doesn't show up as well."

"I suppose socks and stockings are out?"

"They have been for some time now, unless you're going to a state dinner at the White House."

"What's new in colors?"

"In shorts, we're recommending plaids for women who weigh more than 150 pounds. They look so much better from the rear. Also, stripes are back in, at least as far as sweat shirts are concerned. The simple black toreador pants of a few years ago are definitely out."

"WHAT ABOUT MEN'S tourist fashions?"

"There hasn't been too much change in men's fashions this year. They'll still wear Army fatigues, bright-colored sports shirts, sneakers and baseball caps."

"And children?"

"We're not laying down any hard and fast rules on what children should wear in Washington. The National Gallery of Art has asked that children not wear bathing suits when visiting it, but you have to remember that the gallery is a very stuffy institution."

"I'm delighted to see how the standards in clothes have gone up in the nation's capital this year," I said.

"Yes, it's amazing how clothes-conscious Americans are when they visit Washington these days. It's as though they know that they're on display, and of course a lot of them wanted to look their best for the impeachment hearings."

No Holiday Mood In Britain With Fast-Increasing Inflation

LONDON — The British Parliament has adjourned for the usual summer recess, but in a mood of far more than usual anxiety about what will happen to the country and its political parties before it returns.

As they head for trout streams, grouse moors, or constituencies for some early electioneering, all members of Parliament know that their country's inflation rate is running at 16 per cent and still rising.

The Treasury frankly expects it to hit 20 by the end of the year. The balance of payments is running heavily against British goods. Something around $5 billion will be borrowed this year to cover the imbalance in trade.

ONE BRIGHT SPOT is that British credit still seems to be good in spite of the inflation rate. London has just accepted a $1.2-billion loan from Iran, which was volunteered, not requested.

Another $2.5 billion is available in Eurodollars. Much more is available from the American Federal Reserve and through International Monetary Fund drawing rights.

Britain's line of credit is by no means exhausted.

THE OTHER SIDE of that coin, though, is that to borrow at a rate of some $5 billion a year means paying a great deal of interest. At some point there is a limit to the amount of debt that can be carried and serviced. True, that limit is not yet reached and the great hope here is that North Sea oil will begin to flow before the credit runs out.

But when the oil does flow, there will be the debt left over from the lean years —and what will have happened in the meantime to Britain's industrial production?

Railway engineers were granted pay raises a few days ago that will bring their take-home pay up by as much as 54 per cent. Shell refinery workers recently had a raise of 25 per cent. Building construction workers are demanding as high as a 100 per cent raise. The average raise for the year is expected to run somewhere around 25 to 30 per cent.

If wages rise that fast what will happen to the price of British goods on world markets?

DOUBTS ARISING out of these economic facts are intensifying political emotions. It is a fact that the extreme radicals of both right and left are in a mood of bitterness worse than this country has known since the general strike of 1927. It has reached the point where moderate people are beginning to worry seriously over the prospects for survival of parliamentary rule.

With emotions rising on the political fringes, and the outlook for the economy uncertain, there is no certainty about political developments.

The Labor government is planning on an early October election. The final decision must be made fairly soon. But the left and right factions of the party are badly split at the moment, and there is serious danger of more defections from the right wing of the party that could prove disastrous.

Does Prime Minister Harold Wilson push ahead with an October election or delay at the risk of being forced into a winter election with economic conditions worse than now?

Supreme Court Decision Won't End Fight Over School Busing

WASHINGTON — In advance of the Supreme Court decision on the tapes, President Nixon's counsel talked about a "definitive decision," presumably a unanimous court, that would determine his response. This phrase is foremost in the thought of civil rights leaders who regard the 5-to-4 decision against busing as a long way from definitive.

Despite the many laments for the end of busing, well watered in some instances by crocodile tears, the fight is to go on. To accept it as the inevitable outcome means that the pattern of segregation will stand with only the most minor modifications.

To say that the answer is to change housing patterns is self-deception. That is happening in only a peripheral way, and with the present hurdle of high interest rates and a precipitous drop in the construction industry it will be even more marginal.

In the long run this may be the answer, but as John Maynard Keynes remarked in another context, in the long run we shall all be dead.

SUPREME COURT majorities change and in the next three years or so the switch could be in favor of busing. That has happened before in the court's history.

Steadfast civil righters like Joseph Rauh and the leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, examining the majority opinion of Chief Justice Warren Burger ruling out busing across school district lines, see a way the court could reverse itself.

It is essential, Burger wrote, that racially discriminatory acts of the state or of local school districts or a single district were the cause of interdistrict segregation.

"In such circumstances an interdistrict remedy would be appropriate to eliminate the interdistrict segregation directly caused by the constitutional violation."

Similar language is in Justice Potter Stewart's concurring opinion. If it could be shown that state officials had contributed to the separation of the races by drawing or redrawing school district lines, then a decree calling for cross-district busing might be appropriate. While the majority did not find this was true in the Detroit case, it might be shown to exist elsewhere.

THAT IS WHY, in the optimistic view, the fight on busing is far from over. A new case citing the language of the majority on busing could bring a favorable decision or, more remotely, a new court could overturn the 5-to-4 verdict.

No one can argue that busing is an ideal remedy. It is often disruptive, creating hostility and getting in the way of the educational process. But it is the only remedy with a chance under present circumstances of helping give the minority an equal stance at the starting tape.

The black separatists insist there is only one answer and that is to provide black schools with funds equal or better than those for white schools. That will enable the black schools to catch up. Given inflation and the economy pinch in governments across the board, this will not happen in the foreseeable future.

To cry the end is to indulge in the easy despair of Doomsville. It is a dangerous luxury. The past 20 years have seen important changes in the status of the blacks. But these changes have occurred almost entirely at the top, among the small minority achieving middle class status.

Within the mass, the change in status is negligible. One measure is the 20 to 25 per cent unemployment rate among young blacks as against the overall rate just released of 5.3 per cent. As the source of a potential explosion, this cannot be tolerated for long.

JUSTICE THURGOOD MARSHALL may have been too pessimistic when he said in his dissenting opinion that the decision was a giant step backward after 20 years of small, often difficult, steps toward integrating the races.

But it would be hard to disagree with Marshall that black children in Detroit will "receive the same separate and inherently unequal education in the future as they have been unconstitutionally afforded in the past." That, too, cannot be tolerated for long.

The Martyr Complex Of Richard Nixon

Its imminence impels one to recall personal contacts with Nixon over the years.

It must have been a quarter of a century since Richard M. Nixon paid his first political visit to Marin. At the time he was a young congressman whose only claim to note was that he won his seat by beating an "unbeatable" liberal Democrat in a Democratic era when Republicans couldn't lick stamps.

He came to Marin on a ground-laying trip with his eye already on a U.S. Senate seat.

Nixon met for dinner with a bare handful of Marinites at the old Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse. He spoke briefly but effectively after dinner, outlining what Republicans must do to recapture voter support. He was lucid in stating the problems and said, in effect, that Republicans must suggest solutions which would be more attractive that those which Democratic officeholders were trying.

It all made sense.

Trouble was, when Nixon ran for the Senate, his campaign speeches contained no specific recommended solutions to the problems of the time.

DURING THAT first, successful campaign for the U.S. Senate, Nixon surprised many by turning up with his wife and station wagon outside the gate to the old Northwestern Pacific Railroad yard at Tiburon, during the lunch hour. He was photographed, of course, chatting amiably with railroad yard workers.

It was an impressive picture. It helped relate Nixon to the working man, in the voters' eyes.

That may be about as close to the working man as Nixon ever got.

As that first Senate campaign drew to a close, Nixon made a curious, private remark which this writer has often had occasion to recall.

"We," he said, apparently referring to himself and to his campaign, "are going to surprise a lot of people by polling a lot of votes in areas which are supposed to be solidly Democratic."

He referred to the opposition as "they" and attributed to "them" the objective of somehow plotting to ruin "us."

Some have suggested that Nixon has long had a kind of persecution complex and perhaps that is why he was so intent on covering up Watergate, so "they" could not use it to destroy "us."

DURING NIXON'S final term as vice president, when he had his eye on the White House as Eisenhower's immediate successor, he addressed an overflow crowd at a meeting of the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

He adopted the attitude of the local boy who has made good in the distant big city and longs to fraternize once again with the old gang just like in the old days.

He was wishing, he said, that he could drop into the newspaper offices of California and talk personally and candidly with each editor and/or publisher, just like in the old days.

Trouble was, this writer couldn't find anybody in the audience with whom Nixon ever dropped in for a personal, candid talk — ever.

In a small, private reception before the massive public reception for all of California's assembled newspaper publishers, Nixon confessed privately that such occasions required great effort for him; that he really didn't meet people easily.

But he went on projecting for the public an entirely different image.

WHEN NIXON RAN for governor of California, after his defeat for the presidency by John F. Kennedy, the California Press Association decided to invite both the challenger, Nixon, and the governor, Pat Brown, to speak at the association's annual meeting.

The editor assigned to extend the invitation to Brown — not a particularly close friend or strong supporter of Brown's — simply picked up the phone, dialed the governor's office in Sacramento, stated his name and his business, and shortly found himself talking to Governor Brown personally.

Pat Brown may not be exactly an intellectual giant, but he isn't stupid. If an invitation to address a state press association arrived in an election year, he wanted to give it his immediate, personal attention.

What a contrast with the Nixon invitation! It was to be extended personally by the president of the California Press Association — a former Orange County newsman who had known Nixon personally 'way back when.

That pour soul telephoned the Nixon headquarters repeatedly, sent letters, talked to supposed members of the Nixon palace guard —all without a direct response from Nixon, ever.

Nixon was as isolated in his own campaign headquarters in the California gubernatorial race as he was later to become in the White House.

If it could be shown that state officials had contributed to the separation of the races by drawing or redrawing school district lines, then a decree calling for cross-district busing might be appropriate. While the majority did not find this was true in the Detroit case, it might be shown to exist elsewhere.

THAT IS WHY, in the optimistic view, the fight on busing is far from over. A new case citing the language of the majority on busing could bring a favorable decision or, more remotely, a new court could overturn the 5-to-4 verdict.

No one can argue that busing is an ideal remedy. It is often disruptive, creating hostility and getting in the way of the educational process. But it is the only remedy with a chance under present circumstances of helping give the minority an equal stance at the starting tape.

The black separatists insist there is only one answer and that is to provide black schools with funds equal or better than those for white schools. That will enable the black schools to catch up. Given inflation and the economy pinch in governments across the board, this will not happen in the foreseeable future.

To cry the end is to indulge in the easy despair of Doomsville. It is a dangerous luxury. The past 20 years have seen important changes in the status of the blacks. But these changes have occurred almost entirely at the top, among the small minority achieving middle class status.

Within the mass, the change in status is negligible. One measure is the 20 to 25 per cent unemployment rate among young blacks as against the overall rate just released of 5.3 per cent. As the source of a potential explosion, this cannot be tolerated for long.

JUSTICE THURGOOD MARSHALL may have been too pessimistic when he said in his dissenting opinion that the decision was a giant step backward after 20 years of small, often difficult, steps toward integrating the races.

But it would be hard to disagree with Marshall that black children in Detroit will "receive the same separate and inherently unequal education in the future as they have been unconstitutionally afforded in the past." That, too, cannot be tolerated for long.

Ford's Reputation For Honesty

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To a nation weary and disillusioned from the Watergate ordeal, perhaps the strongest tonic that Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr. can offer the American people is his unquestioned reputation for old-fashioned, Midwestern honesty.

His great ambition, never realized, was to become speaker of the House of Representatives where he served for a quarter century, the last nine years as a hard-working, popular Republican leader.

When President Nixon tapped him last October to succeed the disgraced Spiro T. Agnew, Ford swallowed his reluctance out of loyalty to his party and to Nixon, and won overwhelming approval of the House and Senate to be the nation's 40th vice president.

"I'm not at all interested in the vice presidency," he said then. "I love the House of Representatives, despite the long, irregular hours.

"Sometimes, though, when it's late and I'm tired and hungry, on that long drive home to Alexandria, as I go past 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, I do seem to hear a little voice saying: 'If you lived here, you'd be home now.'"

But Ford resisted the lure of that little voice, and insisted he never aspired to the White House Oval Office.

Now, at age 61, he has replaced Richard Nixon to become the 38th president.

Until Nixon finally made the fatal, climatic admission that he took part in the Watergate cover-up almost from the beginning, Ford staunchly defended Nixon and voiced confidence in the President's innocence of any wrongdoing.

At the same time, walking a delicate political tightwire, Ford staked out a position of independence by urging Nixon to cooperate fully with court and congressional demands for secret Watergate tapes.

From his past record in the House, Ford could be expected to pursue the general outlines of Nixon's foreign and conservative domestic policies. But Ford, observed one adviser, "is not a statesman —he's a politician."

Thus, given his past history of flexibility and compromise on legislative issues, some observers believe Ford will be an unknown quantity until he can put his own stamp on the presidency, much in the manner of Harry S. Truman, the little-known man from Missouri who succeeded Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The men Ford chooses to be his closest advisers and Cabinet members might provide the best clue to the direction he will take.

As Watergate closed in on Nixon, it was widely reported that Ford might name former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York or former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson as his vice president. Both are regarded ideological liberals compared to Ford.

Some observers believed that former Defense Secretary and White House counselor Melvin R. Laird and former Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., might also find a high position in a Ford administration.

A close political associate now in private life told UPI he believed Ford as President would be more liberal than during his years as a congressman, but would remain a fiscal conservative, and would rely more on his Cabinet than Nixon.

Liberals generally have critized Ford for opposing civil rights, housing, education and other social legislation in the House, and for his solid support of Johnson and Nixon administration policies in Vietnam.

Conservatives applaud his record of supporting a strong military defense, and his fights against costly Democratic spending programs have won him friends in the business community.

Ford's personal style has been characterized as dull, humorless and unimaginative. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he found Ford "something of a plodder, not brilliant, not creative, but adequate, competent and reliable."

His detractors are fond of recalling the time when President Lyndon B. Johnson tapped Ford's head and said of the former college football star, "Too bad, too bad, that's what happens when you play football too long without a helmet."

Ford shrugs off the private snickering about his intellect with the quiet, self-effacing confidence of a man whose Michigan constituents repeatedly returned him to Congress with majorities of more than 60 per cent.

"I'm a Ford, not a Lincoln," he said in his acceptance speech as vice president.

"I know they say I'm dull and have no charisma," he said later. "My only answer to that is that I'd rather be dull and sincere than have charisma and be phony."

Said one California Republican leader:

"Things might be better if Richard Nixon had made that Whittier football team. Thank God Gerald Ford made the Michigan team. He's strong and he knows it. He won't have to prove his manhood."

Ford was born in Omaha, Neb., on July 14, 1913, as Leslie King. When his parents divorced, his mother took her infant son to Grand Rapids, Mich. There she married a small business man, Gerald Rudolph Ford Sr., who adopted the boy and gave him his name.

It was not until Ford was a high school senior that he learned he had another father, by then a rancher in Wyoming. Ford was washing dishes and serving hamburgers in a Grand Rapids restaurant for $2 a week when his real father walked in and introduced himself.

"That was quite a shock," Ford said later. "I'd never thought about it. I couldn't care less. From my earliest days, I always assumed that my step-father was my real father."

Ford was a hard worker from the start. He helped his father in the family's new paint and varnish factory, became an Eagle Scout and captain of the high school football team, and was inspired by famed courtroom lawyer Clarence Darrow to dream of a political career.

Later, he was star center for the University of Michigan's undefeated national champion football teams in 1932 and 1933, and was voted most valuable player as a senior in 1934.

Ford turned down professional offers from the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions and entered Yale Law School, where he says he was a B-minus student.

From Yale he returned to Grand Rapids to practice law briefly before serving aboard the aircraft carrier Monterey in the Pacific during World War II. Released as a lieutenant commander after four years, he went back to his home town law practice.

At the urging of Michigan's Republican Sen. Arthur H. Vandenburg, also from Grand Rapids, Ford in 1948 challenged and defeated his district's isolationist congressman, Republican Bartel Jonkman. He ran as an internationalist supporting Truman's postwar Marshall Aid plan for European recovery.

Ford, his House seat secure, quickly made a name for himself as a tireless GOP party loyalist who did his homework on the issues and never went back on his word. He still likes to say that "truth is the glue on the bond that holds government together."

In 1965, after Barry M. Goldwater's disastrous defeat had left House Republicans in shattered disarray, Ford toppled Charles A. Halleck of Indiana as House GOP leader with the help of a band of young party activists eager to give the GOP a new image.

Throughout his House leadership years under Nixon, Ford sought to strike a balance between demands of Republican congressmen, the White House and his Middle America constituents in Grand Rapids. Although steadfastly supporting Nixon policies, he parted company on a few issues, probably to underscore his frequent assertion that he was no "rubber stamp" for the White House.

One of Ford's most controversial moves came in 1970, when he led an unsuccessful fight to impeach Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas because of his connections with a private foundation and because excerpts from a Douglas book appeared in a magazine Ford claimed was pornographic.

The same year he was first elected to Congress, Ford married Elizabeth Bloomer, a slim Grand Rapids fashion coordinator. They have four children.

At the Fords' two-story brick home which he built 19 years ago in suburban Alexandria, Va., Ford keeps in trim by swimming twice a day in his heated outdoor swimming pool. A Christmas skiing vacation at his place in Vail, Colo., is a family tradition.

The Fords attend Immanuel-on-the-Hill Episcopal Church, on the grounds of Virginia Theological Seminary not far from their home.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., one of Ford's closest friends in the House, described him this way: "He is a great, open, decent individual with a tremendous amount of courage. He can pull together the forces in our economy who are worried over the danger we are in."

Another ally, former New York Sen. Charles Goodell, once said: "A Ford administration would be honest, open and believable. We could do worse and have."

Said Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking House GOP leader: "We will have a channel of communication between the White House and Congress that has never before existed."

During his confirmation hearings for vice president, House and Senate investigators dismissed as groundless an allegation by small-time lobbyist Robert Winter-Berger that he had loaned Ford $15,000 that was never repaid.

On orders from the Senate Rules Committee, the Internal Revenue Service audited Ford's tax returns for six years and found only one error. It disallowed an $871.44 deduction Ford had claimed as a business expense for clothing purchased for the 1972 GOP convention.

Ford paid the $435.77 in additional taxes without a penalty.

Attorney Jean McKee, his Democratic opponent for the House in 1972, said Ford's "image of believability" was so strong he would have to be caught smuggling heroin into the country to upset his trust among Grand Rapids voters.

"I think he's probably as clean as anyone can be," she said.

STRONG SWIMMER — Long active athletically, President Ford has made it a practice to swim for at least 15 minutes twice a day. Here he is shown taking an early morning dip in the pool at his home in Alexandria, Va.

Ford Is Getting A Big Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As President, Gerald R. Ford not only gets to move into the White House —he also gets a $137,500-a-year raise and a $50,000 expense account.

Ford's salary jumped from $49,500 to $62,500 last December when the former House Republican leader was named vice president. But as President he will make $200,000 annually.

Betty Ford Reluctantly Became The First Lady

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Before Gerald R. Ford was selected as vice president 10 months ago, he was considering retiring from Congress in 1976 at the request of his wife.

Then, after Ford replaced Spiro Agnew, his wife declared she would not want to become First Lady. "It's for a personal, selfish reason —for a few years I want Jerry to myself," she said.

Now, with her husband becoming the nation's 38th president, Elizabeth Bloomer (Betty) Ford is no longer as adamant and is prepared to put off retirement plans.

Despite the years of raising their four children and managing the family's finances while Ford was working long hours in Congress and making speeches across the country, Betty Ford acknowledges that "Of course, Jerry is the boss in this family."

When she gets a break from answering the ever-increasing mail arriving at their 20-year old brick house in Alexandria, Va., Betty Ford likes to work in her back yard garden growing flowers and vegetables.

Sports used to be a hobby, but she had to give up strenuous activity nine years ago because of pinched nerve in her neck, an injury that still causes her constant pain and one that is aggravated by constant stress.

In an effort to relieve the stress and frustrations she said were brought on by wondering whether she was doing a good job as wife and mother, Betty Ford saw a psychiatrist for two years.

A former dancer in the Martha Graham troupe and a one-time model, Mrs. Ford is still attractive at age 55, with a slim figure and shiny chestnut hair. She speaks slowly and softly, always smiling and friendly.

"The psychiatrist suggested that I shouldn't give up everything for Jerry and the children, that I also had to think about things that mattered to me."

"We're exceptionally close to one another," she says of her three sons and a daughter. During the times Ford was away from home for days at a time, it fell to Betty to make the necessary day-to-day decisions and enforce family discipline.

Although she helped Ford on the campaign trail in 13 elections, Mrs. Ford has not been as active as some political wives.

One of her faults, apparent not only to Ford but to the public on occasion, is her habit of showing up late for social events. The vice president has several times has glared her down or commented in public on her lateness. But Mrs. Ford, acknowledging her own tardiness, reminds people that Jerry Ford was late for their wedding 25 years ago.

"Jerry keeps tellig me that if he ever gets a heart attack, it won't be because of long hours or hard work but because I'm always late," she once said.

But her social grace was particularly welcomed by the Martin Luther King family last month when Mrs. Ford attended the funeral of the senior Mrs. King, who was shot to death. The government had not designated any high official to attend the funeral, so Betty Ford went, out of her own compassion for the family.

She has always been active in civic affairs, serving as a cub scout den mother, a Sunday school teacher and head of the local cancer fund drive. After Secret Service agents spent considerable time and effort last fall to make their modest suburban home more secure,

The Ford's in 25 years of marriage have four children: Michael, 24; Jack, 22; Steven, 18; and Susan 17.

Though she said she never made a secret of it, many people were surprised to learn last fall that Betty Ford had been married before. She was divorced after four years from Grand Rapids, Mich., furniture company agent William C. Warren on grounds of extreme mental cruelty and incompatibility.

What kind of president does Betty Ford think her husband will make? "Excellent," she says, "as good as any."

And it is her conviction that a Watergate scandal could not happen under her husband because, she says, he would be too involved in the day-to-day workings of his administration not to know of wrongdoing.

NEWLYWEDS — Two big events in the life of Gerald Ford occurred in the autumn of 1948. He got married and was elected to Congress. The President is shown leaving Grace Episcopal Church on Oct. 15, 1948 with his new wife, the former Elizabeth (Betty) Bloomer.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Any individual, firm or agency who plans to build or place a structure in, on, under, or over the navigable waters of the United States must first obtain a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Such Permits are also required for any dredging, filling, or dredge disposal in navigable waters. Regulations governing the administrative procedures on permits for activities in navigable or ocean waters were published in the Federal Register on April 3, 1974 as 33 CFR 209.120.

Navigable waters are any waters which are, have been, or can be used for commercial or navigation purposes. Federal permit authority extends over the entire surface of such a water body. Thus, any work in areas presently or formerly subject to tidal action (below the plane of mean higher high water, including unfilled areas behind dikes) or below the ordinary high water mark of rivers and streams may require a Corps permit.

The Federal Corps of Engineers permit is required in addition to any State or local permits. Private ownership of land under or beside the water has no effect on the requirement. If work is done in navigable waters as described above without a permit from the Corps, civil or criminal actions (including removal) can be instituted pursuant to 33 U. S. Code Secs. 406, 407, and 1319. Any questions regarding permits for work in navigable waters may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch, San Francisco District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco 94102, telephone: (415) 556-5178 or 556-5489.

"That was quite a shock," Ford said later. "I'd never thought about it. I couldn't care less. From my earliest days, I always assumed that my stepfather was my real father."

Ford was a hard worker from the start. He helped his father in the family's new paint and varnish factory, became an Eagle Scout and captain of the high school football team, and was inspired by famed courtroom lawyer Clarence Darrow to dream of a political career.

Later, he was star center for the University of Michigan's undefeated national champion football teams in 1932 and 1933, and was voted most valuable player as a senior in 1934.

Ford turned down professional offers from the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions and entered Yale Law School, where he says he was a B-minus student.

From Yale he returned to Grand Rapids to practice law briefly before serving aboard the aircraft carrier Monterey in the Pacific during World War II. Released as a lieutenant commander after four years, he went back to his home town law practice.

At the urging of Michigan's Republican Sen. Arthur H. Vandenburg, also from Grand Rapids, Ford in 1948 challenged and defeated his district's isolationist congressman, Republican Bartel Jonkman. He ran as an internationalist supporting Truman's postwar Marshall Aid plan for European recovery.

Ford, his House seat secure, quickly made a name for himself as a tireless GOP party loyalist who did his homework on the issues and never went back on his word. He still likes to say that "truth is the glue on the bond that holds government together."

In 1965, after Barry M. Goldwater's disastrous defeat had left House Republicans in shattered disarray, Ford toppled Charles A. Halleck of Indiana as House GOP leader with the help of a band of young party activists eager to give the GOP a new image.

Throughout his House leadership years under Nixon, Ford sought to strike a balance between demands of Republican congressmen, the White House and his Middle America constituents in Grand Rapids. Although steadfastly supporting Nixon policies, he parted company on a few issues, probably to underscore his frequent assertion that he was no "rubber stamp" for the White House.

One of Ford's most controversial moves came in 1970, when he led an unsuccessful fight to impeach Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas because of his connections with a private foundation and because excerpts from a Douglas book appeared in a magazine Ford claimed was pornographic.

The same year he was first elected to Congress, Ford married Elizabeth Bloomer, a slim Grand Rapids fashion coordinator. They have four children.

At the Fords' two-story brick home which he built 19 years ago in suburban Alexandria, Va., Ford keeps in trim by swimming twice a day in his heated outdoor swimming pool. A Christmas skiing vacation at his place in Vail, Colo., is a family tradition.

STRONG SWIMMER — Long active athletically, President Ford has made it a practice to swim for at least 15 minutes twice a day. Here he is shown taking an early morning dip in the pool at his home in Alexandria, Va.

The Fords attend Immanuelon-the-Hill Episcopal Church, on the grounds of Virginia Theological Seminary not far from their home.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., one of Ford's closest friends in the House, described him this way: "He is a great, open, decent individual with a tremendous amount of courage. He can pull together the forces in our economy who are worried over the danger we are in."

Another ally, former New York Sen. Charles Goodell, once said: "A Ford administration would be honest, open and believable. We could do worse and have."

Said Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking House GOP leader: "We will have a channel of communication between the White House and Congress that has never before existed."

During his confirmation hearings for vice president, House and Senate investigators dismissed as groundless an allegation by small-time lobbyist Robert Winter-Berger that he had loaned Ford $15,000 that was never repaid.

On orders from the Senate Rules Committee, the Internal Revenue Service audited Ford's tax returns for six years and found only one error. It disallowed an $871.44 deduction Ford had claimed as a business expense for clothing purchased for the 1972 GOP convention.

Ford paid the $435.77 in additional taxes without a penalty.

Attorney Jean McKee, his Democratic opponent for the House in 1972, said Ford's "image of believability" was so strong he would have to be caught smuggling heroin into the country to upset his trust among Grand Rapids voters.

"I think he's probably as clean as anyone can be," she said.

Betty Ford Reluctantly Became The First Lady

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Before Gerald R. Ford was selected as vice president 10 months ago, he was considering retiring from Congress in 1976 at the request of his wife.

Then, after Ford replaced Spiro Agnew, his wife declared she would not want to become First Lady. "It's for a personal, selfish reason —for a few years I want Jerry to myself," she said.

Now, with her husband becoming the nation's 38th president, Elizabeth Bloomer (Betty) Ford is no longer as adamant and is prepared to put off retirement plans.

Despite the years of raising their four children and managing the family's finances while Ford was working long hours in Congress and making speeches across the country, Betty Ford acknowledges that "Of course, Jerry is the boss in this family."

When she gets a break from answering the ever-increasing mail arriving at their 20-year old brick house in Alexandria, Va., Betty Ford likes to work in her back yard garden growing flowers and vegetables.

Sports used to be a hobby, but she had to give up strenuous activity nine years ago because of pinched nerve in her neck, an injury that still causes her constant pain and one that is aggravated by constant stress.

In an effort to relieve the stress and frustrations she said were brought on by wondering whether she was doing a good job as wife and mother, Betty Ford saw a psychiatrist for two years.

A former dancer in the Martha Graham troupe and a one-time model, Mrs. Ford is still attractive at age 55, with a slim figure and shiny chestnut hair. She speaks slowly and softly, always smiling and friendly.

NEWLYWEDS — Two big events in the life of Gerald Ford occurred in the autumn of 1948. He got married and was elected to Congress. The President is shown leaving Grace Episcopal Church on Oct. 15, 1948 with his new wife, the former Elizabeth (Betty) Bloomer.

"The psychiatrist suggested that I shouldn't give up everything for Jerry and the children, that I also had to think about things that mattered to me."

"We're exceptionally close to one another," she says of her three sons and a daughter. During the times Ford was away from home for days at a time, it fell to Betty to make the necessary day-to-day decisions and enforce family discipline.

Although she helped Ford on the campaign trail in 13 elections, Mrs. Ford has not been as active as some political wives.

One of her faults, apparent not only to Ford but to the public on occasion, is her habit of showing up late for social events. The vice president has several times has glared her down or commented in public on her lateness. But Mrs. Ford, acknowledging her own tardiness, reminds people that Jerry Ford was late for their wedding 25 years ago.

"Jerry keeps tellig me that if he ever gets a heart attack, it won't be because of long hours or hard work but because I'm always late," she once said.

But her social grace was particularly welcomed by the Martin Luther King family last month when Mrs. Ford attended the funeral of the senior Mrs. King, who was shot to death. The government had not designated any high official to attend the funeral, so Betty Ford went, out of her own compassion for the family.

She has always been active in civic affairs, serving as a cub scout den mother, a Sunday school teacher and head of the local cancer fund drive. After Secret Service agents spent considerable time and effort last fall to make their modest suburban home more secure,

The Ford's in 25 years of marriage have four children: Michael, 24; Jack, 22; Steven, 18; and Susan 17.

Though she said she never made a secret of it, many people were surprised to learn last fall that Betty Ford had been married before. She was divorced after four years from Grand Rapids, Mich., furniture company agent William C. Warren on grounds of extreme mental cruelty and incompatibility.

What kind of president does Betty Ford think her husband will make? "Excellent," she says, "as good as any."

And it is her conviction that a Watergate scandal could not happen under her husband because, she says, he would be too involved in the day-to-day workings of his administration not to know of wrongdoing.

Ford Is Getting A Big Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As President, Gerald R. Ford not only gets to move into the White House —he also gets a $137,500-a-year raise and a $50,000 expense account.

Ford's salary jumped from $49,500 to $62,500 last December when the former House Republican leader was named vice president. But as President he will make $200,000 annually.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Any individual, firm or agency who plans to build or place a structure in, on, under, or over the navigable waters of the United States must first obtain a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Such Permits are also required for any dredging, filling, or dredge disposal in navigable waters. Regulations governing the administrative procedures on permits for activities in navigable or ocean waters were published in the Federal Register on April 3, 1974 as 33 CFR 209.120.

Navigable waters are any waters which are, have been, or can be used for commercial or navigation purposes. Federal permit authority extends over the entire surface of such a water body. Thus, any work in areas presently or formerly subject to tidal action (below the plane of mean higher high water, including unfilled areas behind dikes) or below the ordinary high water mark of rivers and streams may require a Corps permit.

The Federal Corps of Engineers permit is required in addition to any State or local permits. Private ownership of land under or beside the water has no effect on the requirement. If work is done in navigable waters as described above without a permit from the Corps, civil or criminal actions (including removal) can be instituted pursuant to 33 U. S. Code Secs. 406, 407, and 1319. Any questions regarding permits for work in navigable waters may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch, San Francisco District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco 94102, telephone: (415) 556-5178 or 556-5489.

A Christian Behind Prison Walls

By THOMAS PLUMMER

(Thomas Plummer of Novato is a graduate of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry. He works as a correctional officer at San Quentin. The following article was printed in the August issue of The California Southern Baptist and was taken from an address Plummer made recently at the Prison Reform Forum in Oakland.)

I work at the California State Prison at San Quentin. For the past two-and-one-half years, I have worked as a Correctional Officer. To most people, that means I am a guard. To many people that means I wear the uniform of a semi-law enforcemetn officer, occasionally carrying a gun with my "trigger finger" ready to fire on someone, or turning keys all day, or doing whatever else the stereotype calls for in the minds of many "outsiders."

The perspective I wish to maintain in this presentation is my own, and not necessarily that of my fellow officers. It is the perspective of only one concerned Christian, a follower of Jesus Christ, behind the walls of San Quentin Prison.

Let me hasten to impress upon you the fact that there are many Christians employed at San Quentin, many of whom are wearing the uniform. They are persons who are genuinely concerned about the problems we face there and about implementing the principles of Christ to those problems.

First I want to share a few facts about life at San Quentin Prison.

Racially, the population, which numbers around 3400 at this time, is almost 50 per cent Caucasian, with the Blacks coming in a close second, followed by the Mexican-Americans. Other ethnic groups are represented, but they do not constitute a large percentage of the total population.

As a whole, life at San Quentin is regimented. That menas that most of the men incarcerated there are on tight schedules. They wake up, eat, go to work at certain times. There are many rules and regulations that govern their lives, their families, and their friends.

However, within the framework of a regimented life, there is a certain amount of freedom under "normal" conditions. Actually, the only inmates on 24-hour lockup status are those who have been segregated from the main population because they are considered menaces to either institutional security, or to the lives of others and to themselves. There is one honor block, in which inmates are allowed to stay out all day until 12:00 midnight, basically. The remainder of the population, with the exception of those authorized to remain out of their cells, must lock up in the evening.

Men are sent to San Quentin for a variety of crimes ranging in seriousness from possession of narcotics to first degree murder. The largest representative crime, however, I believe, is armed robbery.

Socio-economically, they range from the poor to the rich, with the lower classes predominating.

A large portion of San Quentin inmates name the Los Angeles and southern California area as their home. The distance from home and family is often a frustrating factor that has led many to bitterness and hostility.

As I work behind the walls, face-to-face with the inmates, on what someone might characterize as the "gut-level basis," I find my own attitutes mixed. On the one hand, I know that I would not want to have to be incarcerated for a long period of my life. As the old saying puts it, "There but for the grace of God go I." I am certain that, without a deep faith in Christ, if I were thrust into the present prison situation, having to spend much of my time in a small cell barely big enough to accommodate me, let alone a cellmate, I probably could become bitter, frustrated and feel dehumanized. If I had to experience not knowing when I were going home, or not knowing if I were going to stay alive, get a visit from my family, or receive mail from home, I would probably feel rejected, forgotten, and pessimistic.

As an officer, I experience frustration at times, especially in the face of hostility and the efforts of certain outside organizations to plan the disruption of our prisons.

As one seeks to maintain a Christ-like attitude, on the other hand, toward my work and those I work with, I find it frustrating when I fail to live up to my own expectations. Hopefully, I am treating others as Christ would, with the dignity and respect as human beings God gave to all persons. It is difficult at times to do this, especially when a particular person refuses to act or respond with dignity and self-respect. Most inmates are willing to "do their own time," that is, to mind their own business, but about 10 per cent are not willing to do "just their own time," but that of others as well. They create trouble for those who do not bend to their will. They are the ones whose trouble results in the restrictive measures everyone has to experience in response.

As a Christian correctional officer, I am often faced on the one hand with the opportunity to handle a difficult situation the best way pleasing to Christ, as I view it, and on the other hand to become harsh in a particular situation, such as when I am assigned a gunrail officer's position. There as a responsible person and as a Christian, I must seek to save lives. If I should, in the line of duty, injure someone or take the life of another human being, even if many other lives are saved, I must also be willing to accept the possible legal consequences.

As a Christian correctional officer, I see another face of San Quentin, the face of many self-help groups within the walls and of many concerned outside groups and individuals. I find encouragement from the work of the Squires, to name one of many fine inmate groups. Here is a group of inmates who invite troubled youth to come inside the walls for a few weekends and "rap" about what it is like. Their basic approach is "now we won't tell you not to get yourselves into trouble, but look where it got us." Squires has been instrumental in helping many young men reorient their lives.

A group called Scope helps inmates find jobs on the outside before their parole date arrives. The M-2 Job Therapy program provides outside sponsors to inmates, on a man-to-man basis. Often these sponsors are Christians, and when the inmate does obtain a release, his M-2 sponsors continue to help him.

As a Christian, I am obviously interested and encouraged by the Chapel activities. All expressions of faith are encouraged officially but are participated in voluntarily.

I find much encouragement from the recent interest that has been expressed toward matters relating to faith in Christ. I have been amazed at finding many inmates in the possession of copies of "The Way," the illustrated Living Bible, and at seeing inmates reading them and carrying them everywhere — to mealtimes, to work, as well as to chapel services. There is a program of Bible study behind the walls of San Quentin, an activity that thrills me tremendously. Many are being won to saving faith in Jesus, and baptisms occur from time to time. I looked in on a Sunday morning Protestant Chapel service recently, and I noticed that the Chaplain was extending a public invitation, with several inmates responding. One of the highlights of the Easter season is the annual Easter service, where both staff and inmates forget their differences, and, as one body, they worship the risen Savior.

I find encouragement from the fact that the inmates of San Quentin sponsor a little girl in South America, giving up part of their small incomes to remember her on er birthday and other special days.

I find encouragement from the fact that one inmate recently completed work on his invention, a "go-cart," a mechanized bed for a young woman who has been completely paralyzed since she was twelve years old and must be in bed at all times.

As a Christian officer, my attitude hopefully includes realism about some of the limitations of the penal system, as well as the need for justice balanced with mercy, and realism about what I consider and what evidence demonstrates to be the chief causes for the problems we are having.

However, my attitude, which is hopefully Christ-like, involves idealism. Men can be changed, and that by the Good News of the Gospel of Jesus Christ men can be born again, be given a new direction in life, find complete pardon from their sins and be completely forgiven; they can become useful people. This Good News is not jut for prisoners, but, thank God, it is for all persons who hunger and thirst for reality, meaning and change in life.

As far as I am concerned, I do not see my job as being merely to keep people locked up and, as an officer of the law, to enforce state laws and the rules and regulations of the director, but as a correctional officer, to try in my professional dealings with these men to help them realize that prison does not have to be a self-defeating experience, but a learning experience.

One of these days I am going to be out of a job. I see the day when all prisons will be closed, not because they will be burned or torn down by force or administratively closed, but because there will be no crime, and therefore, no criminals. I am speaking about the time in the future when, as the Bible assures us, God Himself is going to set all things right. If I did not have the confidence that God Himself, by His own hand, will ultimately solve the problems of injustice, hatred, and the conditions that lead to crime, both in society and within the human heart, and that His will will surely be done on earth, then I would throw up my hands in despair. I am convinced of the ultimate victory of God, that He will accomplish His purposes, that nothing man or the devil can do will thwart those purposes.

Finally, and until that day comes, Jesus said, "I came to set the captive free." Freedom is not necessarily in a physical sense, but it is freedom of the spirit, of the soul. He challenges us to work with Him toward the end of binding up the broken-hearted, freeing the captives, announcing the Good News of the healing of the sick. Most of us claim to have some kind of religious affiliation. To us Jesus has said,

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

I do not set myself up as the perfect example of what an officer should be, but by God's grace, I am trying my best. Each of us must accept the challenge of following Christ in his own individual way, with the only supreme motive being that of our intense love for Christ.

Thank you for letting me share these thoughts with you.

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — In steel-lined, man-made caves blasted into a granite mountainside, the Mormon Church collects and stores miles of microfilm for use by its members in "work for the dead."

Technicians process film of pre-1900 birth, death, marriage and legal records collected from 35 nations and every U.S. state and store the negatives in the naturally cool caverns — where they are safe from the forces of man and nature.

The $2 million granite mountain storage vault is part of the church's vast genealogy program in which members trace their ancestors in order to bring them the benefits of Mormonism "on the other side."

The caverns, entered through a bunker watched by a closed circuit television camera, are dug into a sheer granite cliff above the mouth of Little Cottonwood Canyon, just off the road that leads to the Alta and Snowbird ski resorts.

"They are structured to withstand a nuclear blast at the mouth of the canyon," said vault director Myron R. Bridges, pointing out that work areas are covered by 300 feet of granite and storage areas by 700 feet of solid rock.

In the front sections of the caves, modern film processing equipment churns out 25 million feet of microfilm negatives and prints a year and dozens of evaluators check them for quality before the negatives are stored and the prints distributed.

Behind the work area, huge 10- and 14-ton bank vault doors and "blast locks" provide access to the six vaults. In two of them, rows of gray filing cabinets hold nearly one million, 100-foot rolls of microfilm collected by the church since it started filming old records in 1938.

The films include land grants, deeds, probate records, marriage and cemetery records, parish registers and other items of known genealogical value.

The Mormons have generally concentrated on the areas from which most of the church's 3.3 million members are descended — the United States, Denmark, Great Britain, Sweden, the Netherlands, France and Germany but recently have begun filming in other parts of Latin America, in Asia and in eastern Europe.

Prints of the films, plus 130,000 printed volumes and seven million "family record sheets" are available for use by Mormons and non-Mormons alike at the genealogy library attached to the church's headquarters building in Salt Lake City.

The church's massive investment in genealogy research is motivated by the same doctrines which led the faith to build 16 temples around the world.

In the temples-closed to all but faithful Mormons — members are married for "time and eternity," and children are "sealed" to their parents so their family will remain intact in the afterlife.

But members also undergo rites of baptism, marriage and "sealing" by proxy for their forebears.

Thomas C. Daniels, administrator of the church's genealogical society, explained that the church believes the "family was designed by the Lord to endure through all time and eternity" — but that families will be united after the resurrection only if the temple rites have been performed.

"That makes the ordinances valid but not effective," he says. "The person on the other side has the option of accepting them or not."

Since the church was founded in 1830 more than 140 million persons — most of them "on the other side" — have had the ordinances performed for them.

"Considering the billions who have lived on earth, we're just scratching the surface," Daniels admits. "Except for royalty, records generally begin in the mid-1500s to early 1600s. If anyone claims to have gone back more than 10 generations, we question and check their sources."

What about those billions who lived before records were kept or in areas where they still aren't?

"We go back as far as the records are available; beyond that, it's humanly impossible. But we believe that the information will be made available to mortals during the millenium and the work will be performed then."

Then why spend so much time and money doing it now?

"The Lord helps those who help themselves. Life on earth is a mortal probation period for God's spirit children. It is our responsibility to do certain things and this is one."

A Christian Behind Prison Walls

By THOMAS PLUMMER

(Thomas Plummer of Novato is a graduate of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry. He works as a correctional officer at San Quentin. The following article was printed in the August issue of The California Southern Baptist and was taken from an address Plummer made recently at the Prison Reform Forum in Oakland.)

I work at the California State Prison at San Quentin. For the past two-and-one-half years, I have worked as a Correctional Officer. To most people, that means I am a guard. To many people that means I wear the uniform of a semi-law enforcemetn officer, occasionally carrying a gun with my "trigger finger" ready to fire on someone, or turning keys all day, or doing whatever else the stereotype calls for in the minds of many "outsiders."

The perspective I wish to maintain in this presentation is my own, and not necessarily that of my fellow officers. It is the perspective of only one concerned Christian, a follower of Jesus Christ, behind the walls of San Quentin Prison.

Let me hasten to impress upon you the fact that there are many Christians employed at San Quentin, many of whom are wearing the uniform. They are persons who are genuinely concerned about the problems we face there and about implementing the principles of Christ to those problems.

First I want to share a few facts about life at San Quentin Prison.

Racially, the population, which numbers around 3400 at this time, is almost 50 per cent Caucasian, with the Blacks coming in a close second, followed by the Mexican-Americans. Other ethnic groups are represented, but they do not constitute a large percentage of the total population.

As a whole, life at San Quentin is regimented. That menas that most of the men incarcerated there are on tight schedules. They wake up, eat, go to work at certain times. There are many rules and regulations that govern their lives, their families, and their friends.

However, within the framework of a regimented life, there is a certain amount of freedom under "normal" conditions. Actually, the only inmates on 24-hour lockup status are those who have been segregated from the main population because they are considered menaces to either institutional security, or to the lives of others and to themselves. There is one honor block, in which inmates are allowed to stay out all day until 12:00 midnight, basically. The remainder of the population, with the exception of those authorized to remain out of their cells, must lock up in the evening.

Men are sent to San Quentin for a variety of crimes ranging in seriousness from possession of narcotics to first degree murder. The largest representative crime, however, I believe, is armed robbery.

Socio-economically, they range from the poor to the rich, with the lower classes predominating.

A large portion of San Quentin inmates name the Los Angeles and southern California area as their home. The distance from home and family is often a frustrating factor that has led many to bitterness and hostility.

As I work behind the walls, face-to-face with the inmates, on what someone might characterize as the "gut-level basis," I find my own attitutes mixed. On the one hand, I know that I would not want to have to be incarcerated for a long period of my life. As the old saying puts it, "There but for the grace of God go I." I am certain that, without a deep faith in Christ, if I were thrust into the present prison situation, having to spend much of my time in a small cell barely big enough to accommodate me, let alone a cellmate, I probably could become bitter, frustrated and feel dehumanized. If I had to experience not knowing when I were going home, or not knowing if I were going to stay alive, get a visit from my family, or receive mail from home, I would probably feel rejected, forgotten, and pessimistic.

As an officer, I experience frustration at times, especially in the face of hostility and the efforts of certain outside organizations to plan the disruption of our prisons.

As one seeks to maintain a Christ-like attitude, on the other hand, toward my work and those I work with, I find it frustrating when I fail to live up to my own expectations. Hopefully, I am treating others as Christ would, with the dignity and respect as human beings God gave to all persons. It is difficult at times to do this, especially when a particular person refuses to act or respond with dignity and self-respect. Most inmates are willing to "do their own time," that is, to mind their own business, but about 10 per cent are not willing to do "just their own time," but that of others as well. They create trouble for those who do not bend to their will. They are the ones whose trouble results in the restrictive measures everyone has to experience in response.

As a Christian correctional officer, I am often faced on the one hand with the opportunity to handle a difficult situation the best way pleasing to Christ, as I view it, and on the other hand to become harsh in a particular situation, such as when I am assigned a gunrail officer's position. There as a responsible person and as a Christian, I must seek to save lives. If I should, in the line of duty, injure someone or take the life of another human being, even if many other lives are saved, I must also be willing to accept the possible legal consequences.

As a Christian correctional officer, I see another face of San Quentin, the face of many self-help groups within the walls and of many concerned outside groups and individuals. I find encouragement from the work of the Squires, to name one of many fine inmate groups. Here is a group of inmates who invite troubled youth to come inside the walls for a few weekends and "rap" about what it is like. Their basic approach is "now we won't tell you not to get yourselves into trouble, but look where it got us." Squires has been instrumental in helping many young men reorient their lives.

A group called Scope helps inmates find jobs on the outside before their parole date arrives. The M-2 Job Therapy program provides outside sponsors to inmates, on a man-to-man basis. Often these sponsors are Christians, and when the inmate does obtain a release, his M-2 sponsors continue to help him.

As a Christian, I am obviously interested and encouraged by the Chapel activities. All expressions of faith are encouraged officially but are participated in voluntarily.

I find much encouragement from the recent interest that has been expressed toward matters relating to faith in Christ. I have been amazed at finding many inmates in the possession of copies of "The Way," the illustrated Living Bible, and at seeing inmates reading them and carrying them everywhere — to mealtimes, to work, as well as to chapel services. There is a program of Bible study behind the walls of San Quentin, an activity that thrills me tremendously. Many are being won to saving faith in Jesus, and baptisms occur from time to time. I looked in on a Sunday morning Protestant Chapel service recently, and I noticed that the Chaplain was extending a public invitation, with several inmates responding. One of the highlights of the Easter season is the annual Easter service, where both staff and inmates forget their differences, and, as one body, they worship the risen Savior.

I find encouragement from the fact that the inmates of San Quentin sponsor a little girl in South America, giving up part of their small incomes to remember her on er birthday and other special days.

I find encouragement from the fact that one inmate recently completed work on his invention, a "go-cart," a mechanized bed for a young woman who has been completely paralyzed since she was twelve years old and must be in bed at all times.

As a Christian officer, my attitude hopefully includes realism about some of the limitations of the penal system, as well as the need for justice balanced with mercy, and realism about what I consider and what evidence demonstrates to be the chief causes for the problems we are having.

However, my attitude, which is hopefully Christ-like, involves idealism. Men can be changed, and that by the Good News of the Gospel of Jesus Christ men can be born again, be given a new direction in life, find complete pardon from their sins and be completely forgiven; they can become useful people. This Good News is not jut for prisoners, but, thank God, it is for all persons who hunger and thirst for reality, meaning and change in life.

As far as I am concerned, I do not see my job as being merely to keep people locked up and, as an officer of the law, to enforce state laws and the rules and regulations of the director, but as a correctional officer, to try in my professional dealings with these men to help them realize that prison does not have to be a self-defeating experience, but a learning experience.

One of these days I am going to be out of a job. I see the day when all prisons will be closed, not because they will be burned or torn down by force or administratively closed, but because there will be no crime, and therefore, no criminals. I am speaking about the time in the future when, as the Bible assures us, God Himself is going to set all things right. If I did not have the confidence that God Himself, by His own hand, will ultimately solve the problems of injustice, hatred, and the conditions that lead to crime, both in society and within the human heart, and that His will will surely be done on earth, then I would throw up my hands in despair. I am convinced of the ultimate victory of God, that He will accomplish His purposes, that nothing man or the devil can do will thwart those purposes.

Finally, and until that day comes, Jesus said, "I came to set the captive free." Freedom is not necessarily in a physical sense, but it is freedom of the spirit, of the soul. He challenges us to work with Him toward the end of binding up the broken-hearted, freeing the captives, announcing the Good News of the healing of the sick. Most of us claim to have some kind of religious affiliation. To us Jesus has said,

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

I do not set myself up as the perfect example of what an officer should be, but by God's grace, I am trying my best. Each of us must accept the challenge of following Christ in his own individual way, with the only supreme motive being that of our intense love for Christ.

Thank you for letting me share these thoughts with you.

Mormons Use Microfilm In 'Work For The Dead'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — In steel-lined, man-made caves blasted into a granite mountainside, the Mormon Church collects and stores miles of microfilm for use by its members in "work for the dead."

Technicians process film of pre-1900 birth, death, marriage and legal records collected from 35 nations and every U.S. state and store the negatives in the naturally cool caverns — where they are safe from the forces of man and nature.

The $2 million granite mountain storage vault is part of the church's vast genealogy program in which members trace their ancestors in order to bring them the benefits of Mormonism "on the other side."

The caverns, entered through a bunker watched by a closed circuit television camera, are dug into a sheer granite cliff above the mouth of Little Cottonwood Canyon, just off the road that leads to the Alta and Snowbird ski resorts.

"They are structured to withstand a nuclear blast at the mouth of the canyon," said vault director Myron R. Bridges, pointing out that work areas are covered by 300 feet of granite and storage areas by 700 feet of solid rock.

In the front sections of the caves, modern film processing equipment churns out 25 million feet of microfilm negatives and prints a year and dozens of evaluators check them for quality before the negatives are stored and the prints distributed.

Behind the work area, huge 10- and 14-ton bank vault doors and "blast locks" provide access to the six vaults. In two of them, rows of gray filing cabinets hold nearly one million, 100-foot rolls of microfilm collected by the church since it started filming old records in 1938.

The Mormons have generally concentrated on the areas from which most of the church's 3.3 million members are descended — the United States, Denmark, Great Britain, Sweden, the Netherlands, France and Germany but recently have begun filming in other parts of Latin America, in Asia and in eastern Europe.

Prints of the films, plus 130,000 printed volumes and seven million "family record sheets" are available for use by Mormons and non-Mormons alike at the genealogy library attached to the church's headquarters building in Salt Lake City.

The church's massive investment in genealogy research is motivated by the same doctrines which led the faith to build 16 temples around the world.

But members also undergo rites of baptism, marriage and "sealing" by proxy for their forebears.

Thomas C. Daniels, administrator of the church's genealogical society, explained that the church believes the "family was designed by the Lord to endure through all time and eternity" — but that families will be united after the resurrection only if the temple rites have been performed.

"That makes the ordinances valid but not effective," he says. "The person on the other side has the option of accepting them or not."

Since the church was founded in 1830 more than 140 million persons — most of them "on the other side" — have had the ordinances performed for them.

Mr. Snowshoes Carries The Corgi Banner

By DON KEOWN

Mrs. Frank Hayward of Ross doesn't refer to Champion Bear Acres Mr. Snowshoes C. D. by his full title.

But on the other hand, neither does she call her Pembroek Corgi simply Snowshoes.

It is always Mr. Snowshoes, even though the mischief in the little dog's bright and alert eyes would seem to indicate that he is not one to stand on the proprieties.

AFTER ALL, THE winner of the best-of-show laurels at the San Francisco's recent big Golden Gate Kennel Club Dog Show, a pedigreed dog who has firmly established himself as the outstanding Welsh Corgi on the West Coast and certainly one of the top members of his breed in the entire country, is entitled to a considerable measure of respect.

The San Francisco triumph topped off what has been a brilliant career for the still young Corgi under the expert handling of Doug Bundock of Sebastopol.

For Diana Hayward, Mr. Snowshoes has been a first experience as the owner of a show dog.

BUT HE IS her second Corgi. And the culmination of a lifelong love for animals, particularly dogs and horses.

Because her father was a diplomat, she was born in Europe, and the family moved frequently. But her mother had a special affection for dogs. And thus as a child Diana knew a long succession of pets — fox terriers, cocker spaniels, German shepherds, Norwegian elk hounds, pugs, Irish setters, etc.

But she did not acquire her first Welsh Corgi until five years ago.

SHE WAS LOOKING for a pet, and she set her sights upon a Corgi "because I had been attracted to them at dog shows I had attended. Their faces were so expressive — so bright and clever. Their size appealed to me. And they present no grooming problem. So I decided to get one."

The first acquisition was Laurels Queen of Hearts, and Mrs. Hayward still has her.

"Mab," as Mrs. Hayward calls Laurels Queen of Hearts, was acquired primarily as a pet, and was not a show dog. But Mabs did compete in obedience trials, and before her retirement had established herself as the top Corgi in obedience competition in the country.

NEXT MRS. HAYWARD decided she would like to own a Corgi show dog.

Two years ago she made her selection at the Bear Acres Kennels of Mrs. Stanley Bear in San Jose, a well known breeder of Corgis.

Mr. Snowshoes, son of Champion Bear Acres Two for the Road, sire of many champions, was then a very small puppy.

"I took him at the age of six weeks," she says. "I was told it was chancy, and Mrs. Bear said she couldn't guarantee anything at that early age. But I knew from the moment I saw him that he was the dog I wanted, and that he would do well in the ring."

MRS. HAYWARD also made the decision for herself in selecting Bundock as the trainer.

"A lot of the credit for Mr. Snowshoes' success belongs to Doug," she says. "I had watched all the handlers at work at the dog shows, and I decided he was the best available handler. I've never been disappointed."

Up until then, Mrs. Hayward's participation in dog shows had been limited to the role of spectator, although she had taken an active part in horse shows "and that helped prepare me for what was to come."

"WHAT WAS TO come" was a growing string of successes for Mr. Snowshoes, an accumulation of ribbons and trophies, and increasing prestige in the dog show ranks, all capped off by the big victory in San Francisco.

"I think it can be said without any qualification that Mr. Snowshoes dominates the Corgis in the West, even though there are many fine Pembrokes out here on the Pacific Coast," she says. "And right now, he has the best record in his breed in the United States."

Mrs. Hayward disregarded the advice of some owners who warned her that a show dog should not be subjected to obedience training. Mr. Snowshoes took the obedience course, and earned the C.D. (Companion Dog) designation, along with his show ring championship.

"THE MORE YOU teach them, the happier they are," she says of her two Corgis.

Mr. Snowshoes and Mab live a normal pet life at the Hayward home, their owner says.

And, she adds, they are superb com-

For History Of Our Highways, Look To Bob Halligan

By DOROTHY GARDINER

"I enjoy it," says veteran state Department of Transportation district information officer of California history to which he devotes much of his spare as well as his working time.

It's Marinwood's Robert W. (Bob) Halligan who comes up with answers when news reporters, government officials or civic leaders have questions about the state highway system that winds through the nine Bay Area counties.

As district information officer for the California Department of Transportation in San Francisco, he has the past, present and future of highways at his fingertips.

An intense, articulate engineer-executive, he worked on highway planning, design and construction for 16 years before becoming the state's media contact man on highways seven years ago.

ON A RECENT trip to San Rafael he brought a collection of photographs showing Highway 101's (the Redwood Highway) growth during the last half century.

The photos, taken with an old-time box camera, depict today's six and eight lane speedway as a two-lane country road meandering through the pastoral countryside that not too long ago was Marin.

They are included in a slide show that Halligan researched and compiled on the highway's history in Marin, Sonoma and Napa counties that the Department of Transportation presents to interested groups on request.

CALIFORNIA'S highways still follow the old Mission Trail forged by Franciscan friars and Spanish dragoons more than 200 years ago, Halligan explained.

During the Spanish and Mexican periods travelers walked or rode horseback from today's Sausalito to San Rafael where they embarked by boat to Schellville in Sonoma County where the old El Camino Real continued along today's Highway 12.

Today's Highway 101 had its beginnings in 1909 when a network of county roads were taken over by the state Division of Highways, Halligan explained.

IN THE BEGINNING it ran along a circuitous route from Sausalito, west into Mill Valley, onto Corte Madera, Larkspur, Ross and San Anselmo where it veered east along today's Miracle Mile into downtown San Rafael.

It snaked down Fourth Street to Grand Avenue, turned north to Linden Lane, west to Petaluma Avenue (now Lincoln Avenue) to the top of Puerto Suello Hill where it wound around Los Ranchitos Road to today's Terra Linda Interchange and north to Novato and the county line.

Twenty years later, in 1929, as more commuters and excursionists began turning to automobiles for transportation, the state began improving the roadway.

TRAFFIC WAS rerouted from San Rafael's Grand Avenue onto Lincoln Avenue. A connecting two-lane roadway across the top of Puerto Suello Hill (where today 89,000 cars daily speed on six lanes) bypassed Los Ranchitos Road to join the existing highway north of today's Marin County Civic Center.

At the same time, the state built a two-lane stretch of roadway from San Rafael, across California Park Hill, to Alto that for the first time in history removed cross-country traffic from San Rafael's Fourth Street.

In 1933, with the spanning of Richardson Bay with a redwood highway bridge (built to last 100 years, it was replaced in 1957), the highway extended from Sausalito, on to Alto and into San Rafael.

WHEN THE GOLDEN Gate Bridge opened in May, 1937, 9,000 cars a day started traveling between San Francisco and Marin, Halligan said. That growth has never stopped. Today 115,000 cars daily make the trip across the bridge.

By 1940, 12,500 cars were whizzing through San Rafael every day. The result was the building of the first freeway in Northern California and the second in the state along a viaduct that bypassed the center of the city.

Scheduled for completion in 1941, it wasn't opened to traffic until the following year due to the onset of the World War II, he said.

THE GOLDEN GATE Bridge that has brought thousands of new residents and visitors to Marin during the last three and half decades is still playing a key role in the county's future since "it can only carry so many vehicles (commuters) each day," he explained.

The same thing could be said of Highway 101. According to Halligan, the highway, that from its beginning has been the county's transportation lifeline, will soon reach its optimum — eight lanes.

Currently $2,300,000 is being spent widening to eight lanes the stretch of highway between the Richardson Bay Bridge and Greenbrae, he pointed out.

BY THE MID-1980S, eight lanes should join Greenbrae to California Park Hill, and a few years later eight lanes will run north to the Manuel T. Freitas Parkway, he said.

The stretch north to Marinwood will be widened to eight lanes in eight or more years, he said, to accommodate traffic generated by the Fireman's Fund Building, now under construction south of Lucas Valley Road, and the Northgate Industrial Park, east of the highway.

The Novato bypass, to the north, is expected to be finished this year, he said and by the mid to late 1980s, a six-lane highway will connect Novato and Petaluma.

AS CONDOMINIUMS and new homes bring more residents to the county, he pointed out, travelers may have to switch from private autos to mass transit or car pools.

The state is now studying installing "ramp metering" along the southern section of Highway 101 to encourage travelers to switch from private cars to Golden Gate Transit buses or car pools, he said.

The system, now in operation in San Jose, calls for a series of red, green and

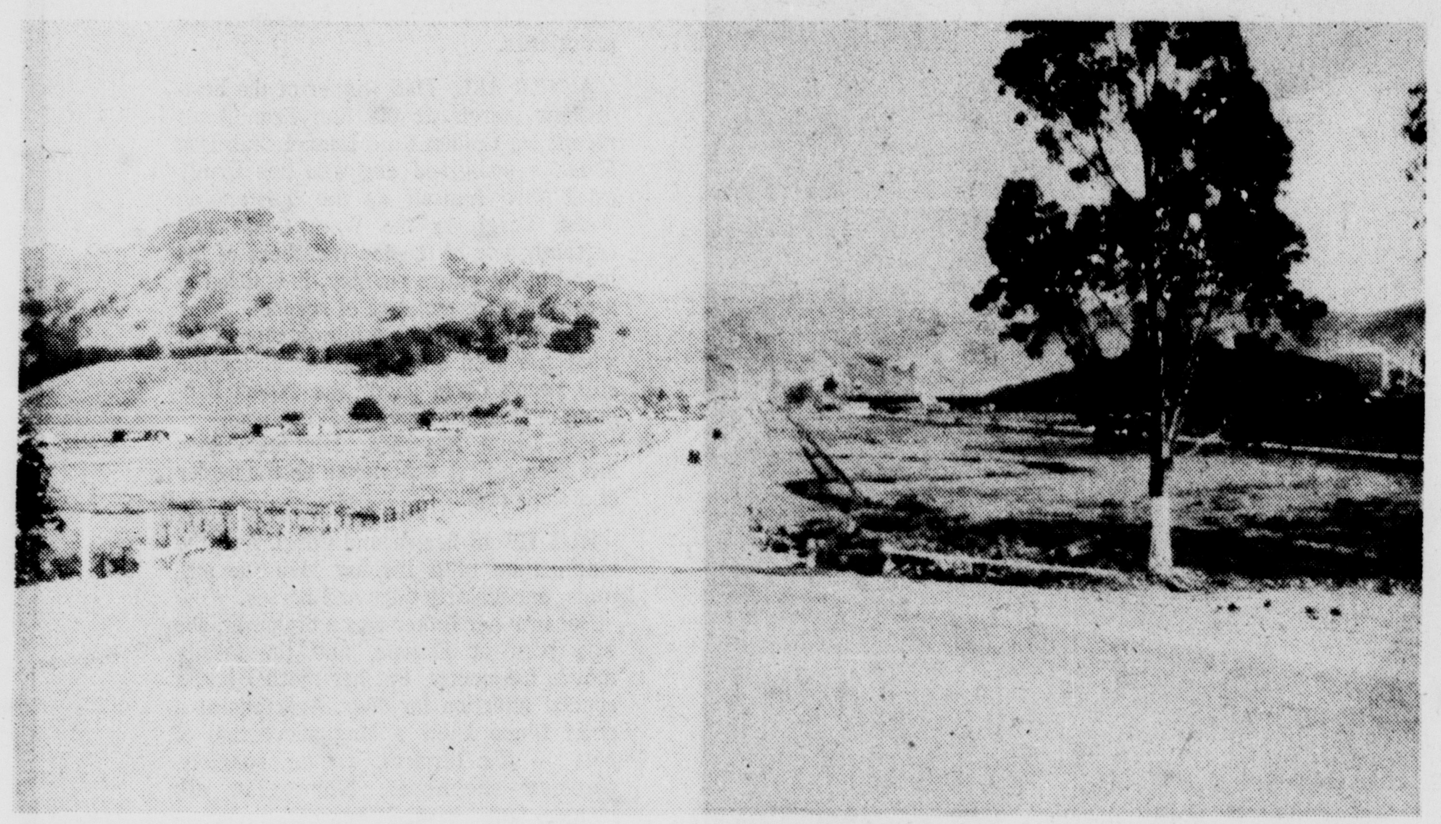
THIS IS WHAT Puerto Suello Hill, south of today's Marin County Civic Center, looked like in the late 1920s. Where once only a few cars passed on two-lanes bounded by white picket fencing and grazing land, today 89,000 cars daily whiz through San Rafael. Post World War II years saw the building of the Marin County Veterans Memorial Building and fairgrounds in the fields, upper right, and the development of small businesses, to the left.



THE TWO-LANE Redwood Highway in 1928 wound north by open fields, left, where the Corte Madera Shopping Center would one day be built, and past the hills that today hold Greenbrae, left center. The next year the state built a two-lane stretch of highway across California Park Hill that for the first time directly connected San Rafael with the roadway pictured above.

ROBERT W. (BOB) HALLIGAN of Marinwood shows part of the vast collection of rare and old photographs of the Redwood Highway that he has collected while compiling a slide show and lecture series on the highway's history. As district information officer for the state Department of Transportation for the nine Bay Area counties, he has the past, present and future of California's highways at his fingertips.

yellow traffic lights on all southbound onramps between Greenbrae and the Golden Gate Bridge, according to Halligan.

THE LIGHTS, TO operate only during peak commute hours, would hold vehicles carrying less than three persons on the ramps until holes in the traffic flow would allow them to merge without causing congestion.

Buses and vehicles, carrying three or more persons, in the meantime, he said, would be allowed to pass to the right, to enter the traffic flow at will.

This form of "preferential treatment" should induce more widespread use of buses and car pools, he said, and at the same time, would save "10 to 15 minutes" in driving time for the driver required to wait "from two to five minutes" at the traffic light.

THE LIGHTS ARE controlled by a computer activated by sensors buried in the pavement that are programmed to record traffic patterns, he explained.

In San Jose the system has been such a success in keeping traffic flowing freely during peak hours that it is now used during busy weekend and Christmas shopping hours, he added.

For the future, Halligan predicts increased use of mass transit — either "rubber tire" such as Marin's Golden Gate Transit bus service, he terms "tremendous," or rail, such as the East Bay's BART.

FREEWAY DIVIDING strips could be converted to exclusive bus use, he said, or to right-of-ways for fixed rail service. The questions is, he added, "if the people want mass transit, will they be willing to pay for it?"

Even in the unlikely event the automobile were to become obsolete, he added, California's giant highway network that connects every town with a population of 5,000 or more, would continue to play an important role in transportation.

Halligan, who grew up in San Francisco, where he attended the Mission Dolores Grammar School and St. James High School, credits his lifelong interest in history to a boyhood past-time of studying historic headstones in the Mission Dolores Cemetery, and to his grandfather, a railroad pioneer.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Thomas J. Lowry, a drummer boy in a regiment from Iowa during the Civil War, survived to become a brakeman for the pioneer Union Pacific Railroad and is pictured standing in the foreground of the well known painting depicting the driving of the golden spike that joined the rails of the first transcontinental railroad in Promontory, Utah, in 1869.

His grandson remembers growing up to his stories of days as a "bootstrap veterinarian" for the federal government on the Wyoming and Colorado plains where one of his colleagues was scalped by Indians and lived to tell the tale. And other stories of his driving a "coach and four" into the court at the Palace Hotel in the 1870s and his election as the mayor of Omaha, Neb.

During the World War II, Bob Halligan spent three years as a midshipman at the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., where he studies mechanical engineering.

WHEN HIS BRIGADE "washed out" at the end of the war, he returned home to finish his studies at the University of San Francisco.

Following two years aboard the Navy cruiser, Juneau, patrolling the eastern coast of Korea during the Korean War, he went to work for the state Division of Highways as a junior civil engineer.

His knowledge of highway design and construction led the state to loan him to the Metropolitan Bay Area Transportation Commission 10 years ago where he first began working with the public.

RETURNING TO the state's employee, he was named public information officer for the Department of Transportation "on a temporary basis" and has been there ever since.

He writes news releases (he credits his skills to USF's creative writing classes) researches, compiles information and acts as a contact man with such organizations as chambers of commerce and the Redwood Empire Association.

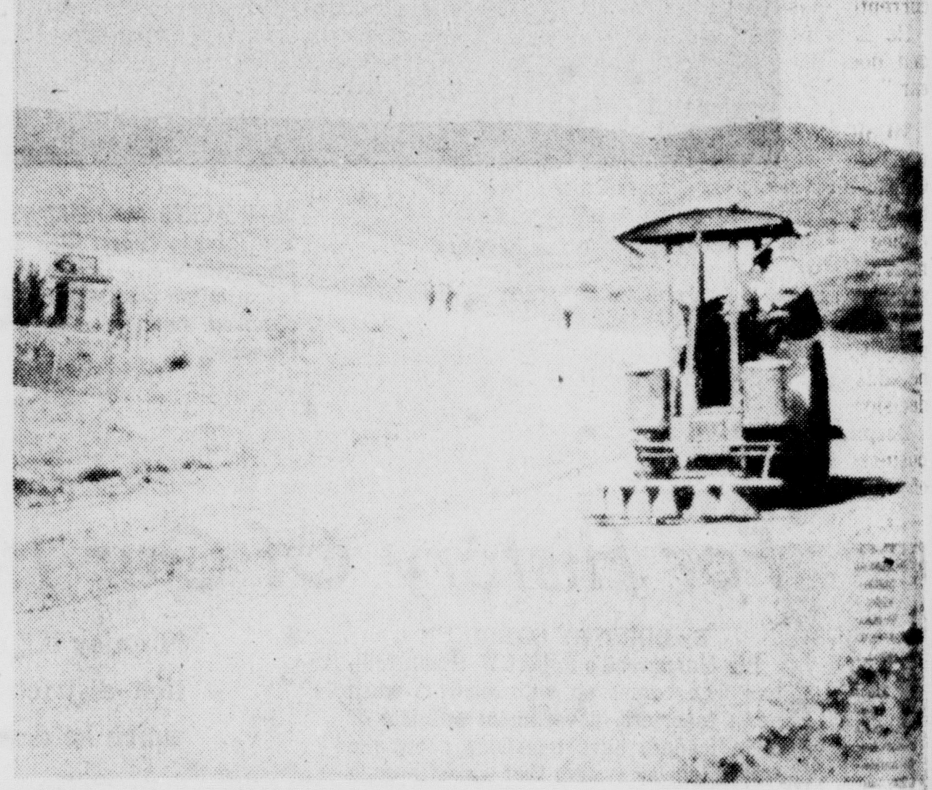
Currently he is working on a bicentennial project with the Daughters of the American Revolution on San Andres Lake.

Following his marriage 13 years ago to the former Wynn Folliard, a Chicagoan, he met skiing, he moved to Marin, where he had visited frequently as a boy to hunt, swim, dance at Larkspur's old Rose Bowl pavillion and scout encampments at Fairfax.

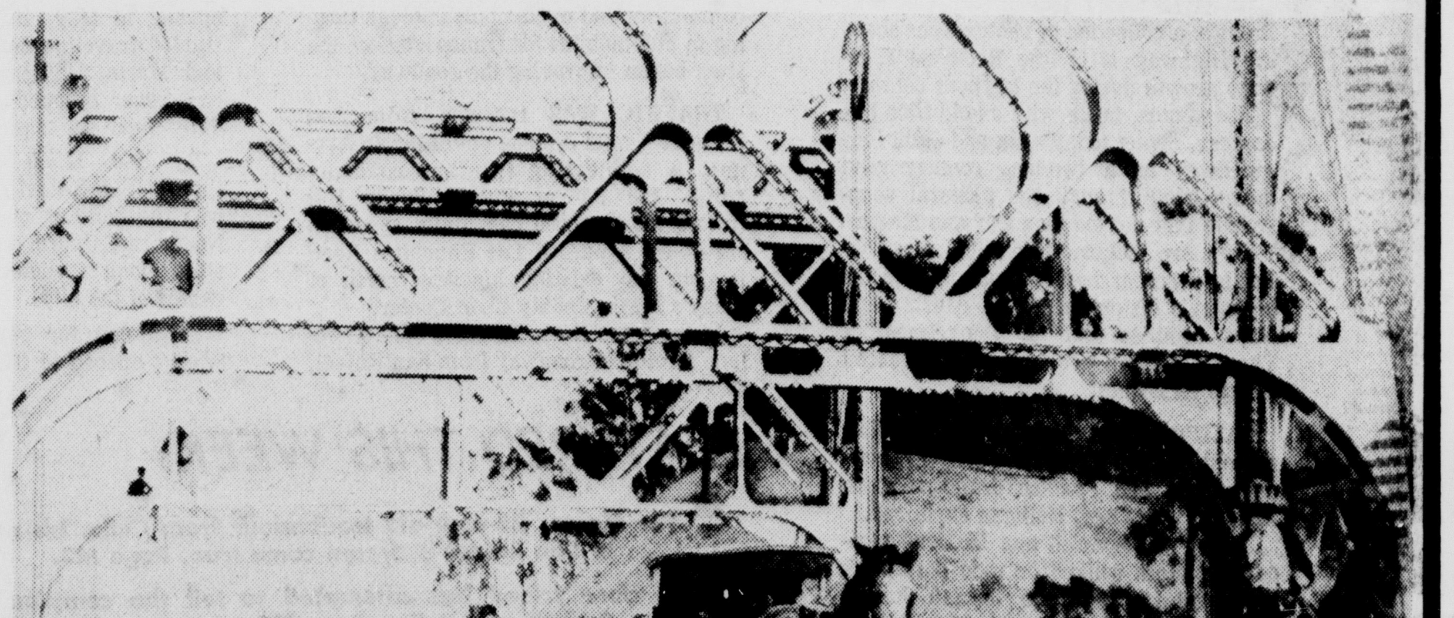
HIS FAMILY which includes three sons, Robert Jr., 11, David, 9, Paul John, 7, and daughter Ellen, 8, spends free time skiing and fishing.

Halligan also devotes his spare time to taking courses in such fields as closed circuit television, video tape recording and studying California's history ("I enjoy it.")

The result: If you have a question about the state's past or its roads, all the way back to Father Junipero Serra, Halligan's the man to ask.



TODAY A GIANT concrete and steel interchange crosses Highway 101 to connect Mill Valley and the Tiburon Peninsula close to where this steam powered compactor was photographed in the early 1920s grading the old "Alto Y." Then the "Y" was indeed Y-shaped, Bob Halligan says, pointing to the roadway, upper left, that ran to San Rafael; the road to the right, center, that extended to Tiburon, and the road in the foreground, that ran to Mill Valley.



A CARAVAN OF costumed celebrants drove horse-drawn rigs and rode high stepping steeds across the Richardson Bay Bridge the day of its opening in the early 1930s. For the first time San Rafael and Sausalito were directly linked by the Redwood Highway that then ran from Sausalito's Bridgeway Boulevard (then Water Street), across this bridge, on to Alto and into San Rafael across California Park Hill.

Young Troubadour From Chile Finds U.S. To His Liking

By DON KEOWN

MARIN LIVING

As a very small child in his native Chile, Juan Guillermo was already dreaming of the day when he would go north to the United States.

And the San Francisco area played a special part in that dream.

"I read about the missions. And about the many new movements that had come out of San Francisco. To me, it sounded like an exciting place to be," he says.

Guillermo's dream has come true.

AFTER EARNING A degree in business administration at the University of Chile in his home city of Santiago, Guillermo did come to the United States. And after a stay in Miami, Fla., where he took further studies in business administration at the University of Miami, he did come West.

Now he lives in San Rafael. And he has not, he says, been disappointed with the United States or its San Francisco Bay Area.

Shelved at least temporarily, however, is his interest in business administration. He earns his living now — "and a good one" — as a troubadour singing romantic songs.

BILLED AS "MEMO," he is heard regularly Friday and Saturday nights at the Peacock Gap Country Club, San Rafael, and also on Fridays at the officers' club at the naval base on Treasure Island.

"Fridays are busy nights," he says. "I have to split the evening between Peacock Gap and Treasure Island."

He recently finished a six-month run at the El Greco Restaurant in San Anselmo. And he has been heard at the Concordia Club in San Francisco, the Windjammer in Tiburon, the Sleeping Lady Cafe in Fairfax and at other places, as well as on television on Channels 4 and 20.

THERE WAS NOTHING in his family background to indicate that he would follow his present career, says Memo.

"We had no one in our family who had ever been in show business," he adds.

His father was an executive with a steel company in Santiago.

"But I started singing around the house as soon as I could speak, and I kept right on singing at school," he says.

HOWEVER, HE DID not sing with the school chorus. "I have always been a single," the dark, smiling 25-year-old says.

In high school, however, he did have a rock 'n roll band, which he gave the English name of We Five because "we sang American and British songs — Beatle tunes and that sort of thing."

Memo's first instrument was the bass, and from that he moved on to the guitar, which is now his instrument. But he is currently mastering the piano.

He is self-taught on the instruments, and does not read music, playing "by ear."

MUSIC WAS SET aside temporarily while he studied at the University of Chile. And when he then came north to the United States, Miami was a natural choice as his destination because his married sister had been living there for several years.

Was it hard to leave Chile and his parents? "Very hard," he admits. But, he adds, he has no regrets regarding his decision.

Despite the post-graduate courses in business administration at the University of Miami, when he moved on to California it was with the definite intention of returning to music and of earning his living as a musician.

HE EXPLAINS THE move across the country: "There were so many Latins living around Miami that it wasn't all that different from Chile. I wanted to go some place where I could truly get to know North Americans and their way of life."

He landed in San Rafael, he says, because a friend also from Chile was living here.

Memo settled down to some hard practice upon the guitar — "like crazy," he says.

It was about a month before he found his first job — at the El Greco. Other engagements came soon thereafter.

MEMO MIXES romantic Latin sons with the American hits of such composers and singers as Cat Stevens, Elton Young, John Denver and Elvis Presley. He furnishes his own accompaniment upon his 12-string guitar. And he owns his own amplifier and other stage equipment.

English, he notes, presented no great problem for him because all high school students in Chile are required to study the language.

His audiences, however, seem to favor the romantic Latin songs, he admits, "although they enjoy the others."

THIS, HE SUSPECTS, "is because Spanish is such a romantic language. The words just seem to sound like love, even when you don't understand the language."

As far as he is concerned, the music is the thing, regardless of the language. "I don't learn a song unless I like it. And then it doesn't make any difference, whether I am singing it in Spanish or in English."

But, he adds, he has been in the USA long enough now that he finds himself "thinking in English, whereas I used to think in Spanish."

Still, "when I go back to Chile for a visit, I still feel very much a Chilean."

THE EMPANADAS (a type of turnover with meat filling) of his homeland remain Memo's favorite food, however, "and when I go back to Chile, I fill up on them."

Unfortunately, he doesn't cook, and thus can't fix his own empanadas, no matter how great his craving.

His parents, he says, no longer try to persuade him to remain in Chile. "They know now that I am happy where I am, and that I am doing well," he says.

"Doing well," includes, he says, two cars, and "a nice apartment" which he shares with his manager, Marcelo Ojeva, 29, who also comes from Chile.

OJEVA WAS, MEMO says, "a very big promoter — the biggest — in Chile" before coming to this country. And here he handles a number of bands, as well as troubadour Memo.

While Memo counts himself fortunate to have had the opportunities and attained the things he already has, he thinks bigger things are on the immediate horizon for him.

For one thing, he believes some of the larger clubs are about to open up to him. There have been indications of interest.

He and Ojeva are also looking into the possibilities of recordings.

BUT THEIR BIG project is a hoped-for invitation to perform at the outdoor Festival of Vina del Mar in February of next year, back in their native Chile.

Memo's eyes flash with excitement: "Man, that is a big festival — 20,000 people for a show, and televised all over Chile. When you play three, you've made it in Chile."

Then, too, Memo and Ojeva are making plans for a European tour later next year.

"That is another dream of mine — to see Europe," says the singer.

SPAIN AND SWEDEN are two countries he mentions as especially intriguing.

But when he is asked to name his personal favorites among the current musical groups, he selects an English comba, the BeeGees. "I like them for their mellow sound," he says.

While playing and singing, Memo is more likely to be clad in "mod" western attire than in traditional Latin wear.

He has been married once, but he's single now. There were no children. And his career commands all his considerable energies and enthusiasms now.

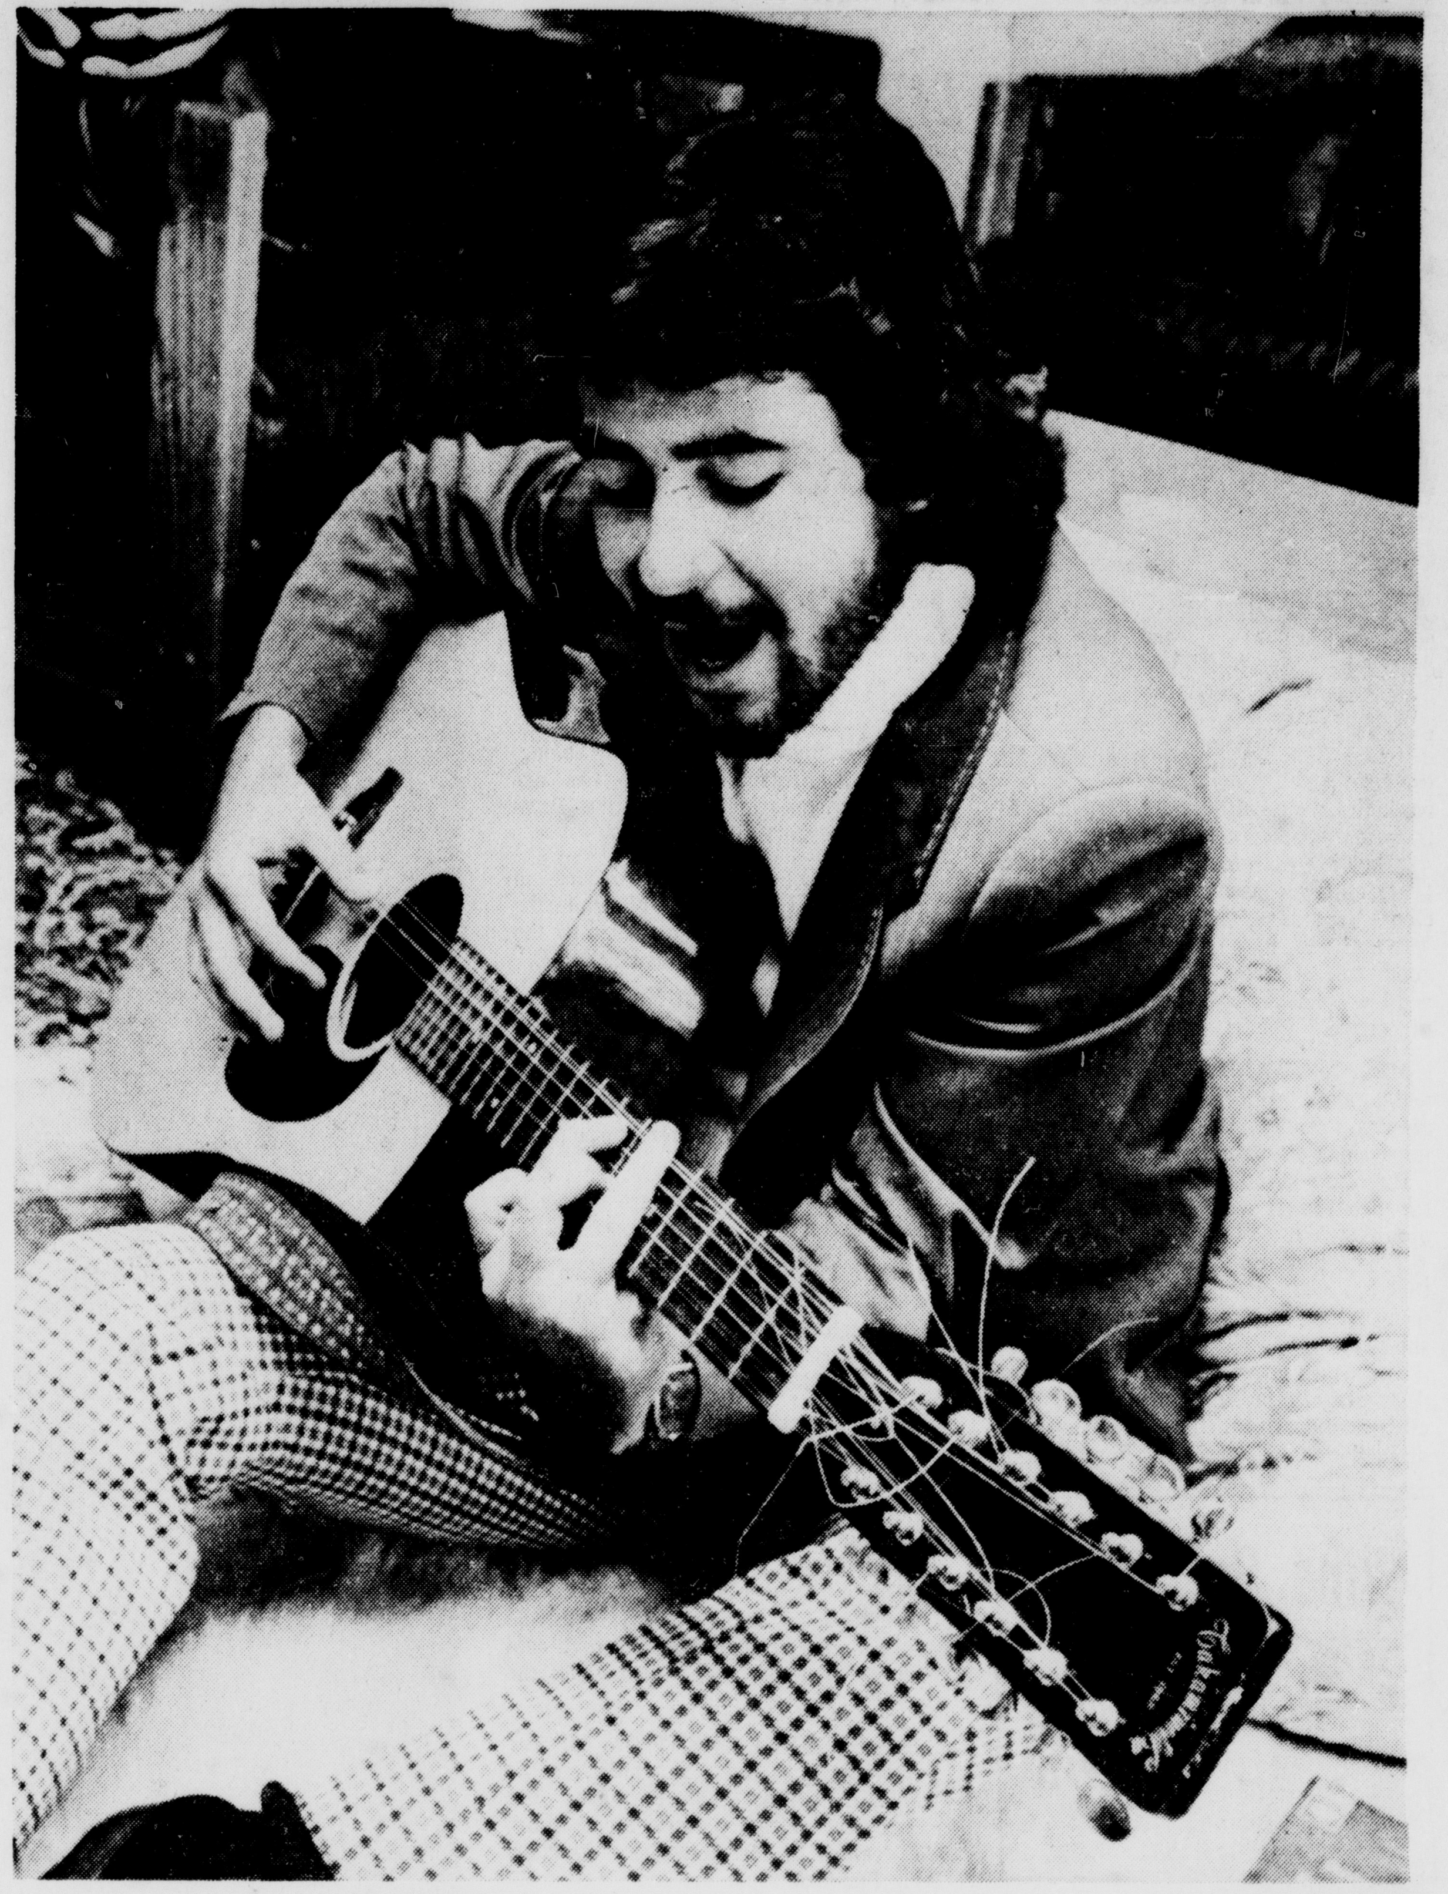
HE HASN'T YET reached the point where the mail brings him the deluge of fan letters that come with stardom. But he did receive one letter he treasures, after he had contributed his talent to the entertainment of the visually handicapped in San Francisco.

The letter came from Ethel Mayer, regional program director for the National Association for Visually Handicapped, and it read in part:

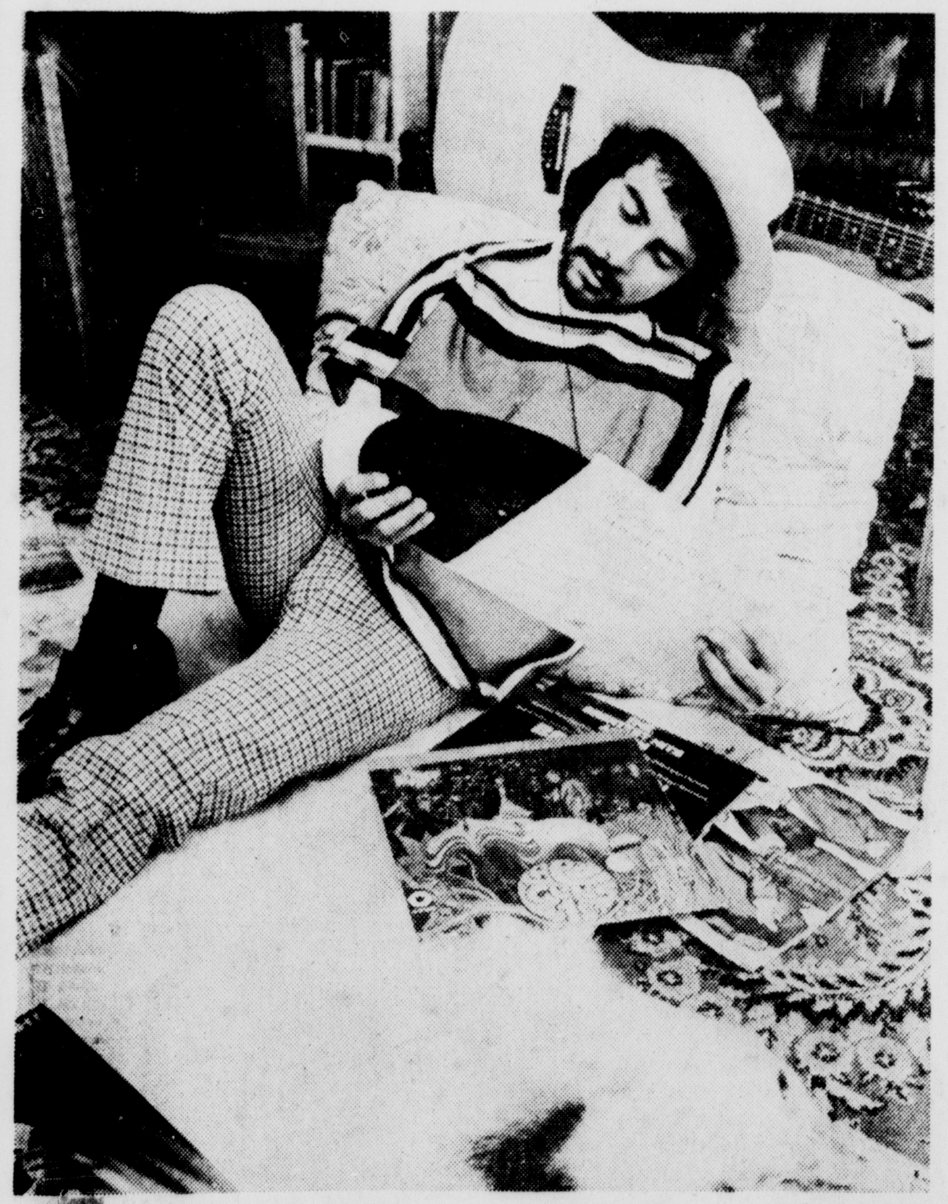
"Every once in awhile in this kind of work, I have the extreme pleasure of meeting someone like you. Everything then seems worthwhile. You can't imagine the lasting joy created at NAVH by your music. . .

"Lisa (a child of 12), who sang with you, will never forget you. Through your kindness she has become approachable and we can hope to help her more quickly. It was an exciting breakthrough — something beautiful to see."

"Now that really thrilled me," says Memo. "I'll go back there just as often as they want me!"



JUAN GUILLERMO, or Memo as he is known professionally, is his own accompaniest on the 12-string guitar, an instrument that he first learned in his native Chile. He doesn't read music and plays by ear, but he has now taken up the piano. Here in his San Rafael apartment Memo rehearses for his performances at the Peacock Gap Country Club Terrace Room and elsewhere in the Bay Area.



IN THE COSTUME of the huaso, or Chilean cowboy, Memo relaxes with some recordings. He holds a Chilean folk song, "Los Huasos Quincheros." The records before him include one by his personal favorites, Britain's BeeGees.

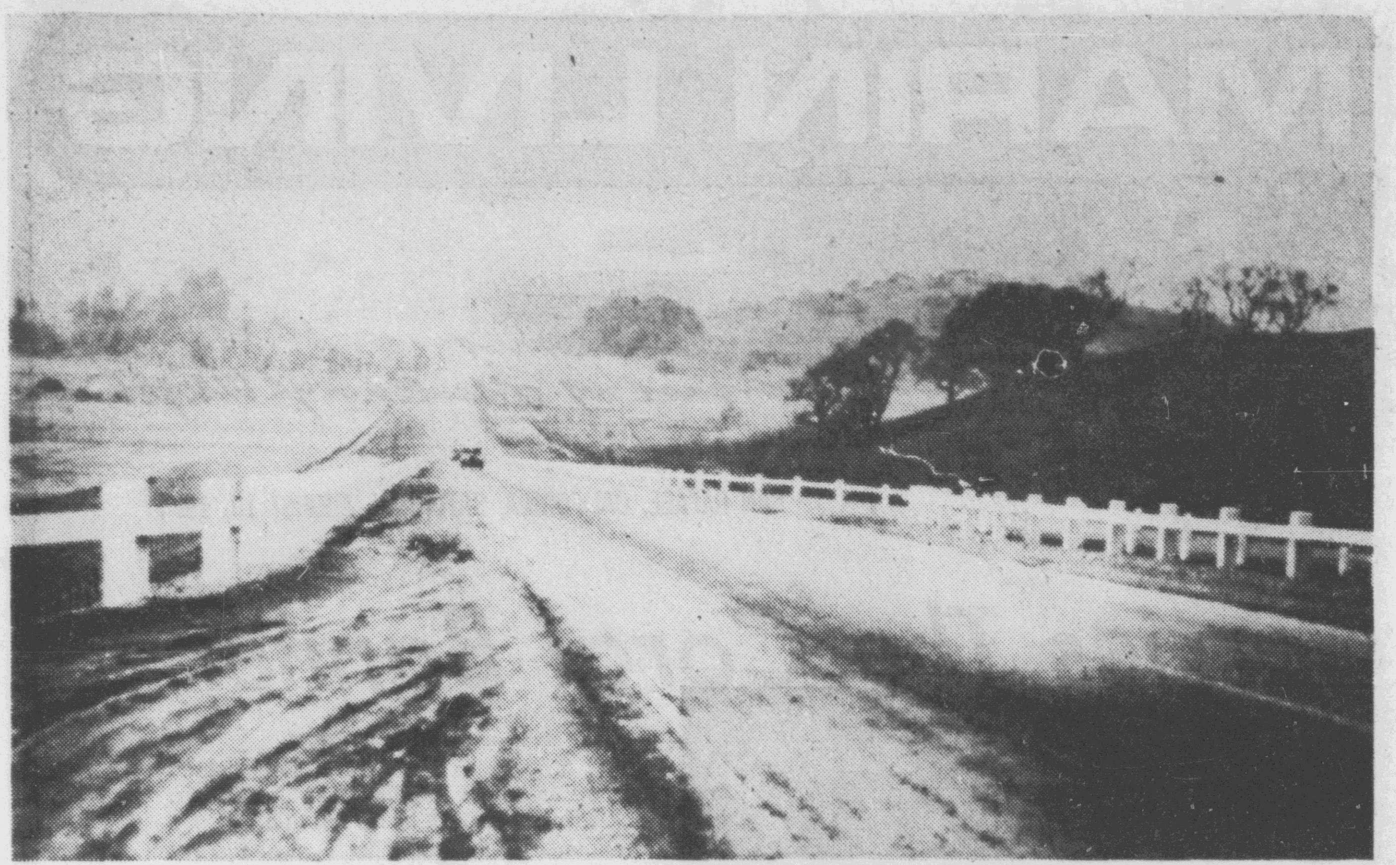
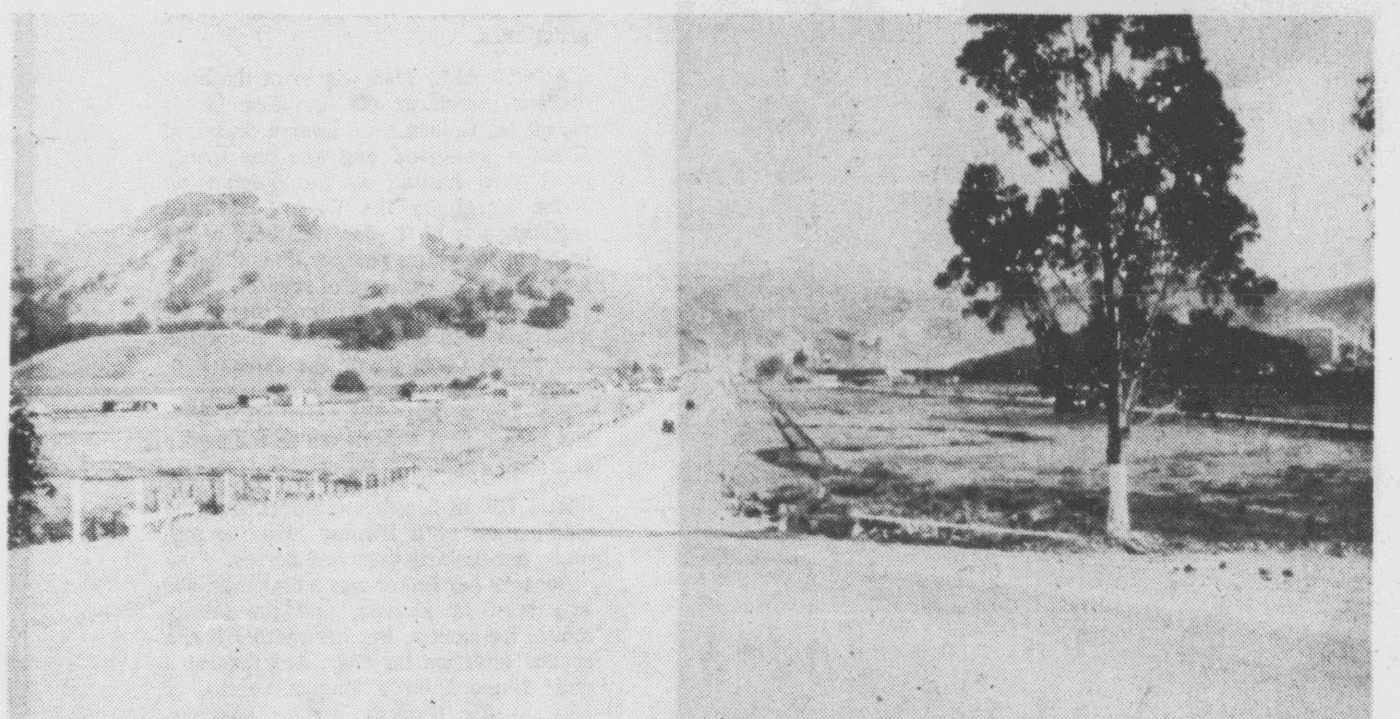
THIS ABSTRACT self-portrait is one of more than 30 oil paintings by Mrs. Thomas Marshall of Kentfield that are being shown at the San Rafael Public Library through August. Mrs. Marshall uses an original technique of dripping turpentine onto canvas, then blotting with paper towels to achieve unusual textures and effects.



THIS IS WHAT Puerto Suello Hill, south of today's Marin County Civic Center, looked like in the late 1920s. Where once only a few cars passed on two-lanes bounded by white picket fencing and grazing land, today 89,000 cars daily whiz through San Rafael. Post World War II years saw the building of the Marin County Veterans Memorial Building and fairgrounds in the fields, upper right, and the development of small businesses, to the left.



THE TWO-LANE Redwood Highway in 1928 wound north by open fields, left, where the Corte Madera Shopping Center would one day be built, and past the hills that today hold Greenbrae, left center. The next year the state built a two-lane stretch of highway across California Park Hill that for the first time directly connected San Rafael with the roadway pictured above.

ROBERT W. (BOB) HALLIGAN of Marinwood shows part of the vast collection of rare and old photographs of the Redwood Highway that he has collected while compiling a slide show and lecture series on the highway's history. As district information officer for the state Department of Transportation for the nine Bay Area counties, he has the past, present and future of California's highways at his fingertips.

Halligan Knows His Highways, Past, Present, Future

yellow traffic lights on all southbound onramps between Greenbrae and the Golden Gate Bridge, according to Halligan.

THE LIGHTS, TO operate only during peak commute hours, would hold vehicles carrying less than three persons on the ramps until holes in the traffic flow would allow them to merge without causing congestion.

Buses and vehicles, carrying three or more persons, in the meantime, he said, would be allowed to pass to the right, to enter the traffic flow at will.

This form of "preferential treatment" should induce more widespread use of buses and car pools, he said, and at the same time, would save "10 to 15 minutes" in driving time for the driver required to wait "from two to five minutes" at the traffic light.

THE LIGHTS ARE controlled by a computer activated by sensors buried in the pavement that are programmed to record traffic patterns, he explained.

In San Jose the system has been such a success in keeping traffic flowing freely during peak hours that it is now used during busy weekend and Christmas shopping hours, he added.

For the future, Halligan predicts increased use of mass transit — either "rubber tire" such as Marin's Golden Gate Transit bus service, he terms "tremendous," or rail, such as the East Bay's BART.

FREEWAY DIVIDING strips could be converted to exclusive bus use, he said, or to right-of-ways for fixed rail service. The questions is, he added, "if the people want mass transit, will they be willing to pay for it?"

Even in the unlikely event the automobile were to become obsolete, he added, California's giant highway network that connects every town with a population of 5,000 or more, would continue to play an important role in transportation.

Halligan, who grew up in San Francisco, where he attended the Mission Dolores Grammar School and St. James High School, credits his lifelong interest in history to a boyhood past-time of studying historic headstones in the Mission Dolores Cemetery, and to his grandfather, a railroad pioneer.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Thomas J. Lowry, a drummer boy in a regiment from Iowa during the Civil War, survived to become a brakeman for the pioneer Union Pacific Railroad and is pictured standing in the foreground of the well known painting depicting the driving of the golden spike that joined the rails of the first transcontinental railroad in Promontory, Utah, in 1869.

His grandson remembers growing up to his stories of days as a "bootstrap veterinarian" for the federal government on the Wyoming and Colorado plains where one of his colleagues was scalped by Indians and lived to tell the tale. And other stories of his driving a "coach and four" into the court at the Palace Hotel in the 1870s and his election as the mayor of Omaha, Neb.

During the World War II, Bob Halligan spent three years as a midshipman at the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., where he studies mechanical engineering.

WHEN HIS BRIGADE "washed out" at the end of the war, he returned home to finish his studies at the University of San Francisco.

Following two years aboard the Navy cruiser, Juneau, patrolling the eastern coast of Korea during the Korean War, he went to work for the state Division of Highways as a junior civil engineer.

His knowledge of highway design and construction led the state to loan him to the Metropolitan Bay Area Transportation Commission 10 years ago where he first began working with the public.

RETURNING TO the state's employee, he was named public information officer for the Department of Transportation "on a temporary basis" and has been there ever since.

He writes news releases (he credits his skills to USF's creative writing classes) researches, compiles information and acts as a contact man with such organizations as chambers of commerce and the Redwood Empire Association.

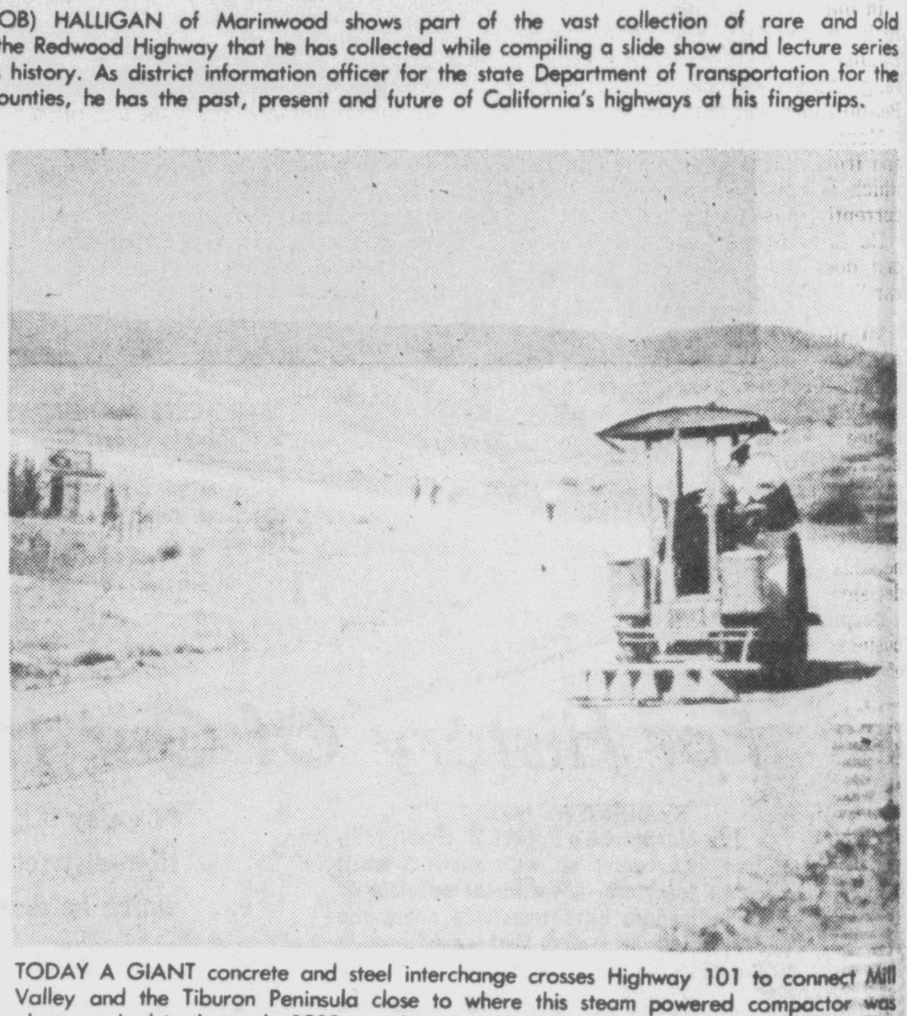
Currently he is working on a bicentennial project with the Daughters of the American Revolution on San Andres Lake.

Following his marriage 13 years ago to the former Wynn Folliard, a Chicagoan, he met skiing, he moved to Marin, where he had visited frequently as a boy to hunt, swim, dance at Larkspur's old Rose Bowl pavillion and scout encampments at Fairfax.

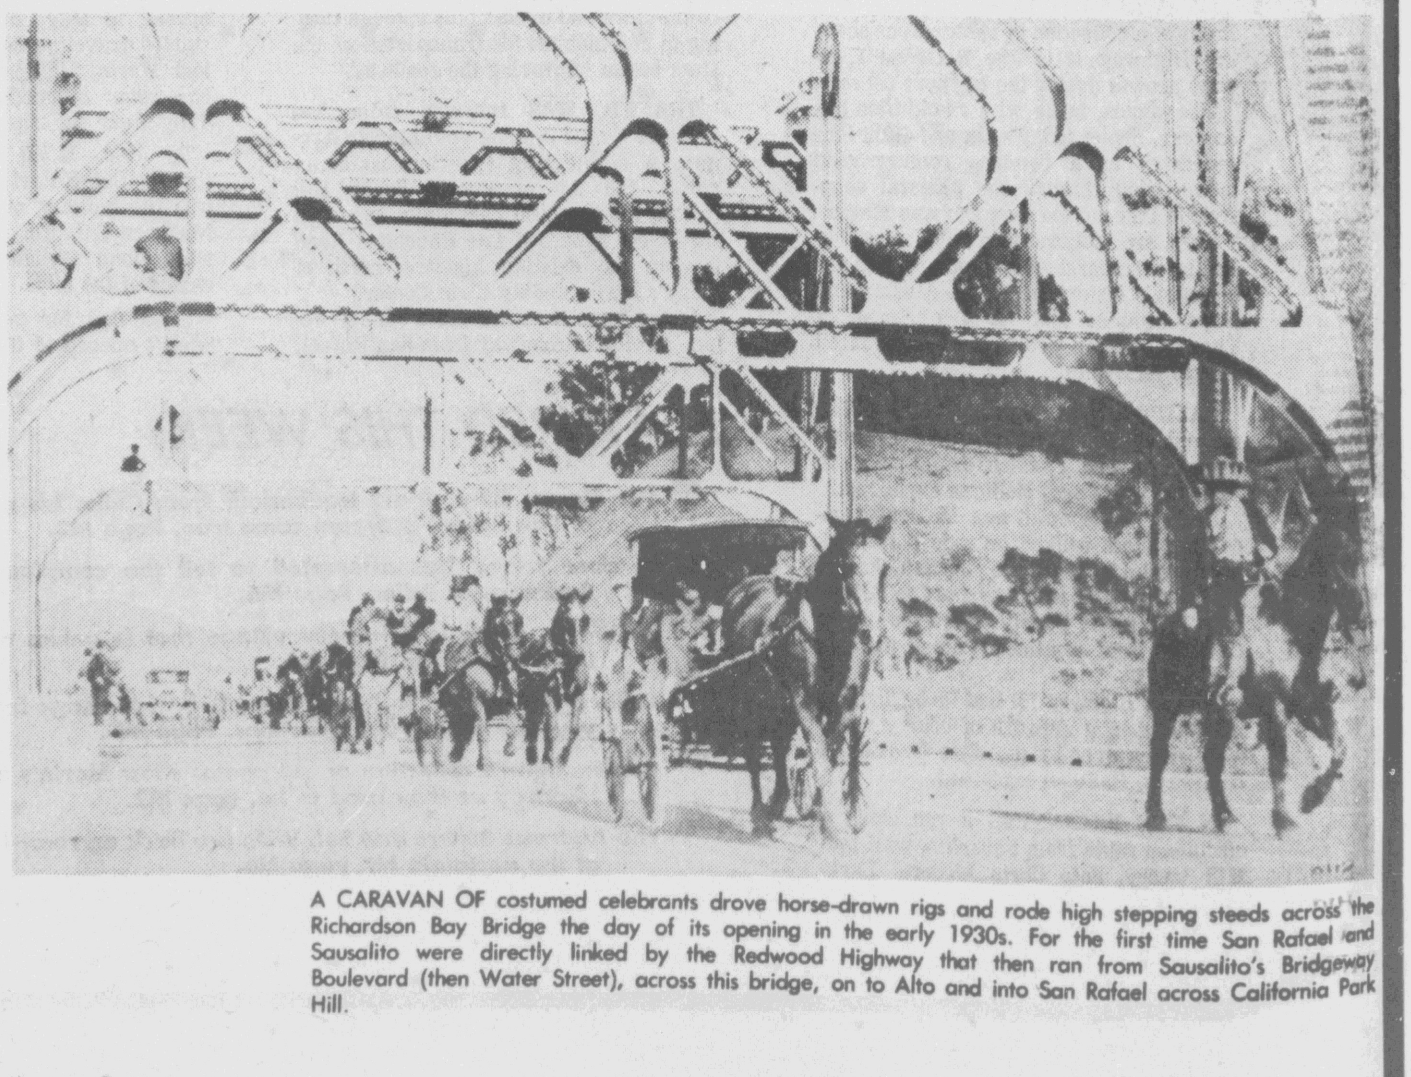
HIS FAMILY which includes three sons, Robert Jr., 11, David, 9, Paul John, 7, and daughter Ellen, 8, spends free time skiing and fishing.

Halligan also devotes his spare time to taking courses in such fields as closed circuit television, video tape recording and studying California's history ("I enjoy it.")

The result: If you have a question about the state's past or its roads, all the way back to Father Junipero Serra, Halligan's the man to ask.



TODAY A GIANT concrete and steel interchange crosses Highway 101 to connect Mill Valley and the Tiburon Peninsula close to where this steam powered compactor was photographed in the early 1920s grading the old "Alto Y." Then the "Y" was indeed Y-shaped, Bob Halligan says, pointing to the roadway, upper left, that ran to San Rafael; the road to the right, center, that extended to Tiburon, and the road in the foreground, that ran to Mill Valley.



A CARAVAN OF costumed celebrants drove horse-drawn rigs and rode high stepping steeds across the Richardson Bay Bridge the day of its opening in the early 1930s. For the first time San Rafael and Sausalito were directly linked by the Redwood Highway that then ran from Sausalito's Bridgeway Boulevard (then Water Street), across this bridge, on to Alto and into San Rafael across California Park Hill.

Mr. Snowshoes Has Proven Himself The Best Corgi In West

"They are extremely loyal, very intelligent, quite cooperative and very, very clean," she says. "They are not dogs to wander, and they stay home. They're good with children. And yet they make good watchdogs, because they are very protective."

MRS. HAYWARD says that she often walks alone with her dogs "and they offer a friendly greeting to anyone we meet along the path."

But, she adds, should she sit down, then the two Corgis won't permit anyone to approach her.

"They stay right there, and sensing that I'm relatively helpless while seated, won't let anyone come even close to me," she says.

The Welsh Corgi falls into the working dog category in American Kennel Club classifications. Actually, there are two distinct kinds of Corgis, the Pembroke (to which Mr. Snowshoes and Mab belong) and the Cardigan type. The two are similar in conformation, but the Pembroke has a short tail.

PEMBROKES WERE introduced to Wales by the Flemish in 1107, while the Cardigans were brought to Wales by the Celts much earlier — in about 1200 B.C.

Welsh mythology, Mrs. Hayward tells us, has it that the Corgis used to live in the woods where they served as steeds of the little people or leprechauns who rode them in the night. The "saddle marks" on the little dogs' backs were responsible for the old tale.

Ironically, Welsh Corgis are scarce in Wales today.

"THAT IS BECAUSE the English discovered them about 30 years ago and began buying them all up," Mrs. Hayward relates. "The Welsh tend to be quite cross about that."

Today the Corgi is known as "the queen's dog" because of Queen Elizabeth's fondness for the breed.

In this country, says Mrs. Hayward, Corgis do not rate as one of the more popular breeds.

"This is because they are something of a dog person's dog," she says. "People who are not around dogs a great deal tend not to know very much about the Corgi."

SOME POPULARIZATION for the Welsh Corgi in America came from the Walt Disney film, "Little Boy Lost." The canine star of that picture, incidentally, was trained by Mr. Snowshoes' handler, Doug Bundock.

While the two Corgis are definitely the responsibility of Mrs. Hayward, her husband, Frank, a vice president with Coldwell Banker and Company, shares her interest in and enthusiasm for the dogs and for dog shows.

"While he doesn't have the time to work with the dogs, he is very much involved in everything," his wife says.

THE TWO, Marin residents for 25 years, belong to the Golden Gate Pembroke Welsh Corgi Fanciers, and to the Marin County Dog Training Club.

And what is there that sets Mr. Snowshoes and other champions apart?

"Well, the conformation has to be there," says Mrs. Hayward. "But there has to be something more — some extra quality. You find it in people, too. The super champion has something special that can't quite be put into words."

And what lies ahead for Mr. Showshoes?

THE MARIN CORGI is still a very young dog with a long show ring career ahead, followed by service as a stud, Mrs. Hayward notes.

Does that show ring career include competition in the greatest of all the American dog shows, Westminster?

Perhaps, says Mr. Snowshoes' owner. But there is a problem. She refuses to entrust her dog to the baggage compartment of a plane.

"So if we are going to go East to compete, we'll have to figure out some other way of traveling," she says. "A train, or an automobile, are possibilities."

ALTHOUGH THE East is home to many fine dogs and to the famed Cote de Neige Kennel of New York State that is responsible for the foundation stock for some very fine Corgis, Mrs. Hayward is confident her Mr. Snowshoes could hold his own with the finest from the other sections of the country.

But above and beyond the honors already won and yet to come, first and foremost for Mrs. Hayward is the pleasure that Mr. Snowshoes and Mab have given her and her husband simply by their presence in their home.

Those Americans who have not yet discovered the Welsh Corgi are missing out, she says, on something very special and unique.

Have you even wondered about the difference between lager beer and ale?

Both lager and ale are malt beverages that are fermented from grain - usually barley. In the beginning, the manufacturing processes are identical; the grain is steeped in water until it begins to sprout and the starches in the grain turn into sugar. The liquid is then strained into a brew kettle and hops (tiny blossoms of the hop vine) are added for flavor. After a few hours of brewing the mixture it is again strained, yeast is added, and fermentation begins.

It is the yeast which makes the difference between lager and ale because there are two types of fermentation. Lager is produced from a process called "bottom fermentation" because the yeast settles to the bottom of the fermentation vat after it has completed its work. In fact, the word lager comes from a German word meaning storing or resting.

Ale, on the other hand, is a "top-fermented" beverage. The yeast used in the process of making ale rises to the top after fermentation. Ale has a sharper taste than lager and a stronger flavor of hops. Stout and porter are variations of ale.

MARIN LIVING

By DON KEOWN

As a very small child in his native Chile, Juan Guillermo was already dreaming of the day when he would go north to the United States.

And the San Francisco area played a special part in that dream.

"I read about the missions. And about the many new movements that had come out of San Francisco. To me, it sounded like an exciting place to be," he says.

Guillermo's dream has come true.

AFTER EARNING A degree in business administration at the University of Chile in his home city of Santiago, Guillermo did come to the United States. And after a stay in Miami, Fla., where he took further studies in business administration at the University of Miami, he did come West.

Now he lives in San Rafael. And he has not, he says, been disappointed with the United States or its San Francisco Bay Area.

Shelved at least temporarily, however, is his interest in business administration. He earns his living now — "and a good one" — as a troubadour singing romantic songs.

BILLED AS "MEMO," he is heard regularly Friday and Saturday nights at the Peacock Gap Country Club, San Rafael, and also on Fridays at the officers' club at the naval base on Treasure Island.

"Fridays are busy nights," he says. "I have to split the evening between Peacock Gap and Treasure Island."

He recently finished a six-month run at the El Greco Restaurant in San Anselmo. And he has been heard at the Concordia Club in San Francisco, the Windjammer in Tiburon, the Sleeping Lady Cafe in Fairfax and at other places, as well as on television on Channels 4 and 20.

THERE WAS NOTHING in his family background to indicate that he would follow his present career, says Memo.

"We had no one in our family who had ever been in show business," he adds.

His father was an executive with a steel company in Santiago.

"But I started singing around the house as soon as I could speak, and I kept right on singing at school," he says.

HOWEVER, HE DID not sing with the school chorus. "I have always been a single," the dark, smiling 25-year-old says.

In high school, however, he did have a rock 'n roll band, which he gave the English name of We Five because "we sang American and British songs — Beatle tunes and that sort of thing."

Memo's first instrument was the bass, and from that he moved on to the guitar, which is now his instrument. But he is currently mastering the piano.

He is self-taught on the instruments, and does not read music, playing "by ear."

MUSIC WAS SET aside temporarily while he studied at the University of Chile. And when he then came north to the United States, Miami was a natural choice as his destination because his married sister had been living there for several years.

Was it hard to leave Chile and his parents? "Very hard," he admits. But, he adds, he has no regrets regarding his decision.

Despite the post-graduate courses in business administration at the University of Miami, when he moved on to California it was with the definite intention of returning to music and of earning his living as a musician.

HE EXPLAINS THE move across the country: "There were so many Latins living around Miami that it wasn't all that different from Chile. I wanted to go some place where I could truly get to know North Americans and their way of life."

He landed in San Rafael, he says, because a friend also from Chile was living here.

Memo settled down to some hard practice upon the guitar — "like crazy," he says.

It was about a month before he found his first job — at the El Greco. Other engagements came soon thereafter.

MEMO MIXES romantic Latin sons with the American hits of such composers and singers as Cat Stevens, Elton Young, John Denver and Elvis Presley. He furnishes his own accompaniment upon his 12-string guitar. And he owns his own amplifier and other stage equipment.

English, he notes, presented no great problem for him because all high school students in Chile are required to study the language.

His audiences, however, seem to favor the romantic Latin songs, he admits, "although they enjoy the others."

THIS, HE SUSPECTS, "is because Spanish is such a romantic language. The words just seem to sound like love, even when you don't understand the language."

As far as he is concerned, the music is the thing, regardless of the language. "I don't learn a song unless I like it. And then it doesn't make any difference, whether I am singing it in Spanish or in English."

But, he adds, he has been in the USA long enough now that he finds himself "thinking in English, whereas I used to think in Spanish."

Still, "when I go back to Chile for a visit, I still feel very much a Chilean."

THE EMPANADAS (a type of turnover with meat filling) of his homeland remain Memo's favorite food, however, "and when I go back to Chile, I fill up on them."

Unfortunately, he doesn't cook, and thus can't fix his own empanadas, no matter how great his craving.

His parents, he says, no longer try to persuade him to remain in Chile. "They know now that I am happy where I am, and that I am doing well," he says.

"Doing well," includes, he says, two cars, and "a nice apartment" which he shares with his manager, Marcelo Ojeva, 29, who also comes from Chile.

OJEVA WAS, MEMO says, "a very big promoter — the biggest — in Chile" before coming to this country. And here he handles a number of bands, as well as troubadour Memo.

While Memo counts himself fortunate to have had the opportunities and attained the things he already has, he thinks bigger things are on the immediate horizon for him.

For one thing, he believes some of the larger clubs are about to open up to him. There have been indications of interest.

He and Ojeva are also looking into the possibilities of recordings.

BUT THEIR BIG project is a hoped-for invitation to perform at the outdoor Festival of Vina del Mar in February of next year, back in their native Chile.

Memo's eyes flash with excitement: "Man, that is a big festival — 20,000 people for a show, and televised all over Chile. When you play three, you've made it in Chile."

Then, too, Memo and Ojeva are making plans for a European tour later next year.

"That is another dream of mine — to see Europe," says the singer.

SPAIN AND SWEDEN are two countries he mentions as especially intriguing.

But when he is asked to name his personal favorites among the current musical groups, he selects an English comba, the BeeGees. "I like them for their mellow sound," he says.

While playing and singing, Memo is more likely to be clad in "mod" western attire than in traditional Latin wear.

He has been married once, but he's single now. There were no children. And his career commands all his considerable energies and enthusiasms now.

HE HASN'T YET reached the point where the mail brings him the deluge of fan letters that come with stardom. But he did receive one letter he treasures, after he had contributed his talent to the entertainment of the visually handicapped in San Francisco.

The letter came from Ethel Mayer, regional program director for the National Association for Visually Handicapped, and it read in part:

"Every once in awhile in this kind of work, I have the extreme pleasure of meeting someone like you. Everything then seems worthwhile. You can't imagine the lasting joy created at NAVH by your music. . .

"Lisa (a child of 12), who sang with you, will never forget you. Through your kindness she has become approachable and we can hope to help her more quickly. It was an exciting breakthrough — something beautiful to see."

"Now that really thrilled me," says Memo. "I'll go back there just as often as they want me!"

JUAN GUILLERMO, or Memo as he is known professionally, is his own accompaniest on the 12-string guitar, an instrument that he first learned in his native Chile. He doesn't read music and plays by ear, but he has now taken up the piano. Here in his San Rafael apartment Memo rehearses for his performances at the Peacock Gap Country Club Terrace Room and elsewhere in the Bay Area.

IN THE COSTUME of the huaso, or Chilean cowboy, Memo relaxes with some recordings. He holds a Chilean folk song, "Los Huasos Quincheros." The records before him include one by his personal favorites, Britain's BeeGees.

Sir Clough's Fairytale Village In Wales

TRAVEL PAGE

By ROBIN WRIGHT

But Sir Clough Williams-Ellis tops them all. He collects buildings.

It all started out as a dream, much like Tolkien's Middle Earth or Alice's Wonderland. Sir Clough just wanted to turn a tiny tip of his brooding northern Wales into a lighthearted baroque holiday village, something along the lines of romantic Portofino.

BUT INSTEAD OF words, the dreamer decided to use "fallen buildings" to construct his whimsical village. So, stone by stone over the past half-century, the spirited Welshman has built his fantasy. And now, in this medieval and mountainous land, there is a fairytale village of retrieved architectural relics, with a 17th century Town Hall here, a baroque lighthouse there, and the timbers of an old British warship for extra flavor.

In all, there now are dozens of cottages, homes and mini-mansions spread around a renovated old family estate. Most of the structures are Mediterranean in flavor and centuries old in style.

In fact, some of the stones that have gone into the rebuilding can be traced as far back as the 1100s.

THUS WHAT STARTED out as a dream has become much more. To the many who pilgrimage here every year it has become an inspiration, a sanctuary and an enchanting architectural eccentricity.

Sir Noel Coward wrote "Blithe Spirit" during a one-week stay at Portmeirion, and such notables as George Bernard Shaw, Bertrand Russell, John Steinbeck, Lewis Mumford, H.G. Wells, David Lloyd George, King Zog of Albania, Thor Heyerdahl and an assortment of British royalty have taken refuge here.

Even super-modernist architect Frank Lloyd Wright came by "taking it all without a blink," according to Sir Clough.

THAT MAY BE hard to believe. This secluded almost-island of retrieved arches, terraces, statues, cottages, gazebos, stairways, ponds, gardens, fountains, walkways and towers is one up even on Middle Earth or Wonderland. Yet it is livable.

Open most of the year as a hotel, restaurant, and — or curiosity, Portmeirion is a classic holiday treat — and retreat.

Considering the value of this unique museum-village, the prices are reasonable. Rates very from about $12 for a single room with breakfast to $35 for a double with full pension. The prices of the separate family cottages vary on a higher scale.

BUT PORTMEIRION is not just a resort.

Besides the main mansion-hotel and stables-turned-annex, the village is complete with restaurants, clothing and miscellaneous shops in a cobbled square, tennis courts, pools, lounges, beach front, and a Town Hall that sponsors movies, dances, exhibitions, and concerts. Some activities are restricted to guests, although several are also open to casual visitors.

The background setting is as impishly eccentric as the main complex, with such touches as a gold mine abandoned after a 200-yard tunnel turned up only a single nugget, or a handful of authentic beachfront caves ideal for adventure.

AND SPRINKLED throughout the peninsula are gardens showing off 20 varieties of rhododendrons, thousands of hydrangeas, palms, cypresses, ginkgo, magnolia and eucalyptus trees. It's a colorful woodland with an almost enchanted air.

As Lewis Mumford once described it: "Portmeirion is a folly in the 18th century architectural manner; indeed, a folly piled upon folly, as in an uninhibited dream.

"But the total effect is relaxing and often enchanting, now more than ever, since the buildings contrast happily to the rigid irrationalities and the calculated follies of our so-called Nuclear Age."

The result of Sir Clough's "dancing on the rigidity of principle" is a properly British fantasyland, a peninsula — an island by spirit if not quite by land — that has improvised on the past to make a dream into a reality.

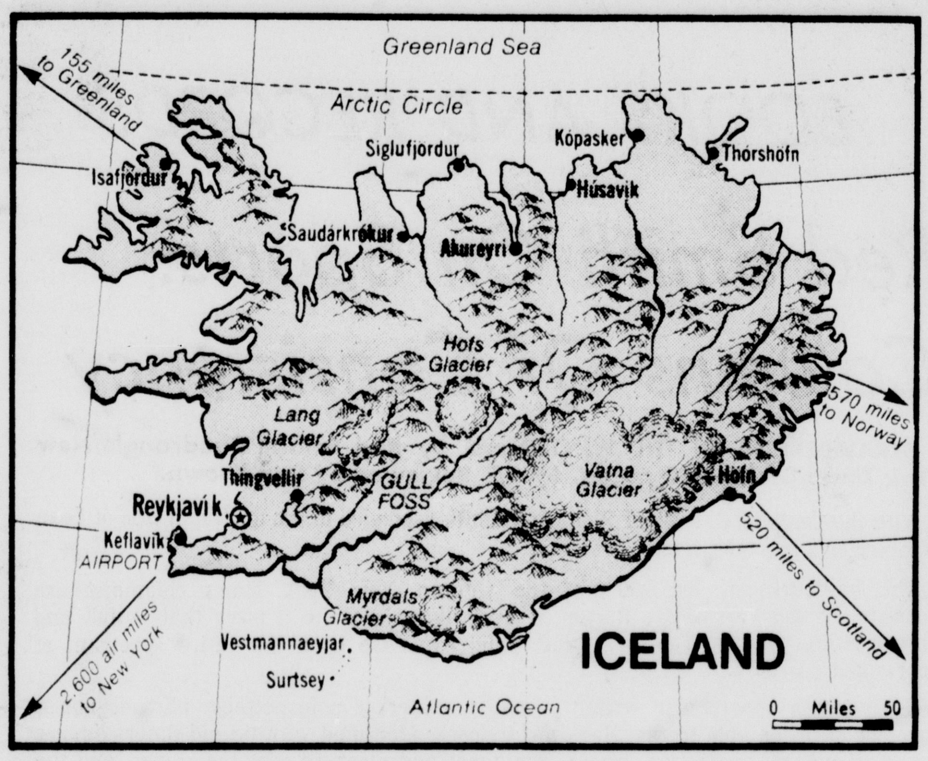
THE PICTURESQUE APPEARANCE of the Welsh village of Portmeirion is attributable to the "hobby" of Sir Clough Williams-Ellis who set out to turn the little community into a miniature Portofino. The result is a museum-village that appeals to holiday visitors with its eccentric architecture, its recreational facilities and its air of "another world" — and a quiet one.



Iceland's Sights Awe Anniversary Visitors

By LEAVITT F. MORRIS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — For centuries this almost treeless island anchored securely in the turbulent North Atlantic has been eroding away, even though volcanic eruptions continue to make new land areas.

With the little or no tree cover and one-tenth of its 39,600 square miles covered by glaciers, Iceland's high winds have been relentlessly sweeping valuable soil into the sea.

Now Iceland is taking steps to slow down the erosion and save its soil. In 1972 new legislation provided for the Nature Conservation Council whose responsibilities include a vast reforestation program. Birch trees, along with spruce and willow, are being planted in various sections of the island.

THE COUNCIL ALSO is responsible for protecting scenic and recreational areas from overcommercialization, the laying out of hiking and riding trails, and administration of the country's three national parks.

Thingvellir, one of the national parks and a revered historic site, is where the Icelandic Althingi (Parliament) was founded in the year 930. Another important historic site is Ingolfsholfdi, where Iceland's first settler, a Norwegian, arrived in 874.

The first-time visitor to Iceland, on the 30-minute ride from the airport to the capital, may well become depressed at the barren, bleak, lava-strewn countryside.

NOW AND THEN in this vastness, sheep can be seen cropping at the sparse growth springing up between cracks and crevices. There are nearly two million sheep grazing and roaming at will all over the island during the summer.

At autumn time the round-up is one of the great social occasions of the country's calendar.

Visitors to Iceland this summer are being treated to the observance of the 1,100 anniversary of the first permanent settlement in the year 874. The biggest celebrations took place July 28 at Thingvellir and in Reykjavik from Aug. 3 to 5. There were parades with floats and displays highlighting Iceland's Viking heritage.

It is the fishing village island of Heimaey, partially destroyed last year by a new volcano eruption on the outskirts of the town. Residents were quickly evacuated as the fiery lava ash descended on the village, filling the streets and covering many of the homes with the fine pumice.

Fortunately, the volcano burned itself out, and not long after people started returning and began the huge task of cleaning up. Fish factories are again in operation, and it is almost business as usual except for the curious tourists who arrive to view the aftermath of what could have been a national disaster.

SITUATED ONLY 30 miles from the Arctic Circle is the city of Akureyri, Iceland's principal town in the North. From here it is a pleasant, rustic trip to Bardardalur Valley with a stop at the Gullfoss —or Golden Waterfalls. The falls are an awesome sight when viewed close at hand.

A path leads down to the first series of falls, dropping 40 or 50 feet into a broad canyon with such a roar normal conversation is lost.

The upper falls have a greater drop, about 80 feet. Walking along a narrow shelf, one gets within a few feet of the great wall of water as it thunders with unharnessed power to a series of cataracts before rushing off to a river which through the centuries has cut a deep chasm in finding its route to the sea.

ONE OF THE many surprises to visitors here are the greenhouses at Hvetagerdi where bananas, tomatoes, vegetables and tropical flowers grow abundantly. The greenhouses are heated by the hot water springs — of which there are many.

There are a diversity of activities available to visitors including gliding, golf, and "pony riding," but not the kind usually associated with children. There are organized pony treks up to six days taking a minimum of four people and up to a maximum of 15.

Icelandic Airlines, with jet flights from New York and Chicago to Reykjavik, offers "bargain" stopover privileges in Iceland from 24 hours to 72 hours. The attractive package includes transportation between the airport and the Hotel Loftleider, accommodations, continental breakfast, lunch and the city sightseeing tour.

Cost for the 24-hour stopover is only $29; for 48 hours, $55; 72 hours, $71.

Iceland indeed has many treasures to offer its visitors. And they are found in the most unexpected places!

The Serious Art Of Paper Dolls At Spokane Fair

It's really a serious, 19th century folk art — in Polish it's called "wycinanti" — and the cutouts are far more complex and artistic than ordinary paper dolls.

That cultural lesson is just one of many to be learned at the Folklife Festival at the Expo '74 World's Fair.

Adam Wleklinski, who runs the Folk Art Studio in Renton, Wash. is a participant in the Folklife Festival, a gathering of artists and craftsmen of the Northwest.

Wleklinski cuts the intricate designs with speed and precision, then pastes them on display boards. Traditional patterns reflect the region of Poland from which they come.

Monochromatic designs are cut from a single sheet of paper. Others — like an intricate Christmas story Wleklinski displayed here — include as many as five layers, each a different color.

The Folklife Festival will continue to present samples of various cultural arts throughout Expo '74.

Travelers Wait Only So Long

Air travelers are spending less and less time in airport terminals, American Airlines studies indicate. The airline keeps tabs regularly on the average time its passengers get to the terminals before their flight departures — and not just out of sheer curiosity.

Time consciousness is at the very heart of airline service. A stopwatch is one of the tools of the trade.

On short to medium-haul flights, the airline finds, passengers are arriving an average of 20 minutes before departure. Those taking long-haul flights get to the terminals an average of 35 minutes before flight time.

"Time is of the essence in a service industry," said Richard C. Hoerner, American's vice president of passenger services. "There is just so much time most people will wait for any service, including the time air travelers will wait to make reservations, pick up their tickets and retrieve their baggage."

Lake Mendocino Beckons Marinites

The Corps of Engineers point out that while Lake Mendocino is relatively busy on weekends, its recreational potential remains largely unused on weekdays.

Marinites, the engineers suggest, are missing a close-to-home opportunity to enjoy the lake and its shoreline campsites.

The lake is located just north of Ukiah on Highway 20. During summer the maximum daily temperatures average around the low and mid 90s, excellent for such activities as camping, fishing, picnicking, boating, water skiing, sunning. There are boat ramps at the northwest and the south ends of the lake. And the only fees charged are for camping.

THERE ARE approximately 300 campsites located about the lake. About 100 are located on the northwest side of the lake and the other 200 on the northeast side.

There are also 23 sites on the south side for self-contained vehicles (with their own toilet facilities, water, etc).

Campers going to the northwest and northeast side of the lake will find a picnic table and barbecue pit with each campsite. Restroom facilities are within easy walking distance and include hot water showers on the northwest side.

FEES ARE A maximum of $3 per night, depending on where you camp. There is also a maximum camping limit of 14 days.

No reservations are accepted for individual campsites (strictly first come, first served). However, the lake has with few exceptions been able to accommodate everyone with a site to their liking. Reservations are taken for group camping (25 or more people), providing all areas have not been booked in advance. Write 1160 Lake Mendocino Drive, Ukiah 95482, for information.

Fees for group camping run from $3 to $11 per night.

Park rangers issue Golden Age Passports to senior citizens over 62 years of age. This entitles them to half-price on campsites.

THE NORTHWEST side of the lake is ideal for boaters. Most of the campsites here run $3 per night with the exception of 32 new campsites located right along the shore which are free. There is a seven-day camping limit for these new campsites.

This side of the lake also contains a sectioned-off swim area and a sanitary dump station.

Fees on the northeast side of the lake run $3 per night for the most part. There are areas, however, where only $1 a night is charged. This side is a little more peaceful and quiet.

No fees are charged at the south end of the lake.

THERE ARE strictly day-use areas located all about the lake. They provide such activities as picnicking and swimming.

The premier fish of Lake Mendocino is the striper. These fish are unusual in that they are land-locked. Channel catfish, large-mouth bass, crappie and bluegill are also abundant and not too hard to catch.

The best time to fish is at night and during week days. Yes, night fishing is allowed. Park Rangers will show you the hot spots and what to use.

People come to the lake to camp mainly because of the high quality of facilities, and the cleanliness of the area. The Park Rangers also have a lot to do with making the lake a nice spot to bring the family.

Whatever their reasons, once people stop almost always plan on coming back.

Mr. Snowshoes Has Proven Himself The Best Corgi In West

"They are extremely loyal, very intelligent, quite cooperative and very, very clean," she says. "They are not dogs to wander, and they stay home. They're good with children. And yet they make good watchdogs, because they are very protective."

MRS. HAYWARD says that she often walks alone with her dogs "and they offer a friendly greeting to anyone we meet along the path."

But, she adds, should she sit down, then the two Corgis won't permit anyone to approach her.

"They stay right there, and sensing that I'm relatively helpless while seated, won't let anyone come even close to me," she says.

The Welsh Corgi falls into the working dog category in American Kennel Club classifications. Actually, there are two distinct kinds of Corgis, the Pembroke (to which Mr. Snowshoes and Mab belong) and the Cardigan type. The two are similar in conformation, but the Pembroke has a short tail.

PEMBROKES WERE introduced to Wales by the Flemish in 1107, while the Cardigans were brought to Wales by the Celts much earlier — in about 1200 B.C.

Welsh mythology, Mrs. Hayward tells us, has it that the Corgis used to live in the woods where they served as steeds of the little people or leprechauns who rode them in the night. The "saddle marks" on the little dogs' backs were responsible for the old tale.

Ironically, Welsh Corgis are scarce in Wales today.

"THAT IS BECAUSE the English discovered them about 30 years ago and began buying them all up," Mrs. Hayward relates. "The Welsh tend to be quite cross about that."

Today the Corgi is known as "the queen's dog" because of Queen Elizabeth's fondness for the breed.

In this country, says Mrs. Hayward, Corgis do not rate as one of the more popular breeds.

"This is because they are something of a dog person's dog," she says. "People who are not around dogs a great deal tend not to know very much about the Corgi."

While the two Corgis are definitely the responsibility of Mrs. Hayward, her husband, Frank, a vice president with Coldwell Banker and Company, shares her interest in and enthusiasm for the dogs and for dog shows.

"While he doesn't have the time to work with the dogs, he is very much involved in everything," his wife says.

THE TWO, Marin residents for 25 years, belong to the Golden Gate Pembroke Welsh Corgi Fanciers, and to the Marin County Dog Training Club.

And what is there that sets Mr. Snowshoes and other champions apart?

"Well, the conformation has to be there," says Mrs. Hayward. "But there has to be something more — some extra quality. You find it in people, too. The super champion has something special that can't quite be put into words."

And what lies ahead for Mr. Showshoes?

THE MARIN CORGI is still a very young dog with a long show ring career ahead, followed by service as a stud, Mrs. Hayward notes.

Does that show ring career include competition in the greatest of all the American dog shows, Westminster?

Perhaps, says Mr. Snowshoes' owner. But there is a problem. She refuses to entrust her dog to the baggage compartment of a plane.

"So if we are going to go East to compete, we'll have to figure out some other way of traveling," she says. "A train, or an automobile, are possibilities."

ALTHOUGH THE East is home to many fine dogs and to the famed Cote de Neige Kennel of New York State that is responsible for the foundation stock for some very fine Corgis, Mrs. Hayward is confident her Mr. Snowshoes could hold his own with the finest from the other sections of the country.

But above and beyond the honors already won and yet to come, first and foremost for Mrs. Hayward is the pleasure that Mr. Snowshoes and Mab have given her and her husband simply by their presence in their home.

Those Americans who have not yet discovered the Welsh Corgi are missing out, she says, on something very special and unique.

Wine Pressings

Have you even wondered about the difference between lager beer and ale?

Both lager and ale are malt beverages that are fermented from grain - usually barley. In the beginning, the manufacturing processes are identical; the grain is steeped in water until it begins to sprout and the starches in the grain turn into sugar. The liquid is then strained into a brew kettle and hops (tiny blossoms of the hop vine) are added for flavor. After a few hours of brewing the mixture it is again strained, yeast is added, and fermentation begins.

It is the yeast which makes the difference between lager and ale because there are two types of fermentation. Lager is produced from a process called "bottom fermentation" because the yeast settles to the bottom of the fermentation vat after it has completed its work. In fact, the word lager comes from a German word meaning storing or resting.

Ale, on the other hand, is a "top-fermented" beverage. The yeast used in the process of making ale rises to the top after fermentation. Ale has a sharper taste than lager and a stronger flavor of hops. Stout and porter are variations of ale.

Sluggishly Told Story Of A Dynamo

BUCKMINSTER FULLER: AT HOME IN THE UNIVERSE by Alden Hatch; Crown, 274 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Jorie Parr.

Bucky the man is the focus of this slow-going biography by an old friend, Alden Hatch.

Chronologically Hatch narrates the details of the life of the most original philosopher of our era, the best known American in the world at large. There is no voltage; but if motivated by a fascinating subject, you will slog along.

It may come as no surprise that as a kindergartener the inventor of the Geodesic Dome constructed of toothpicks and dried peas a tetrahedronal octet truss, but there it is. A hearty beginning to his school career, that was, alas, unsustained. He, both funny looking and individualistic, was later booted from Harvard.

As a young man, Richard Buckminster Fuller was considered a ne'er-do-well by many, including his mother. The worst blow of his life occurred when she called on his future father-in-law to try to dissuade him from sanctioning the marriage to lovely, socially impeccable Anne Hewlett. How wrong the meddling matron was!

Anne, his wife for more than half a century, has always been his balance wheel, his "anchor to windward." She has persevered through her husband's early ineptitude (indifference?) to finance, his visits to "thousands of brothels" (an exaggeration), and his Greenwich Village period wherein he only weekended with her. Early on, Fuller went through a silent meditation cycle of several years, talking just to his wife and small daughter, and not to them very much. But she had seen her mission in life and has been rewarded, now and a long the way, such as with this poem Bucky wrote during their post-honeymoon hard times:

"Lady Anne went to the store
To buy food for a week or more
She bought an egg and half a roll
And a nice red apple that she stole."

Fuller regards women as being more in tune with Universe than men, more important to its functioning. He feels that men "took woman-invented industry and ran it themselves as 'a competitive weapon for augmenting widely ranging exploitations and plunder.' "

Bucky, who advocates industrialization, is fervent for ecology; his kind of industrialization is based on ephemeralization and recycling. Interestingly, he notes that in fully industrialized countries the birth rate automatically drops to about zero population growth. Therefore, if all underdeveloped countries were fully industrialized . . . The author pictures a man of paradoxes, but they are surface paradoxes.

As he charges into his 80s, Fuller remains vigorous, and borders on the ascetic. He took up jogging (calling it dog-trotting) decades before it became fashionable, and gave up his penchant for strong drink back in the 1940s, and now sips only weak tea: 40 cups of it per day. (We are told that he goes to the bathroom hourly.)

In the mid-1960s, feeling sluggish at 190 pounds, Bucky devised a diet of three-quarters to a pound of steak, lean London broil, for breakfast, lunch and dinner, with salad and fruit to supplement the last two meals. He now weighs 140. A good guest, he buys his own meat, and Alden Hatch recalls "going out to his kitchen one morning to find Bucky tending the sizzling pan and doing a soft-shoe dance in front of the stove in sheer youthful exuberance."

Young people have always adored Buckminster Fuller and sought to make a guru of him, but this he has resisted.

"People," he says, "must believe in my principles and my ideals - not in me." But they worship him anyway. Not for his mental brillance alone, or his emphasis on "livingry," not "killingry." What it is, paradoxically again, is "Bucky's need to be loved, and his eagerness to return such love in lavish, overflowing abundance."

To quote his brother-in-law, Roger Hewlett, "Bucky will do anything, including inventing geodesic domes, to make you love him . . ."

The Much Misunderstood Woman Who Was Henry's Only True Love

THE CHALLENGE OF ANNE BOLEYN by Hester W. Chapman; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 244 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Anne Boleyn, one of history's most romantic and most tragic personalities, second wife of Henry VIII, mother of Elizabeth I, has always had, according to biographer Hester W. Chapman, a bad press.

Anne was not the scheming flirt, the temptress who lured a susceptible Henry from Katharine, his wife of two decades, and finally connived to separate him — along with England — from the Catholic Church.

Rather, Anne was Henry's only true love, a sophisticated woman of her time, a shrewd planner, a witty, artistic beauty betrayed by time and biology, who foresaw and accepted her fate.

Miss Chapman traces Anne's career, from her youthful days as a lady-in-waiting at the French Court, to her return to England, through her nine-year romance with Henry, to the day when she bends her "little neck" before the swordsman of Calais.

Here is all the brilliance and brutality of Henry's court, plus the frightening, uncontrolled intelligence and despotism of Henry himself.

In addition, Miss Chapman illuminates other villains, victims and actors in Anne's drama — Cardinal Wolsey, Katharine of Aragon, Princess Mary, Sir Thomas More, the Duke of Norfolk.

Miss Chapman's style is easy to read and the book is larded with unobtrusive scholarship, carefully documented and indexed. She avoids speculation and sets down events as they were seen by the people involved, as they wrote about them in diaries and letters.

This remarkably interesting book will fascinate followers of Tudor England.

Billie Jean King In A Double Fault

BILLIE JEAN by Billie Jean King with Kim Chapin; Harper and Row, 208 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Ron Lent.

Billie Jean King is the last word in women's tennis, but her book isn't.

Certainly the in-depth examination of Mrs. King's intangible and tangible qualities highlight the presentation. But the book fails in its writing style. While it may be a matter of the reader's personal taste, I found the prose to be cliche-oriented and all too folksy.

For example, when mentioning her parent's attitude about tennis, she wrote (or Kim Chaplin): "I don't think my mom and dad were ever big on tennis, but they were big on helping me as much as they could."

Or, "I'd rack out (sleep) again for a few more hours. In time it got to be pretty great." This statement alluded to her vacation she took the final months of 1972 at (local angle) Stinson Beach. During the three months spent primarily at Stinson, she recuperated from the physical and emotional battles of the pro tennis circuit.

There is a second local angle in this book; it is her analysis of her friend and rival, Sausalito's Rosemary Casals. Said Mrs. King, "On the court she loved to discover new ways to hit the ball, but she never really worked hard enough on developing the kind of sound, basic game you need to reach the very top."

And the top is owned exclusively by Mrs. King. An intense, high strung competitor, Billie Jean found the climb up the mountain of success difficult. Now she is determined not to allow anyone to knock her from her perch.

She's the queen, numero uno. As the champion, she naturally, became the first women to win $100,000 during a tennis season. It was "natural," for Billie Jean to be the first to reach this monetarial plateau; Mrs. King is goal-oriented.

One such goal was squelching self-styled tennis hustler Bobby Riggs. In a pressure-packed match at the Houston Astrodome Sept. 20, 1973, Billie Jean won one for women's liberation: 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Also on the women's lib subject, Mrs. King clearly expresses her feelings about her abortion in 1971.

With such a fascinating sports personality as its subject, certainly the book merits readership — but first a rewrite.

About Carpets

by Doug Emerson

CARPET CLEANING is something that is often let go from year to year. Perhaps when the home is put up for sale professional cleaners are called in . . . and it's amazing how "new" your carpets can look when they're restored in this way.

But the point is that it costs very little to keep your carpets looking this way from year to year. Most of us become so used to seeing soiled areas of heavy traffic, or the spot Junior left on the carpet last summer, or the time so-and-so spilled a drink or Sis upset some nail polish, that we don't really see the soiling. Unfortunately, visiters do see it . . . and your home doesn't look its best.

An annual cleaning will keep any carpet looking fresh, its colors bright and clear. Moreover, the carpet will last longer, because grit and soil imbedded in the fibers cause extra wear.

All this means cleanability is one of the properties you should look into when you select a new carpet for your home. That goes for "spot cleaning" when accidents occur, as well as overall periodic cleaning to make the whole carpet live longer and better.

We have the experience to advise you on the cleanability of different carpets, as well as other factors of beauty and wear. And we have the wide selection by famous carpet manufacturers that you're looking for. Come in . . . to the carpet people.

The Opinions Of Mr. Forbes Make For Bland Reading

FACT & COMMENT by Malcolm S. Forbes; Alfred A. Knopf, 295 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

If Forbes magazine is your favorite reading, and collecting up to 25-year-old business commentary is your secret vice, then "Fact & Comment" by Malcolm S. Forbes is the book for you.

Forbes magazine always features these little editorials, some rather witty, most quite obvious. Ephemera of this sort, especially concerning transitory business news, need not be preserved between hardcovers, particularly by the prestige publishing house of Alfred A. Knopf.

Malcolm S. Forbes has some very good ideas, and must be credited years ago with being ahead of his time (for a business writer) in heralding the need for corporate responsibility in ecological cleanup. But mostly, this is very dull reading, dated material that most people have either half forgotten, or were never too excited about when the items were news.

The inquisitive reader, for example, can find out why it was such a fine idea to make John Connally the secretary of the treasury, though he isn't a cabinet member anymore and has other quite different matters now on his mind.

And for real hindsight into major issues, there are some old columns pointing out that Watergate and inflation are not good for our country.

So many of Forbes' opinions are standard board room chic, the pinstripe cracker barrel wisdom of Wall Street, that the collective tone of these pages becomes an irritating fusion of a bland mind and Olympian pretension. His sophomoric dismissal of Women's Lib, for example, advises the ladies to emulate their Italian sisters in contemporary Rome: these women lack legal rights or business opportunity of the sort common in America, yet they rule their roosts anyway through a militant and demanding mother love.

Journalism that transcends its immediate subject, the sort of thing written by Addison and Steele, Defoe, Hazlitt or Winston Churchill, prevails because of a combination of style and vision, the ability to lift the mask off the face of the past and reveal its riddles.

As "Fact & Comment" lacks all these qualities, the book leaves the reader wondering how it all came about — why it was published.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

A BIT OF A SHUNT UP THE RIVER by Desmond Cory; Doubleday, 187 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

It is unlikely that Doubleday and Co. will print a better novel this year under its Crime Club label than Britisher Desmond Cory's "A Bit of a Shunt Up the River." Nor will any other publisher of crime novels.

This corking good yarn has everything — suspense, an exciting chase, delightful humor, good writing, insights into human nature and human relationships — except mystery. But Cory isn't writing a mystery novel.

Tracy, his less than meteoric race driving career ended by the psychological and physical damage of a crash, is content running a garage when his wealthy employer orders him to drive his strong-minded daughter from London to South Wales for a meeting with her estranged husband. At the very outset there is a dead body. And it is soon evident that Tracy and his pert passenger are being followed — by one Bony Wright, escaped convict with some unfinished and deadly business with the husband at the other end of the line.

There's confrontation in Wales, a smashing one, and then a harrowing chase back to London that the movies should love. But perhaps the most interesting aspect of this very fine book is the relationship that develops between Tracy and Bony, despite their clash of goals. Cory makes his characters believable and interesting. And this is a lot of entertainment for your $4.95.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

"Shelter" is a big book in the "Earth Book" pattern with the deliberate "homemade" look now so popular as part of the trend toward a simpler life.

It is the work of Lloyd Kahn, who enjoyed success with his earlier "Domebook 2," and published by Shelter Publications of Post Office Box 279, Bolinas, "a non-profit educational organization chartered in California for the purpose of gathering information on hand-built housing and the building crafts, maintaining a network of people interested in building and shelter . . ." The affiliation of Random House as the distributor indicates the book is not a strictly local or regional endeavor.

Kahn provides photographs and drawings, including color, plus texts that cover both the newest and some of the oldest (but now virtually forgotten) building techniques, materials and designs. From caves, to domes and sculptured dwellings. It is not just a pictorial survey of housing, but also a field workbook with instructions and illustrations to guide those inspired to construct. And the directions go well beyond just the raising of the walls and the application of the roof — into septic equipment, gardening, sun and methane devices, reforestation, what the ecology-minded have come to call "survival" with an emphasis upon simplicity.

"FINDING AND Preparing Precious and Semi-Precious Stones" is a $6.95 Association Press softcover guide for the beginner in an increasingly popular hobby, written by Los Angeles educator and rockhound James A. Peterson, and covering the field from the hunt and identification of the gems to their preparation and display. There's a bibliography, and a list of gemstone sites.

Red Smith On Sports: Columns Of Consistency

With the death of Grantland Rice, Red Smith ascended to the unofficial title of dean of America's sportswriters.

The hallmarks of the work of the veteran New York Times columnist are consistency and versatility. Rarely, if ever, does he write a piece that is dull and uninteresting. And he can write with solid expertise upon the entire spectrum of sports and sports-related topics.

He is not a spectacular writer — not a coiner of unforgettable phrases nor a revealer of undeniable truths. He is most closely identified with the old-timers among the sportswriting profession, whose enjoyment and pleasure with the games, and the men and women who played them, were transmitted to readers, unclouded by cynicism and ego. Still, Smith's columns have never been marred by the schoolboyish naivete that has rendered silly the enthusiasms of some of his contemporaries. In short, he has struck a happy medium, questioning, sometimes critical, but never carping nor unnecessarily personally intrusive.

Whether a book comprised of reprints of Red Smith columns justifies the expenditure of $9.95 and several hours of reading time depends upon, first, whether you are a Red Smith fan, and, second, the depth of your interest in sports.

The fact that the contents are restricted to a period beginning with November, 1971, when Smith joined the Times, following the demise of the New York Herald Tribune for whom he had written long and competently, necessarily limits the range and quality of the collection. For one thing, it means that the columns deal for the most part with sports events and figures of an era when much of the color and excitement — the juice — seems to have been squeezed from athletics by a creeping commercialism. The "giants" are in the past.

But then a Red Smith column, wrote today, often harkens back to yesterday, so that we are not denied totally the pleasure of his past experiences and contacts. Babe Ruth, Knute Rockne and Ernest Hemingway are part of the book, just as are Ron Lyle, Johnny Bench and Bowie Kuhn. Chris Evert and her generation share the pages with Josh Gibson and his.

The book has been divided into sections, according to the sport. Smith's baseball pieces seem his best to us, but that may well be a matter of personal taste. The column on Pete Reiser, who while blessed with all the talents of a Willie Mays or Henry Aaron played with such total abandon and enthusiasm that he wrecked his body and career, struck a special chord with us. We remembered as we read watching Reiser crash fences and dive headlong with that same disregard for life and limb while we were a young sports editor in Wichita and the great young outfielder was playing World War II service baseball out of Fort Riley.

A couple of the longer fishing stories were originally written for Sports Afield, not the Times, and we suspect enthusiasts for the quiet sport will thoroughly enjoy Red's apparent empathy with that pursuit.

"I have no illusions about the perishable nature of this work nor any apologies for its shortcomings," the columnist writes in his foreword.

The reader should adopt that same sensible attitude. The sports subjects covered by Red Smith are something less than world shaking in their importance. But Smith covers them with a sense of proportion and objectivity. For those who enjoy this kind of thing, there need be no embarrassment. Red Smith succeeds, at least, in lifting sports from the child level to an adult stature. And, at the same time, he treats athletics with the respect that even recreation merits from a professional.

And as for the shortcomings, Red Smith commits very few errors. Professional sports' pampered darlings should do as well.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

Studios Strive To Satisfy The Craving For Nostalgia

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

When the three sisters — Patti, Maxine and LaVerne — first appeared on the movie scene with Abbott and Costello, America was still at peace, but building a civilian army in readiness for the forthcoming World War II.

The three girls had an overabundance of energy and a disarming manner, and for the next two decades they were the outstanding female trio of show business, selling records by the millions.

When LaVerne died some years ago, the surviving sisters moved back into the shadows and didn't fully emerge until they were called to Broadway to recall those days of the early 1940s.

It is only natural that the success of the show should stimulate new interest in the styles of the sisters and call for a playback of some of their early recordings. These may be heard on "In the Modd" by the Andrews Sisters (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1023).

The double record package includes almost all of the tunes popularized by Patti, LaVerne and Maxine. There's the "Pennsylvania Polka" and also "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen."

And again you can hear them sing "Tennessee Waltz" and "Ciribiribin."

The set also includes songs from the Abbott and Costello show, among them "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy' and "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar."

Those who remember the Andrews Sisters in their heyday should find lasting entertainment in "In the Modd."

TWO OF THE SONGS in the Andrews Sisters album — 'Oh! Ma-Ma! The Butcher Boy" and "Beer Barrel Polka" — also are included in another excellent two record album, "The Best of the Mills Brothers, Volume II" (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1027).

The Mills Brothers pre-date the Andrews Sisters by several years and they built a fantastic career on lively singing.

This selection includes "Ballerina" and "Bye Bye Blackbird." All of the tunes have been electronically rechanndeled to simulate stereo but this refinement is really not needed because the Mills Brothers have a way of projecting their songs into three dimensions.

A RECENT BONANZA for students of country and western music is "For the Last Time" by Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys (United Artists UA LA216 J2).

Wills originated country swing almost 40 years ago with "San Antonio Rose" and became a perennial juke box favorite as well as a barndance stalwart.

Last December Wills rounded up as many members of his original band that he could find to play his music again.

There are vocals by Merle Haggard, Leon Rausch, Leon McAuliffe, Jody Nix and Joyle Nix. "San Antonio Rose," of course, had to be included but there are other songs associated with Wills, among them "Mild Cow Blues" and "Faded Love."

Sir Clough's Fairytale Village In Wales

TRAVEL PAGE

By ROBIN WRIGHT

But Sir Clough Williams-Ellis tops them all. He collects buildings.

It all started out as a dream, much like Tolkien's Middle Earth or Alice's Wonderland. Sir Clough just wanted to turn a tiny tip of his brooding northern Wales into a lighthearted baroque holiday village, something along the lines of romantic Portofino.

BUT INSTEAD OF words, the dreamer decided to use "fallen buildings" to construct his whimsical village. So, stone by stone over the past half-century, the spirited Welshman has built his fantasy. And now, in this medieval and mountainous land, there is a fairytale village of retrieved architectural relics, with a 17th century Town Hall here, a baroque lighthouse there, and the timbers of an old British warship for extra flavor.

In all, there now are dozens of cottages, homes and mini-mansions spread around a renovated old family estate. Most of the structures are Mediterranean in flavor and centuries old in style.

In fact, some of the stones that have gone into the rebuilding can be traced as far back as the 1100s.

THUS WHAT STARTED out as a dream has become much more. To the many who pilgrimage here every year it has become an inspiration, a sanctuary and an enchanting architectural eccentricity.

Sir Noel Coward wrote "Blithe Spirit" during a one-week stay at Portmeirion, and such notables as George Bernard Shaw, Bertrand Russell, John Steinbeck, Lewis Mumford, H.G. Wells, David Lloyd George, King Zog of Albania, Thor Heyerdahl and an assortment of British royalty have taken refuge here.

Even super-modernist architect Frank Lloyd Wright came by "taking it all without a blink," according to Sir Clough.

THAT MAY BE hard to believe. This secluded almost-island of retrieved arches, terraces, statues, cottages, gazebos, stairways, ponds, gardens, fountains, walkways and towers is one up even on Middle Earth or Wonderland. Yet it is livable.

Open most of the year as a hotel, restaurant, and — or curiosity, Portmeirion is a classic holiday treat — and retreat.

Considering the value of this unique museum-village, the prices are reasonable. Rates very from about $12 for a single room with breakfast to $35 for a double with full pension. The prices of the separate family cottages vary on a higher scale.

BUT PORTMEIRION is not just a resort.

Besides the main mansion-hotel and stables-turned-annex, the village is complete with restaurants, clothing and miscellaneous shops in a cobbled square, tennis courts, pools, lounges, beach front, and a Town Hall that sponsors movies, dances, exhibitions, and concerts. Some activities are restricted to guests, although several are also open to casual visitors.

The background setting is as impishly eccentric as the main complex, with such touches as a gold mine abandoned after a 200-yard tunnel turned up only a single nugget, or a handful of authentic beachfront caves ideal for adventure.

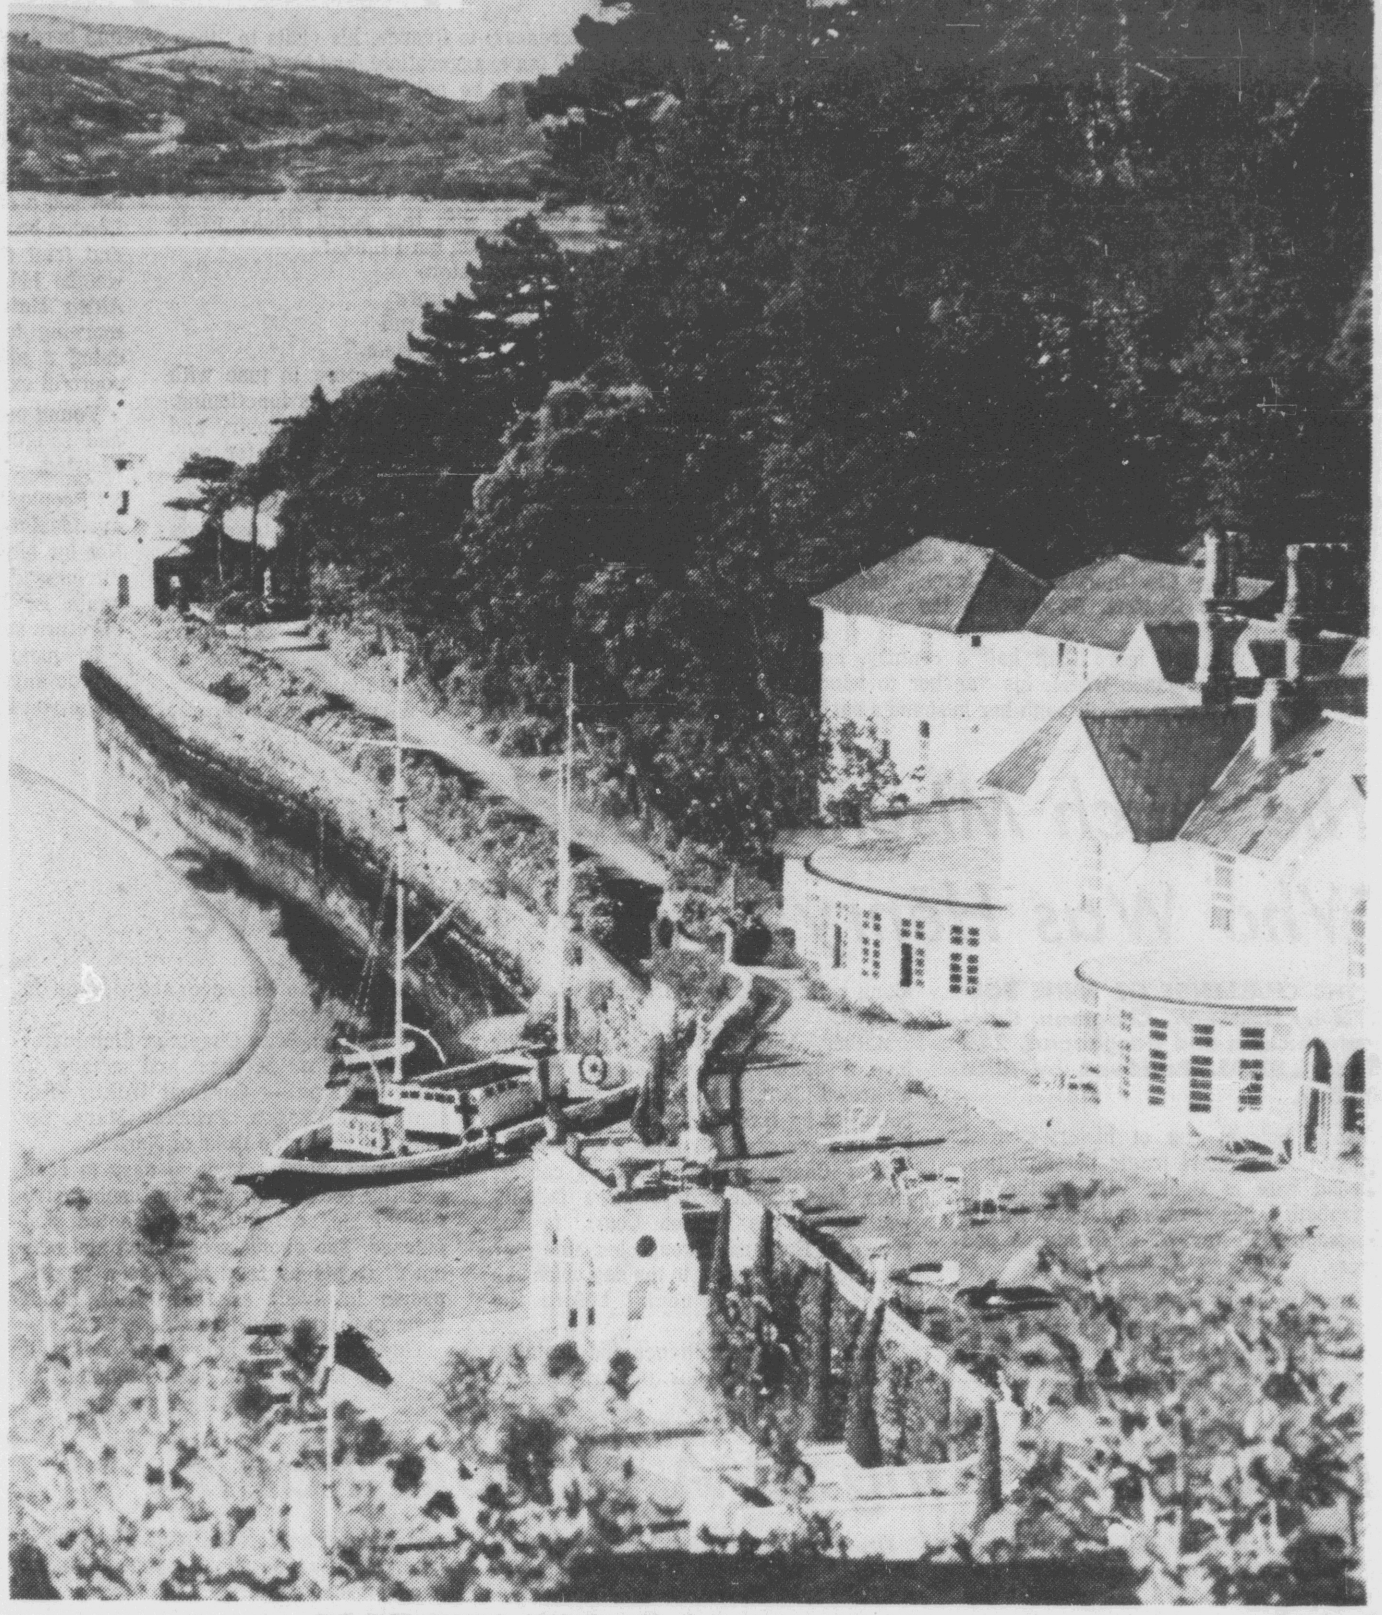
AND SPRINKLED throughout the peninsula are gardens showing off 20 varieties of rhododendrons, thousands of hydrangeas, palms, cypresses, ginkgo, magnolia and eucalyptus trees. It's a colorful woodland with an almost enchanted air.

As Lewis Mumford once described it: "Portmeirion is a folly in the 18th century architectural manner; indeed, a folly piled upon folly, as in an uninhibited dream.

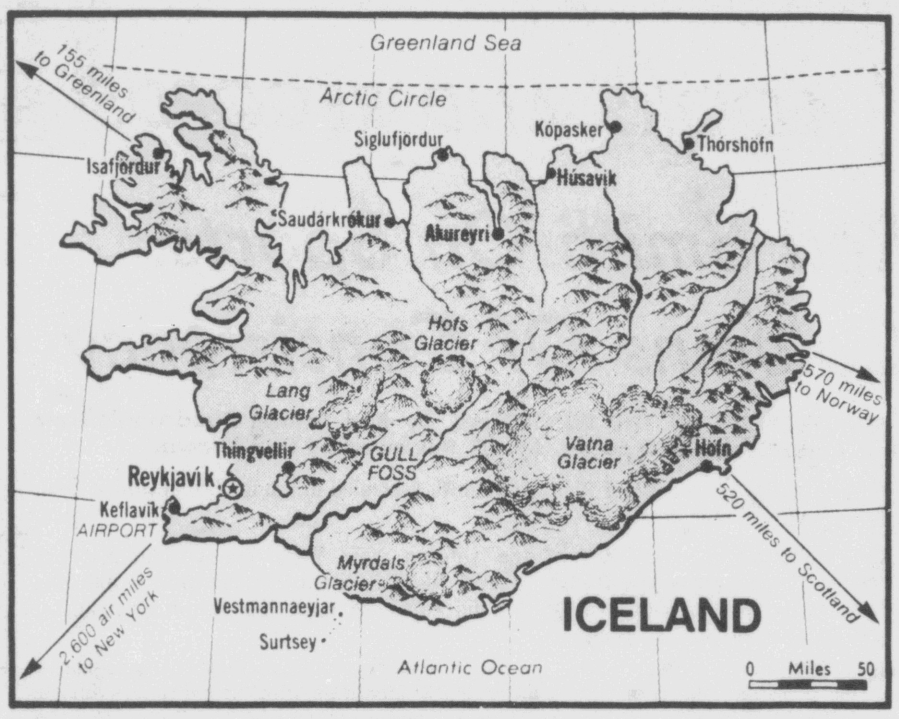
"But the total effect is relaxing and often enchanting, now more than ever, since the buildings contrast happily to the rigid irrationalities and the calculated follies of our so-called Nuclear Age."

The result of Sir Clough's "dancing on the rigidity of principle" is a properly British fantasyland, a peninsula — an island by spirit if not quite by land — that has improvised on the past to make a dream into a reality.

©1974 The Christian Science Publishing Society



THE PICTURESQUE APPEARANCE of the Welsh village of Portmeirion is attributable to the "hobby" of Sir Clough Williams-Ellis who set out to turn the little community into a miniature Portofino. The result is a museum-village that appeals to holiday visitors with its eccentric architecture, its recreational facilities and its air of "another world" — and a quiet one.



Iceland's Sights Awe Anniversary Visitors

By LEAVITT F. MORRIS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — For centuries this almost treeless island anchored securely in the turbulent North Atlantic has been eroding away, even though volcanic eruptions continue to make new land areas.

With the little or no tree cover and one-tenth of its 39,600 square miles covered by glaciers, Iceland's high winds have been relentlessly sweeping valuable soil into the sea.

Now Iceland is taking steps to slow down the erosion and save its soil. In 1972 new legislation provided for the Nature Conservation Council whose responsibilities include a vast reforestation program. Birch trees, along with spruce and willow, are being planted in various sections of the island.

THE COUNCIL ALSO is responsible for protecting scenic and recreational areas from overcommercialization, the laying out of hiking and riding trails, and administration of the country's three national parks.

Thingvellir, one of the national parks and a revered historic site, is where the Icelandic Althingi (Parliament) was founded in the year 930. Another important historic site is Ingolfsholfdi, where Iceland's first settler, a Norwegian, arrived in 874.

The first-time visitor to Iceland, on the 30-minute ride from the airport to the capital, may well become depressed at the barren, bleak, lava-strewn countryside.

NOW AND THEN in this vastness, sheep can be seen cropping at the sparse growth springing up between cracks and crevices. There are nearly two million sheep grazing and roaming at will all over the island during the summer.

At autumn time the round-up is one of the great social occasions of the country's calendar.

Visitors to Iceland this summer are being treated to the observance of the 1,100 anniversary of the first permanent settlement in the year 874. The biggest celebrations took place July 28 at Thingvellir and in Reykjavik from Aug. 3 to 5. There were parades with floats and displays highlighting Iceland's Viking heritage.

It is the fishing village island of Heimaey, partially destroyed last year by a new volcano eruption on the outskirts of the town. Residents were quickly evacuated as the fiery lava ash descended on the village, filling the streets and covering many of the homes with the fine pumice.

Fortunately, the volcano burned itself out, and not long after people started returning and began the huge task of cleaning up. Fish factories are again in operation, and it is almost business as usual except for the curious tourists who arrive to view the aftermath of what could have been a national disaster.

SITUATED ONLY 30 miles from the Arctic Circle is the city of Akureyri, Iceland's principal town in the North. From here it is a pleasant, rustic trip to Bardardalur Valley with a stop at the Gullfoss —or Golden Waterfalls. The falls are an awesome sight when viewed close at hand.

A path leads down to the first series of falls, dropping 40 or 50 feet into a broad canyon with such a roar normal conversation is lost.

The upper falls have a greater drop, about 80 feet. Walking along a narrow shelf, one gets within a few feet of the great wall of water as it thunders with unharnessed power to a series of cataracts before rushing off to a river which through the centuries has cut a deep chasm in finding its route to the sea.

ONE OF THE many surprises to visitors here are the greenhouses at Hvetagerdi where bananas, tomatoes, vegetables and tropical flowers grow abundantly. The greenhouses are heated by the hot water springs — of which there are many.

There are a diversity of activities available to visitors including gliding, golf, and "pony riding," but not the kind usually associated with children. There are organized pony treks up to six days taking a minimum of four people and up to a maximum of 15.

Icelandic Airlines, with jet flights from New York and Chicago to Reykjavik, offers "bargain" stopover privileges in Iceland from 24 hours to 72 hours. The attractive package includes transportation between the airport and the Hotel Loftleider, accommodations, continental breakfast, lunch and the city sightseeing tour.

Cost for the 24-hour stopover is only $29; for 48 hours, $55; 72 hours, $71.

Iceland indeed has many treasures to offer its visitors. And they are found in the most unexpected places!

The Serious Art Of Paper Dolls At Spokane Fair

It's really a serious, 19th century folk art — in Polish it's called "wycinanti" — and the cutouts are far more complex and artistic than ordinary paper dolls.

That cultural lesson is just one of many to be learned at the Folklife Festival at the Expo '74 World's Fair.

Adam Wleklinski, who runs the Folk Art Studio in Renton, Wash. is a participant in the Folklife Festival, a gathering of artists and craftsmen of the Northwest.

Wleklinski cuts the intricate designs with speed and precision, then pastes them on display boards. Traditional patterns reflect the region of Poland from which they come.

Monochromatic designs are cut from a single sheet of paper. Others — like an intricate Christmas story Wleklinski displayed here — include as many as five layers, each a different color.

The Folklife Festival will continue to present samples of various cultural arts throughout Expo '74.

Travelers Wait Only So Long

Air travelers are spending less and less time in airport terminals, American Airlines studies indicate. The airline keeps tabs regularly on the average time its passengers get to the terminals before their flight departures — and not just out of sheer curiosity.

Time consciousness is at the very heart of airline service. A stopwatch is one of the tools of the trade.

On short to medium-haul flights, the airline finds, passengers are arriving an average of 20 minutes before departure. Those taking long-haul flights get to the terminals an average of 35 minutes before flight time.

"Time is of the essence in a service industry," said Richard C. Hoerner, American's vice president of passenger services. "There is just so much time most people will wait for any service, including the time air travelers will wait to make reservations, pick up their tickets and retrieve their baggage."

Lake Mendocino Beckons Marinites

The Corps of Engineers point out that while Lake Mendocino is relatively busy on weekends, its recreational potential remains largely unused on weekdays.

Marinites, the engineers suggest, are missing a close-to-home opportunity to enjoy the lake and its shoreline campsites.

The lake is located just north of Ukiah on Highway 20. During summer the maximum daily temperatures average around the low and mid 90s, excellent for such activities as camping, fishing, picnicking, boating, water skiing, sunning. There are boat ramps at the northwest and the south ends of the lake. And the only fees charged are for camping.

THERE ARE approximately 300 campsites located about the lake. About 100 are located on the northwest side of the lake and the other 200 on the northeast side.

There are also 23 sites on the south side for self-contained vehicles (with their own toilet facilities, water, etc).

Campers going to the northwest and northeast side of the lake will find a picnic table and barbecue pit with each campsite. Restroom facilities are within easy walking distance and include hot water showers on the northwest side.

FEES ARE A maximum of $3 per night, depending on where you camp. There is also a maximum camping limit of 14 days.

No reservations are accepted for individual campsites (strictly first come, first served). However, the lake has with few exceptions been able to accommodate everyone with a site to their liking. Reservations are taken for group camping (25 or more people), providing all areas have not been booked in advance. Write 1160 Lake Mendocino Drive, Ukiah 95482, for information.

Fees for group camping run from $3 to $11 per night.

Park rangers issue Golden Age Passports to senior citizens over 62 years of age. This entitles them to half-price on campsites.

THE NORTHWEST side of the lake is ideal for boaters. Most of the campsites here run $3 per night with the exception of 32 new campsites located right along the shore which are free. There is a seven-day camping limit for these new campsites.

This side of the lake also contains a sectioned-off swim area and a sanitary dump station.

Fees on the northeast side of the lake run $3 per night for the most part. There are areas, however, where only $1 a night is charged. This side is a little more peaceful and quiet.

No fees are charged at the south end of the lake.

THERE ARE strictly day-use areas located all about the lake. They provide such activities as picnicking and swimming.

The premier fish of Lake Mendocino is the striper. These fish are unusual in that they are land-locked. Channel catfish, large-mouth bass, crappie and bluegill are also abundant and not too hard to catch.

The best time to fish is at night and during week days. Yes, night fishing is allowed. Park Rangers will show you the hot spots and what to use.

People come to the lake to camp mainly because of the high quality of facilities, and the cleanliness of the area. The Park Rangers also have a lot to do with making the lake a nice spot to bring the family.

Whatever their reasons, once people stop almost always plan on coming back.

Getting Rid Of Old Paint Or Varnish

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

There are several ways of removing the old paint or varnish from a piece of furniture you are refinishing.

It can be scraped or sanded off, it can be removed with such chemicals as lye, or it can be taken off with a commercial solvent-type paint and varnish remover.

I recommend that the household handyman stick to the commercial paint and varnish removers. Scraping and sanding can gouge the wood if not property done and chemicals like lye also can cause serious damage.

THE COMMERCIAL paint removers are available in many brands. They come in various thicknesses, ranging from liquid to cream to paste. I suggest that unless you are really experienced you avoid the thinnest forms and use a thicker liquid type for horizontal surfaces and cream for vertical surfaces. Try as often as is practical to place the surface you are working on in a horizontal position.

Here is how I suggest you go about it:

Spread the paint remover liberally with a brush on the surface you are working. A natural bristle paint brush is best for this purpose. Cover about two square feet at a time, letting the remover stand until the surface starts to blister or peel. This may take anywhere from five to 20 minutes, depending upon the hardness of the old finish and how many coats are involved.

WHEN THE OLD finish has softened, peel it off with a putty knife. (It is a good idea to slightly round the edges of the knife with a file so it won't gouge the wood.) If the old finish is particularly hard or consists of several coats, you may have to repeat the process several times.

It is important, as soon as the old finish has been scraped off, to neutralize the remover that has soaked into the wood; use turpentine or lacquer thinner. Then wash down the entire surface, using steel wool and working as much as possible with the grain of the wood.

Here are some hints for working difficult places that cannot be conveniently handled with a putty knife, such as rounded and fluted surfaces:

APPLY THE REMOVER as described. Then a pad of steel wool or burlap is useful for removing the softened finish. Another trick is to twist a strip of burlap into a "cord" and, with one end in each hand, work it over rounded and grooved areas. A block of wood covered with sandpaper may be useful in getting at some subborn corners.

I have successfully removed softened finish from difficult carved areas with such "tools" as an old toothbrush, an orange stick and a meat skewer wrapped in cloth.

When you have removed all the old finish and neutralized any remover that may have been absorbed by the wood, and the color of the surface is to your liking, you are ready to start refinishing according to whatever plan you may have in mind.

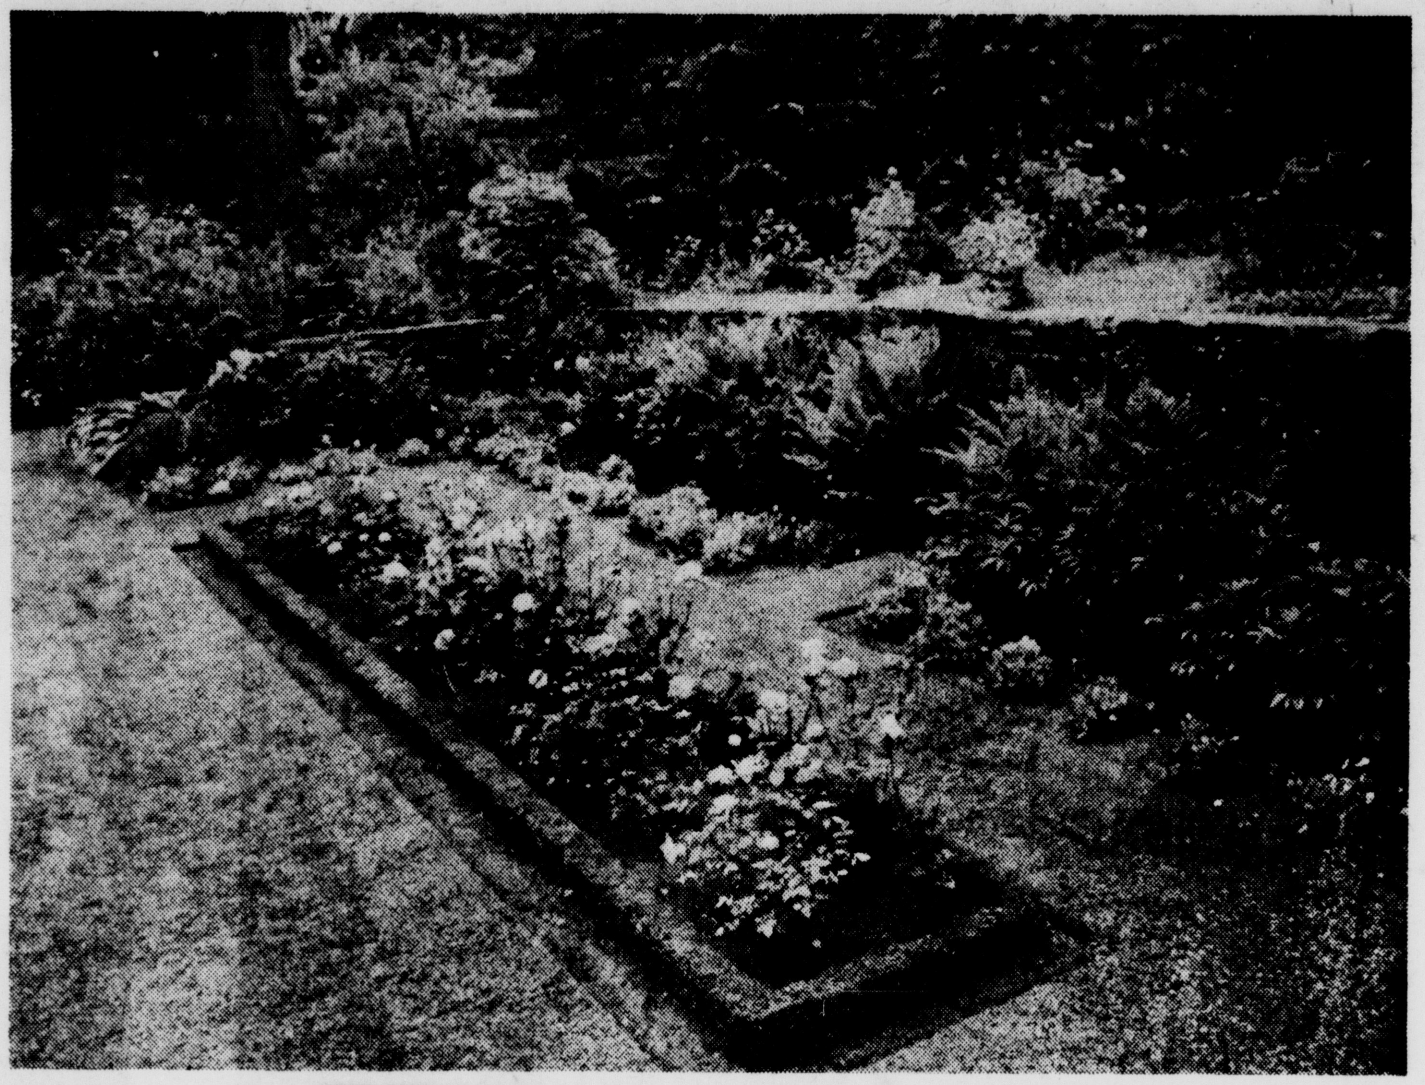
THE HOME AND YARD



HERE FERNS HAVE been used to add a lush accent to a retaining wall border. Indoors or out-of-doors, the versatile fern family has a special talent for creating an air of serenity and coolness. Thus, their increasing popularity.

HOW TO SPEND those leisure hours these warm and sunny summer days? Actress Heather North demonstrates one suggestion: relaxing in the backyard in the comfort of a glider swing. But first you must buy or build your glider. If you decide to build it yourself, Steve Ellingson is ready to help you with one of his patterns. Just send $1.75 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Lawn Glider Settee Pattern 369. For Finest In Foliage Plants, Look To The Fern Family

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

For something different in foliage plants, indoors or out, none is lovelier than the fern.

Most gardens have a good place for ferns, and indoors a sunless north window, so often a problem for the house plant enthusiast, is a fine place for them.

Have you a shady corner of the garden where you can provide moist peaty soil, friable, and fairly rich? A collection of hardy ferns will love it there. Many prefer shade, although some will tolerate sun.

YOU CAN PLANT them along woodland paths, beside a brook or garden pool, against the north foundation of the house, on stone walls, in chinks of rocks around bird baths and bird feeders, and under shade trees.

One of the easiest to grow is the Maidenhair Fern. It likes moisture, grows about a foot high, and is charming with Bleeding Heart.

The Toothed Wood Fern, which may be familiar to you in florists' arrangements, is a lacy almost fluffy plant, its fronds beautifully divided. It is an evergreen and grows about 30 inches high.

THE CHRISTMAS FERN also is an evergreen. It is so called because each frond part is shaped like a Christmas stocking. It grows two to three feet tall and is effective in a massed planting.

The Cimmamon Fern, also evergreen and tall, prefers wet swampy shade, but will also get along in dry shade.

If, however, you grow only one kind or are new at it, a good choice is the Lady Fern. Fine and delicate, it is very attractive and will tolerate some sun.

THE OSTRICH FERN is a handsome plant. It reaches four feet, sometimes more, so is not for small flower beds. Very ornamental and vigorous with a fountain of great ostrich plumes.

The Osmunda Claytoniana sends up woolly fiddleheads in spring and will unfold to fronds up to three feet high. It will grow in dry shade. It is also good for planters.

Indoors the larger ferns in planters are very decorative. Many an office or hotel foyer uses them this way.

REMEMBER THE reliable Boston Fern our grandmothers always had? It is making a big comeback, especially in planters in offices, clubs, and hotels.

I have found the Bird's Nest Fern interesting.

It doesn't look like a fern. Its long waxy leaves encircle a "nest."

Another fern that doesn't look like a fern is the Holly Fern, with leathery dark green fronds jagged along the edges like holly.

Small ferns are attractive for terrarium woodland gardens. The Walking Fern, dwarf Maidenhair, and the Creeping Polypodum vulgare are sold by some terrarium suppliers.

FOR HANGING baskets Rabbit's or Hare's Foot and Squirrel's Foot Ferns are fascinating. Feathery fronds and furry rhizomes make them different.

Ferns need moisture indoors, too. It is good to set the pots on trays filled with moist pebbles. Sprinkle the foliage, too. A layer of moist sphagnum moss on the soil can be helpful.

In spring and summer feed every two weeks with liquid fertilizer half strength. If you are potting them give them especially good drainage and a rich humusy soil — one-third each of sandy loam, peat moss or leaf mold, and coarse sand.

IN WINTER THEY can have some sun filtered by curtains or venetian blinds. If outdoors in summer, give them full shade. To control mealy bugs or scale, use wettable melathion and avoid all oil sprays.

If you wish to give your green thumb an experience, try raising Asparagus Fern from seed. Burpee has seed of Plumosis nanus, an upright grower, and of Spregeri (Emerald Feather), the kind fine for hanging pot.

The Oleander Is Tough, Yet It's Ornamental

It's unusual to find a shrub both attractive and tough, but in fitting that description, the oleander is a boon to gardeners throughout the state.

This shrub is quite easy to grow for it is not particular about soil, will take wind, sun and reflected heat and lives on very little water. And for good flower production it does demand high light intensity.

Of the many ways to plant the oleander, one of the most popular is as a road or driveway border. Oleanders make wonderful tub specimens for the patio and other warm outdoor living areas.

The oleander produces generous amounts of color flowers from May or June to October. Its evergreen foliage is an attractive dark green all year around.

To assure a bettter flower display and a more graceful shrub or tree, prune carefully in the early spring. Remove old flowering wood and cut some branches almost to the ground. If it's a lower growing shrub you want to pinch out tips or head slightly.

If these many handsome characteristics have convinced you that oleander is the plant for your garden or yard, see your nurseryman about some colorful varieties. For rose-red flowers there's Cherry Ripe; Mrs. Roading offers double, salmon-pink flowers, and Sister Agnes, pure white. Yellow, pink and deep red varieties are available, too.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q.—I will be painting the outside of my house this fall. I have painted inside rooms in the past, but this will be my first job of this kind. I have seen so many conflicting viewpoints on the kind of weather during which a house can be painted that I am a little confused. For instance, just the other day I saw one newspaper article that said not to paint when the humidity is very high, and the very sam day I saw a magazine story that said it was all right to paint on damp days. Which is correct and can you give me any additional information on when to paint?

A.—It is likely that the two stories were about two different kinds of paint. When using an oil-based paint, you should not work during a high-humidity day or when there is a film of moisture on the surface of the house. But it is all right to paint on that kind of day if you are using a latex paint. For either type of paint, do not work if the temperature is below 50 degrees Fahrenheit or above 95 degrees. It is even more important that this rule be followed when you are using latex paint. The label on the can of paint will tell you the normal drying time if you plan on a second coat, but humid weather can delay the drying period. Test the first coat by touch before you put on another. When it is thoroughly dry, it is firm to the touch and not even the tiniest bit sticky.

Q.—I was painting our kitchen when I spilled a little paint on two of the asphalt tiles on the floor. I didn't notice it immediately and by the time I did, the paint had hardened. Can I get if off with turpentine, since I used an oil paint?

A.—No. You can't use any solvent on asphalt tile without risking permanent damage to it. You'll just have to do the best you can by scraping off the paint very carefully.

Q.—I recently plastered a wall. It is all right over most of the surface, but in three or four places, there are soft spots, as though the plaster never hardened. What caused this?

A.—Soft spots generally are the result of having worked over the plaster with a trowel after the material had begun to set.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓Water potted Geraniums, Begonias and Fuchsias — and other hanging basket plants — more often than you would if they were planted in the ground.
- ✓Plant shade trees for climate control on your property. Trees will cool, help minimize noise, and beautify at the same time. The local garden center has the trees that thrive in our communities.
- ✓Yellowing leaves on Azaleas, Camellias, Gardenias and other plants may be a sign of iron chlorosis. Use iron chelates or other special compounds available at your nursery to green-up the foliage.
- ✓Vegetables that are harvested early — before they get "old and tough" on the plant — make the best meals.
- ✓Dahlias should be fastened to stakes now to avoid any breakage of stalks by the heavy flowers.
- ✓Snip off spent blooms on your hydrangeas to relieve the shrubs of all that heavy weight and to prolong flowering.

On How To Keep Redwood Clean

Hose redwood gently to remove loose soil or wash it with warm water and detergent to remove food stains.

To eliminate soft drink stains wash with a solution of oxalic acid or clorox, then rinse.

Tighten bolts and screws annually to prevent wobbling and breaking of the wood.

For your garden furniture, solid vinyl strapping and tubing may be cleaned by hosing or with a mild detergent and water.

To help protect strapping and tubing, apply auto paste wax lightly. Some suntan lotions may permanently stain vinyl.

Lawn Retardants Are Not Too Successful

There are chemical sprays to retard lawn growth — which some home owners hope will reduce mowing. But they have not been entirely successful.

Problems arise from the need for exact applications and the fact that the spray might not affect all species equally, so that mowing would still be needed to level out unevenness.

Wood Plays Role In The Laying Of Concrete Slab

Straight, kiln-dried two-by-fours should be used as forms for laying a concrete slab, driveway or sidewalk.

Douglas fir or pine lumber is good for this use, and when the forms are to be left in place, western cedar is recommended.

After the area to be poured has been excavated, the forms should be placed, leveled and plumbed, then braced with sturdy wood stakes that are long enough to anchor firmly in the soil, as wet concrete is heavy.

Forms that will be reused when pouring in sections should be brushed with old crankcase oil or wrapped with waxed paper to make removal easier.

Lumber forms that will be left in place, as dividers or edging strips, can be protected on the top edge with masking tape while pouring, making removal of excess concrete easier when cleaning up.

Forms that stay in place also should be preservative-treated for longer life.

Sluggishly Told Story Of A Dynamo

BUCKMINSTER FULLER: AT HOME IN THE UNIVERSE by Alden Hatch; Crown, 274 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Jorie Parr.

Bucky the man is the focus of this slow-going biography by an old friend, Alden Hatch.

Chronologically Hatch narrates the details of the life of the most original philosopher of our era, the best known American in the world at large. There is no voltage; but if motivated by a fascinating subject, you will slog along.

It may come as no surprise that as a kindergartener the inventor of the Geodesic Dome constructed of toothpicks and dried peas a tetrahedronal octet truss, but there it is. A hearty beginning to his school career, that was, alas, unsustained. He, both funny looking and individualistic, was later booted from Harvard.

As a young man, Richard Buckminster Fuller was considered a ne'er-do-well by many, including his mother. The worst blow of his life occurred when she called on his future father-in-law to try to dissuade him from sanctioning the marriage to lovely, socially impeccable Anne Hewlett. How wrong the meddling matron was!

Anne, his wife for more than half a century, has always been his balance wheel, his "anchor to windward." She has persevered through her husband's early ineptitude (indifference?) to finance, his visits to "thousands of brothels" (an exaggeration), and his Greenwich Village period wherein he only weekended with her. Early on, Fuller went through a silent meditation cycle of several years, talking just to his wife and small daughter, and not to them very much. But she had seen her mission in life and has been rewarded, now and a long the way, such as with this poem Bucky wrote during their post-honeymoon hard times:

"Lady Anne went to the store
To buy food for a week or more
She bought an egg and half a roll
And a nice red apple that she stole."

Fuller regards women as being more in tune with Universe than men, more important to its functioning. He feels that men "took woman-invented industry and ran it themselves as 'a competitive weapon for augmenting widely ranging exploitations and plunder.' "

Bucky, who advocates industrialization, is fervent for ecology; his kind of industrialization is based on ephemeralization and recycling. Interestingly, he notes that in fully industrialized countries the birth rate automatically drops to about zero population growth. Therefore, if all underdeveloped countries were fully industrialized . . . The author pictures a man of paradoxes, but they are surface paradoxes.

As he charges into his 80s, Fuller remains vigorous, and borders on the ascetic. He took up jogging (calling it dog-trotting) decades before it became fashionable, and gave up his penchant for strong drink back in the 1940s, and now sips only weak tea: 40 cups of it per day. (We are told that he goes to the bathroom hourly.)

In the mid-1960s, feeling sluggish at 190 pounds, Bucky devised a diet of three-quarters to a pound of steak, lean London broil, for breakfast, lunch and dinner, with salad and fruit to supplement the last two meals. He now weighs 140. A good guest, he buys his own meat, and Alden Hatch recalls "going out to his kitchen one morning to find Bucky tending the sizzling pan and doing a soft-shoe dance in front of the stove in sheer youthful exuberance."

Young people have always adored Buckminster Fuller and sought to make a guru of him, but this he has resisted.

"People," he says, "must believe in my principles and my ideals - not in me." But they worship him anyway. Not for his mental brillance alone, or his emphasis on "livingry," not "killingry." What it is, paradoxically again, is "Bucky's need to be loved, and his eagerness to return such love in lavish, overflowing abundance."

To quote his brother-in-law, Roger Hewlett, "Bucky will do anything, including inventing geodesic domes, to make you love him . . ."

BUCKMINSTER FULLER is pictured with his family in this photograph, included among the illustrations in the Crown-published book, "Buckminster Fuller: At Home in the Universe" by Alden Hatch.

The Much Misunderstood Woman Who Was Henry's Only True Love

THE CHALLENGE OF ANNE BOLEYN by Hester W. Chapman; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 244 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Anne Boleyn, one of history's most romantic and most tragic personalities, second wife of Henry VIII, mother of Elizabeth I, has always had, according to biographer Hester W. Chapman, a bad press.

Anne was not the scheming flirt, the temptress who lured a susceptible Henry from Katharine, his wife of two decades, and finally connived to separate him — along with England — from the Catholic Church.

Rather, Anne was Henry's only true love, a sophisticated woman of her time, a shrewd planner, a witty, artistic beauty betrayed by time and biology, who foresaw and accepted her fate.

Miss Chapman traces Anne's career, from her youthful days as a lady-in-waiting at the French Court, to her return to England, through her nine-year romance with Henry, to the day when she bends her "little neck" before the swordsman of Calais.

In addition, Miss Chapman illuminates other villains, victims and actors in Anne's drama — Cardinal Wolsey, Katharine of Aragon, Princess Mary, Sir Thomas More, the Duke of Norfolk.

Miss Chapman's style is easy to read and the book is larded with unobtrusive scholarship, carefully documented and indexed. She avoids speculation and sets down events as they were seen by the people involved, as they wrote about them in diaries and letters.

This remarkably interesting book will fascinate followers of Tudor England.

Billie Jean King In A Double Fault

BILLIE JEAN by Billie Jean King with Kim Chapin; Harper and Row, 208 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Ron Lent.

Billie Jean King is the last word in women's tennis, but her book isn't.

Certainly the in-depth examination of Mrs. King's intangible and tangible qualities highlight the presentation. But the book fails in its writing style. While it may be a matter of the reader's personal taste, I found the prose to be cliche-oriented and all too folksy.

For example, when mentioning her parent's attitude about tennis, she wrote (or Kim Chaplin): "I don't think my mom and dad were ever big on tennis, but they were big on helping me as much as they could."

Or, "I'd rack out (sleep) again for a few more hours. In time it got to be pretty great." This statement alluded to her vacation she took the final months of 1972 at (local angle) Stinson Beach. During the three months spent primarily at Stinson, she recuperated from the physical and emotional battles of the pro tennis circuit.

There is a second local angle in this book; it is her analysis of her friend and rival, Sausalito's Rosemary Casals. Said Mrs. King, "On the court she loved to discover new ways to hit the ball, but she never really worked hard enough on developing the kind of sound, basic game you need to reach the very top."

And the top is owned exclusively by Mrs. King. An intense, high strung competitor, Billie Jean found the climb up the mountain of success difficult. Now she is determined not to allow anyone to knock her from her perch.

She's the queen, numero uno. As the champion, she naturally, became the first women to win $100,000 during a tennis season. It was "natural," for Billie Jean to be the first to reach this monetarial plateau; Mrs. King is goal-oriented.

One such goal was squelching self-styled tennis hustler Bobby Riggs. In a pressure-packed match at the Houston Astrodome Sept. 20, 1973, Billie Jean won one for women's liberation: 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Also on the women's lib subject, Mrs. King clearly expresses her feelings about her abortion in 1971.

With such a fascinating sports personality as its subject, certainly the book merits readership — but first a rewrite.

About Carpets

by Doug Emerson

CARPET CLEANING is something that is often let go from year to year. Perhaps when the home is put up for sale professional cleaners are called in . . . and it's amazing how "new" your carpets can look when they're restored in this way.

But the point is that it costs very little to keep your carpets looking this way from year to year. Most of us become so used to seeing soiled areas of heavy traffic, or the spot Junior left on the carpet last summer, or the time so-and-so spilled a drink or Sis upset some nail polish, that we don't really see the soiling. Unfortunately, visiters do see it . . . and your home doesn't look its best.

An annual cleaning will keep any carpet looking fresh, its colors bright and clear. Moreover, the carpet will last longer, because grit and soil imbedded in the fibers cause extra wear.

All this means cleanability is one of the properties you should look into when you select a new carpet for your home. That goes for "spot cleaning" when accidents occur, as well as overall periodic cleaning to make the whole carpet live longer and better.

We have the experience to advise you on the cleanability of different carpets, as well as other factors of beauty and wear. And we have the wide selection by famous carpet manufacturers that you're looking for. Come in . . . to the carpet people.

The Opinions Of Mr. Forbes Make For Bland Reading

FACT & COMMENT by Malcolm S. Forbes; Alfred A. Knopf, 295 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

If Forbes magazine is your favorite reading, and collecting up to 25-year-old business commentary is your secret vice, then "Fact & Comment" by Malcolm S. Forbes is the book for you.

Forbes magazine always features these little editorials, some rather witty, most quite obvious. Ephemera of this sort, especially concerning transitory business news, need not be preserved between hardcovers, particularly by the prestige publishing house of Alfred A. Knopf.

Malcolm S. Forbes has some very good ideas, and must be credited years ago with being ahead of his time (for a business writer) in heralding the need for corporate responsibility in ecological cleanup. But mostly, this is very dull reading, dated material that most people have either half forgotten, or were never too excited about when the items were news.

The inquisitive reader, for example, can find out why it was such a fine idea to make John Connally the secretary of the treasury, though he isn't a cabinet member anymore and has other quite different matters now on his mind.

And for real hindsight into major issues, there are some old columns pointing out that Watergate and inflation are not good for our country.

So many of Forbes' opinions are standard board room chic, the pinstripe cracker barrel wisdom of Wall Street, that the collective tone of these pages becomes an irritating fusion of a bland mind and Olympian pretension. His sophomoric dismissal of Women's Lib, for example, advises the ladies to emulate their Italian sisters in contemporary Rome: these women lack legal rights or business opportunity of the sort common in America, yet they rule their roosts anyway through a militant and demanding mother love.

Journalism that transcends its immediate subject, the sort of thing written by Addison and Steele, Defoe, Hazlitt or Winston Churchill, prevails because of a combination of style and vision, the ability to lift the mask off the face of the past and reveal its riddles.

As "Fact & Comment" lacks all these qualities, the book leaves the reader wondering how it all came about — why it was published.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

A BIT OF A SHUNT UP THE RIVER by Desmond Cory; Doubleday, 187 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

It is unlikely that Doubleday and Co. will print a better novel this year under its Crime Club label than Britisher Desmond Cory's "A Bit of a Shunt Up the River." Nor will any other publisher of crime novels.

This corking good yarn has everything — suspense, an exciting chase, delightful humor, good writing, insights into human nature and human relationships — except mystery. But Cory isn't writing a mystery novel.

Tracy, his less than meteoric race driving career ended by the psychological and physical damage of a crash, is content running a garage when his wealthy employer orders him to drive his strong-minded daughter from London to South Wales for a meeting with her estranged husband. At the very outset there is a dead body. And it is soon evident that Tracy and his pert passenger are being followed — by one Bony Wright, escaped convict with some unfinished and deadly business with the husband at the other end of the line.

There's confrontation in Wales, a smashing one, and then a harrowing chase back to London that the movies should love. But perhaps the most interesting aspect of this very fine book is the relationship that develops between Tracy and Bony, despite their clash of goals. Cory makes his characters believable and interesting. And this is a lot of entertainment for your $4.95.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

"Shelter" is a big book in the "Earth Book" pattern with the deliberate "homemade" look now so popular as part of the trend toward a simpler life.

It is the work of Lloyd Kahn, who enjoyed success with his earlier "Domebook 2," and published by Shelter Publications of Post Office Box 279, Bolinas, "a non-profit educational organization chartered in California for the purpose of gathering information on hand-built housing and the building crafts, maintaining a network of people interested in building and shelter . . ." The affiliation of Random House as the distributor indicates the book is not a strictly local or regional endeavor.

Kahn provides photographs and drawings, including color, plus texts that cover both the newest and some of the oldest (but now virtually forgotten) building techniques, materials and designs. From caves, to domes and sculptured dwellings. It is not just a pictorial survey of housing, but also a field workbook with instructions and illustrations to guide those inspired to construct. And the directions go well beyond just the raising of the walls and the application of the roof — into septic equipment, gardening, sun and methane devices, reforestation, what the ecology-minded have come to call "survival" with an emphasis upon simplicity.

"FINDING AND Preparing Precious and Semi-Precious Stones" is a $6.95 Association Press softcover guide for the beginner in an increasingly popular hobby, written by Los Angeles educator and rockhound James A. Peterson, and covering the field from the hunt and identification of the gems to their preparation and display. There's a bibliography, and a list of gemstone sites.

Red Smith On Sports: Columns Of Consistency

With the death of Grantland Rice, Red Smith ascended to the unofficial title of dean of America's sportswriters.

The hallmarks of the work of the veteran New York Times columnist are consistency and versatility. Rarely, if ever, does he write a piece that is dull and uninteresting. And he can write with solid expertise upon the entire spectrum of sports and sports-related topics.

He is not a spectacular writer — not a coiner of unforgettable phrases nor a revealer of undeniable truths. He is most closely identified with the old-timers among the sportswriting profession, whose enjoyment and pleasure with the games, and the men and women who played them, were transmitted to readers, unclouded by cynicism and ego. Still, Smith's columns have never been marred by the schoolboyish naivete that has rendered silly the enthusiasms of some of his contemporaries. In short, he has struck a happy medium, questioning, sometimes critical, but never carping nor unnecessarily personally intrusive.

Whether a book comprised of reprints of Red Smith columns justifies the expenditure of $9.95 and several hours of reading time depends upon, first, whether you are a Red Smith fan, and, second, the depth of your interest in sports.

The fact that the contents are restricted to a period beginning with November, 1971, when Smith joined the Times, following the demise of the New York Herald Tribune for whom he had written long and competently, necessarily limits the range and quality of the collection. For one thing, it means that the columns deal for the most part with sports events and figures of an era when much of the color and excitement — the juice — seems to have been squeezed from athletics by a creeping commercialism. The "giants" are in the past.

But then a Red Smith column, wrote today, often harkens back to yesterday, so that we are not denied totally the pleasure of his past experiences and contacts. Babe Ruth, Knute Rockne and Ernest Hemingway are part of the book, just as are Ron Lyle, Johnny Bench and Bowie Kuhn. Chris Evert and her generation share the pages with Josh Gibson and his.

The book has been divided into sections, according to the sport. Smith's baseball pieces seem his best to us, but that may well be a matter of personal taste. The column on Pete Reiser, who while blessed with all the talents of a Willie Mays or Henry Aaron played with such total abandon and enthusiasm that he wrecked his body and career, struck a special chord with us. We remembered as we read watching Reiser crash fences and dive headlong with that same disregard for life and limb while we were a young sports editor in Wichita and the great young outfielder was playing World War II service baseball out of Fort Riley.

A couple of the longer fishing stories were originally written for Sports Afield, not the Times, and we suspect enthusiasts for the quiet sport will thoroughly enjoy Red's apparent empathy with that pursuit.

"I have no illusions about the perishable nature of this work nor any apologies for its shortcomings," the columnist writes in his foreword.

The reader should adopt that same sensible attitude. The sports subjects covered by Red Smith are something less than world shaking in their importance. But Smith covers them with a sense of proportion and objectivity. For those who enjoy this kind of thing, there need be no embarrassment. Red Smith succeeds, at least, in lifting sports from the child level to an adult stature. And, at the same time, he treats athletics with the respect that even recreation merits from a professional.

And as for the shortcomings, Red Smith commits very few errors. Professional sports' pampered darlings should do as well.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

Studios Strive To Satisfy The Craving For Nostalgia

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

When the three sisters — Patti, Maxine and LaVerne — first appeared on the movie scene with Abbott and Costello, America was still at peace, but building a civilian army in readiness for the forthcoming World War II.

The three girls had an overabundance of energy and a disarming manner, and for the next two decades they were the outstanding female trio of show business, selling records by the millions.

When LaVerne died some years ago, the surviving sisters moved back into the shadows and didn't fully emerge until they were called to Broadway to recall those days of the early 1940s.

It is only natural that the success of the show should stimulate new interest in the styles of the sisters and call for a playback of some of their early recordings. These may be heard on "In the Modd" by the Andrews Sisters (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1023).

The double record package includes almost all of the tunes popularized by Patti, LaVerne and Maxine. There's the "Pennsylvania Polka" and also "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen."

And again you can hear them sing "Tennessee Waltz" and "Ciribiribin."

The set also includes songs from the Abbott and Costello show, among them "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy' and "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar."

Those who remember the Andrews Sisters in their heyday should find lasting entertainment in "In the Modd."

TWO OF THE SONGS in the Andrews Sisters album — 'Oh! Ma-Ma! The Butcher Boy" and "Beer Barrel Polka" — also are included in another excellent two record album, "The Best of the Mills Brothers, Volume II" (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1027).

The Mills Brothers pre-date the Andrews Sisters by several years and they built a fantastic career on lively singing.

This selection includes "Ballerina" and "Bye Bye Blackbird." All of the tunes have been electronically rechanndeled to simulate stereo but this refinement is really not needed because the Mills Brothers have a way of projecting their songs into three dimensions.

A RECENT BONANZA for students of country and western music is "For the Last Time" by Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys (United Artists UA LA216 J2).

Wills originated country swing almost 40 years ago with "San Antonio Rose" and became a perennial juke box favorite as well as a barndance stalwart.

Last December Wills rounded up as many members of his original band that he could find to play his music again.

There are vocals by Merle Haggard, Leon Rausch, Leon McAuliffe, Jody Nix and Joyle Nix. "San Antonio Rose," of course, had to be included but there are other songs associated with Wills, among them "Mild Cow Blues" and "Faded Love."

Getting Rid Of Old Paint Or Varnish

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

There are several ways of removing the old paint or varnish from a piece of furniture you are refinishing.

It can be scraped or sanded off, it can be removed with such chemicals as lye, or it can be taken off with a commercial solvent-type paint and varnish remover.

I recommend that the household handyman stick to the commercial paint and varnish removers. Scraping and sanding can gouge the wood if not property done and chemicals like lye also can cause serious damage.

THE COMMERCIAL paint removers are available in many brands. They come in various thicknesses, ranging from liquid to cream to paste. I suggest that unless you are really experienced you avoid the thinnest forms and use a thicker liquid type for horizontal surfaces and cream for vertical surfaces. Try as often as is practical to place the surface you are working on in a horizontal position.

Here is how I suggest you go about it:

Spread the paint remover liberally with a brush on the surface you are working. A natural bristle paint brush is best for this purpose. Cover about two square feet at a time, letting the remover stand until the surface starts to blister or peel. This may take anywhere from five to 20 minutes, depending upon the hardness of the old finish and how many coats are involved.

WHEN THE OLD finish has softened, peel it off with a putty knife. (It is a good idea to slightly round the edges of the knife with a file so it won't gouge the wood.) If the old finish is particularly hard or consists of several coats, you may have to repeat the process several times.

It is important, as soon as the old finish has been scraped off, to neutralize the remover that has soaked into the wood; use turpentine or lacquer thinner. Then wash down the entire surface, using steel wool and working as much as possible with the grain of the wood.

Here are some hints for working difficult places that cannot be conveniently handled with a putty knife, such as rounded and fluted surfaces:

APPLY THE REMOVER as described. Then a pad of steel wool or burlap is useful for removing the softened finish. Another trick is to twist a strip of burlap into a "cord" and, with one end in each hand, work it over rounded and grooved areas. A block of wood covered with sandpaper may be useful in getting at some subborn corners.

I have successfully removed softened finish from difficult carved areas with such "tools" as an old toothbrush, an orange stick and a meat skewer wrapped in cloth.

When you have removed all the old finish and neutralized any remover that may have been absorbed by the wood, and the color of the surface is to your liking, you are ready to start refinishing according to whatever plan you may have in mind.

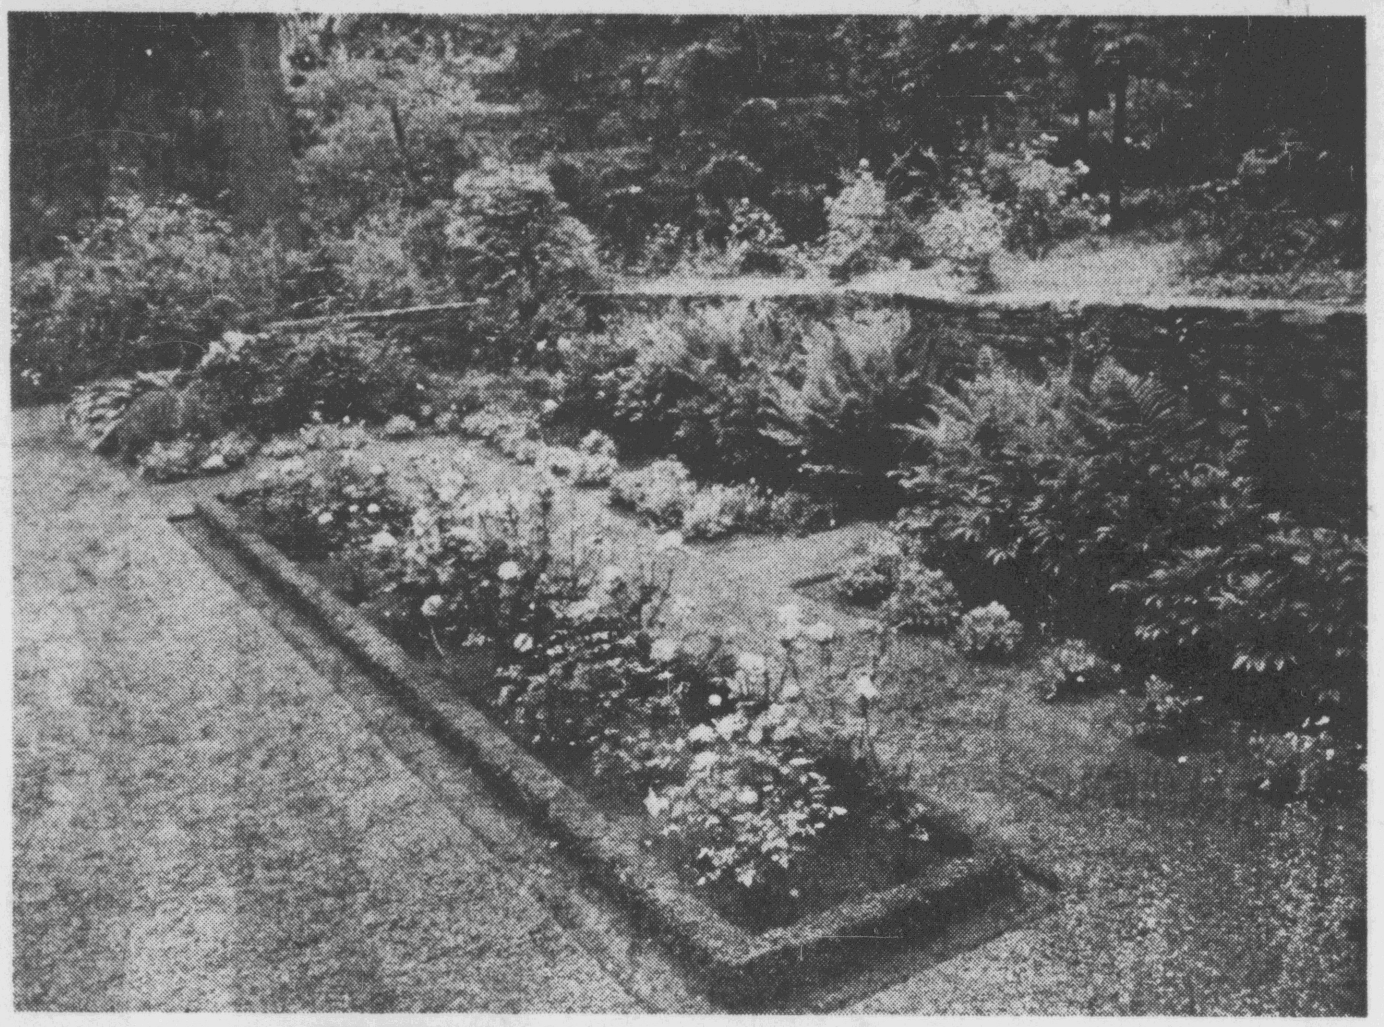
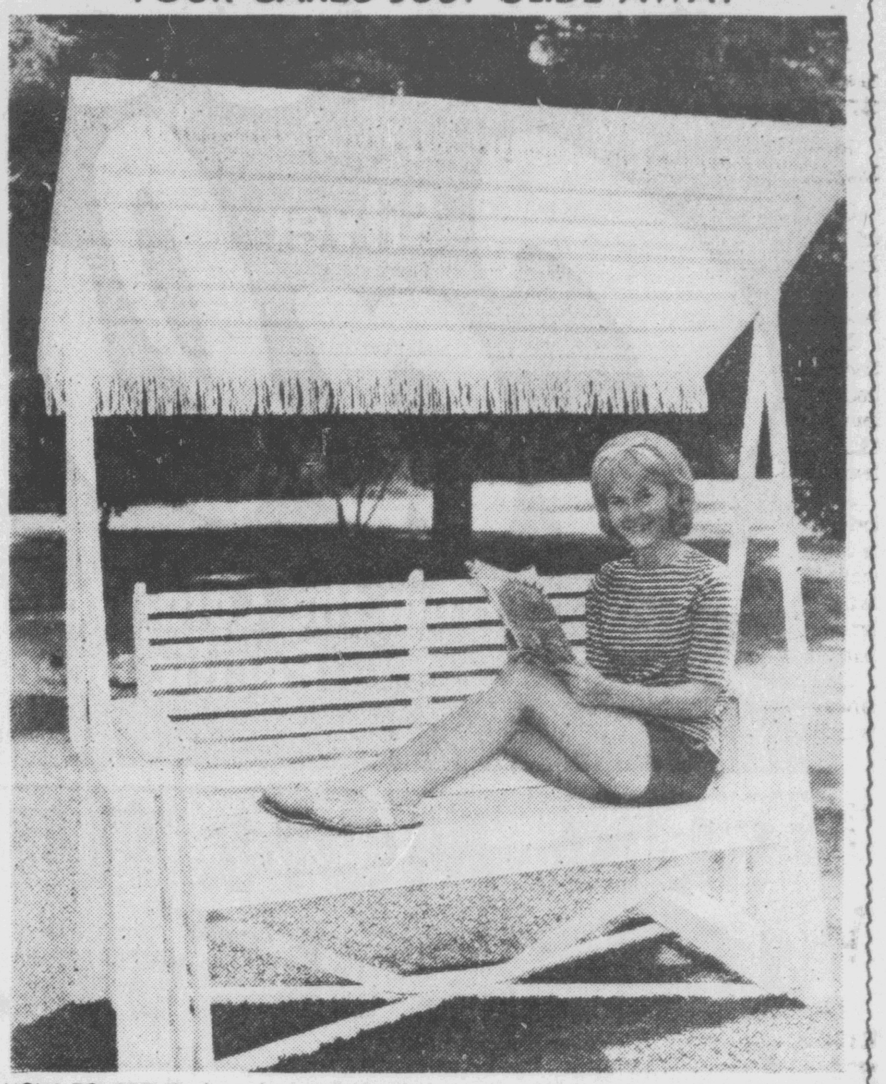
THE HOME AND YARD



HERE FERNS HAVE been used to add a lush accent to a retaining wall border. Indoors or out-of-doors, the versatile fern family has a special talent for creating an air of serenity and coolness. Thus, their increasing popularity.

YOUR CARES JUST GLIDE AWAY



HOW TO SPEND those leisure hours these warm and sunny summer days? Actress Heather North demonstrates one suggestion: relaxing in the backyard in the comfort of a glider swing. But first you must buy or build your glider. If you decide to build it yourself, Steve Ellingson is ready to help you with one of his patterns. Just send $1.75 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Lawn Glider Settee Pattern 369. The pattern comes full-size, so that all you have to do is trace the parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Then you're ready to sit back and swing, while your cares glide away.

For Finest In Foliage Plants, Look To The Fern Family

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

For something different in foliage plants, indoors or out, none is lovelier than the fern.

Most gardens have a good place for ferns, and indoors a sunless north window, so often a problem for the house plant enthusiast, is a fine place for them.

Have you a shady corner of the garden where you can provide moist peaty soil, friable, and fairly rich? A collection of hardy ferns will love it there. Many prefer shade, although some will tolerate sun.

YOU CAN PLANT them along woodland paths, beside a brook or garden pool, against the north foundation of the house, on stone walls, in chinks of rocks around bird baths and bird feeders, and under shade trees.

One of the easiest to grow is the Maidenhair Fern. It likes moisture, grows about a foot high, and is charming with Bleeding Heart.

The Toothed Wood Fern, which may be familiar to you in florists' arrangements, is a lacy almost fluffy plant, its fronds beautifully divided. It is an evergreen and grows about 30 inches high.

THE CHRISTMAS FERN also is an evergreen. It is so called because each frond part is shaped like a Christmas stocking. It grows two to three feet tall and is effective in a massed planting.

The Cimmamon Fern, also evergreen and tall, prefers wet swampy shade, but will also get along in dry shade.

If, however, you grow only one kind or are new at it, a good choice is the Lady Fern. Fine and delicate, it is very attractive and will tolerate some sun.

THE OSTRICH FERN is a handsome plant. It reaches four feet, sometimes more, so is not for small flower beds. Very ornamental and vigorous with a fountain of great ostrich plumes.

The Osmunda Claytoniana sends up woolly fiddleheads in spring and will unfold to fronds up to three feet high. It will grow in dry shade. It is also good for planters.

Indoors the larger ferns in planters are very decorative. Many an office or hotel foyer uses them this way.

REMEMBER THE reliable Boston Fern our grandmothers always had? It is making a big comeback, especially in planters in offices, clubs, and hotels.

I have found the Bird's Nest Fern interesting.

Another fern that doesn't look like a fern is the Holly Fern, with leathery dark green fronds jagged along the edges like holly.

Small ferns are attractive for terrarium woodland gardens. The Walking Fern, dwarf Maidenhair, and the Creeping Polypodum vulgare are sold by some terrarium suppliers.

FOR HANGING baskets Rabbit's or Hare's Foot and Squirrel's Foot Ferns are fascinating. Feathery fronds and furry rhizomes make them different.

Ferns need moisture indoors, too. It is good to set the pots on trays filled with moist pebbles. Sprinkle the foliage, too. A layer of moist sphagnum moss on the soil can be helpful.

In spring and summer feed every two weeks with liquid fertilizer half strength. If you are potting them give them especially good drainage and a rich humusy soil — one-third each of sandy loam, peat moss or leaf mold, and coarse sand.

IN WINTER THEY can have some sun filtered by curtains or venetian blinds. If outdoors in summer, give them full shade. To control mealy bugs or scale, use wettable melathion and avoid all oil sprays.

If you wish to give your green thumb an experience, try raising Asparagus Fern from seed. Burpee has seed of Plumosis nanus, an upright grower, and of Spregeri (Emerald Feather), the kind fine for hanging pot.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q.—I will be painting the outside of my house this fall. I have painted inside rooms in the past, but this will be my first job of this kind. I have seen so many conflicting viewpoints on the kind of weather during which a house can be painted that I am a little confused. For instance, just the other day I saw one newspaper article that said not to paint when the humidity is very high, and the very sam day I saw a magazine story that said it was all right to paint on damp days. Which is correct and can you give me any additional information on when to paint?

A.—It is likely that the two stories were about two different kinds of paint. When using an oil-based paint, you should not work during a high-humidity day or when there is a film of moisture on the surface of the house. But it is all right to paint on that kind of day if you are using a latex paint. For either type of paint, do not work if the temperature is below 50 degrees Fahrenheit or above 95 degrees. It is even more important that this rule be followed when you are using latex paint. The label on the can of paint will tell you the normal drying time if you plan on a second coat, but humid weather can delay the drying period. Test the first coat by touch before you put on another. When it is thoroughly dry, it is firm to the touch and not even the tiniest bit sticky.

Q.—I was painting our kitchen when I spilled a little paint on two of the asphalt tiles on the floor. I didn't notice it immediately and by the time I did, the paint had hardened. Can I get if off with turpentine, since I used an oil paint?

A.—No. You can't use any solvent on asphalt tile without risking permanent damage to it. You'll just have to do the best you can by scraping off the paint very carefully.

Q.—I recently plastered a wall. It is all right over most of the surface, but in three or four places, there are soft spots, as though the plaster never hardened. What caused this?

A.—Soft spots generally are the result of having worked over the plaster with a trowel after the material had begun to set.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Water potted Geraniums, Begonias and Fuchsias — and other hanging basket plants — more often than you would if they were planted in the ground.

✓Plant shade trees for climate control on your property. Trees will cool, help minimize noise, and beautify at the same time. The local garden center has the trees that thrive in our communities.

✓Yellowing leaves on Azaleas, Camellias, Gardenias and other plants may be a sign of iron chlorosis. Use iron chelates or other special compounds available at your nursery to green-up the foliage.

✓Vegetables that are harvested early — before they get "old and tough" on the plant — make the best meals.

✓Dahlias should be fastened to stakes now to avoid any breakage of stalks by the heavy flowers.

✓Snip off spent blooms on your hydrangeas to relieve the shrubs of all that heavy weight and to prolong flowering.

The Oleander Is Tough, Yet It's Ornamental

It's unusual to find a shrub both attractive and tough, but in fitting that description, the oleander is a boon to gardeners throughout the state.

This shrub is quite easy to grow for it is not particular about soil, will take wind, sun and reflected heat and lives on very little water. And for good flower production it does demand high light intensity.

Of the many ways to plant the oleander, one of the most popular is as a road or driveway border. Oleanders make wonderful tub specimens for the patio and other warm outdoor living areas.

The oleander produces generous amounts of color flowers from May or June to October. Its evergreen foliage is an attractive dark green all year around.

To assure a bettter flower display and a more graceful shrub or tree, prune carefully in the early spring. Remove old flowering wood and cut some branches almost to the ground. If it's a lower growing shrub you want to pinch out tips or head slightly.

If these many handsome characteristics have convinced you that oleander is the plant for your garden or yard, see your nurseryman about some colorful varieties. For rose-red flowers there's Cherry Ripe; Mrs. Roading offers double, salmon-pink flowers, and Sister Agnes, pure white. Yellow, pink and deep red varieties are available, too.

On How To Keep Redwood Clean

Hose redwood gently to remove loose soil or wash it with warm water and detergent to remove food stains.

To eliminate soft drink stains wash with a solution of oxalic acid or clorox, then rinse.

Tighten bolts and screws annually to prevent wobbling and breaking of the wood.

For your garden furniture, solid vinyl strapping and tubing may be cleaned by hosing or with a mild detergent and water.

To help protect strapping and tubing, apply auto paste wax lightly. Some suntan lotions may permanently stain vinyl.

Lawn Retardants Are Not Too Successful

There are chemical sprays to retard lawn growth — which some home owners hope will reduce mowing. But they have not been entirely successful.

Problems arise from the need for exact applications and the fact that the spray might not affect all species equally, so that mowing would still be needed to level out unevenness.

Wood Plays Role In The Laying Of Concrete Slab

Straight, kiln-dried two-by-fours should be used as forms for laying a concrete slab, driveway or sidewalk.

Douglas fir or pine lumber is good for this use, and when the forms are to be left in place, western cedar is recommended.

After the area to be poured has been excavated, the forms should be placed, leveled and plumbed, then braced with sturdy wood stakes that are long enough to anchor firmly in the soil, as wet concrete is heavy.

Forms that will be reused when pouring in sections should be brushed with old crankcase oil or wrapped with waxed paper to make removal easier.

Lumber forms that will be left in place, as dividers or edging strips, can be protected on the top edge with masking tape while pouring, making removal of excess concrete easier when cleaning up.

Forms that stay in place also should be preservative-treated for longer life.

A Biography Of Jennie Churchill

LONDON COLNEY, England (UPI) — The world might have heard a good deal more about Jennie Jerome if she had not given birth to a son so extraordinary his career overwhelmed her own remarkable life.

For the past 18 months Julian Mitchell has been trying to do justice to the beautiful, vivid and talented New Yorker who blazed her way through Victorian society, breaking hearts and rules — and raising the son who became Sir Winston Churchill.

Mitchell spent part of the time in a cellar in Oxford reading the private letters of the Churchill family, with the permission of Sir Winston's widow, 89-year-old Baroness Spencer-Churchill. The rest of it was spent writing and watching the production of seven one-hour television programs for Thames TV titled, "Jennie, Lady Randolph Churchill."

On the last day of shooting, Mitchell leaned on the parapet of the moat that surrounds ancient Salisbury Hall where Jennied lived with her second husband, George Cornwallis-West, near the village of London Colney, 30 miles from London.

This is historic country. Nell Gwynn, the orange seller whose other wares also appealed to King Charles II, was once the mistress of the hall in the fullest sense of the word. On one of the king's visits she held their baby son over the moat and threatened to drop him in unless he was given a title.

Charles promised, but to let Nell know who was boss he did not create his natural son an earl till he was 6 years old.

Lee Remick, who stars in the title role and suggested the series to executive producer Stella Richman, arrived for a photo call on a day of blazing sunshine. She wore a wasp-waisted long dress of the turn of the century.

"Wouldn't you like to wear such lovely clothing all the time?" gurgled a magazine lady.

Miss Remick acted as though her ears could not have relayed the question verbatim.

"It's wildly uncomfortable," she said sweetly. "They nipped upstairs and loosened their corsets after meals, you know. And when they didn't, they did a lot of fainting."

The series is being offered to American networks and there are strong prospects the story of Jennie's dramatic career from her teen-age years in the Paris of the 1870s to her death in London in 1921 will reach American screens, Mitchell said.

"Even at 65 she was an expensive lady," he said. "She was the sort of woman for whom the basis of life did not begin with less than 40 pairs of shoes. She bought some shoes in Rome and after her return here put on a pair with very high heels.

"Hurrying because she was late for dinner she slipped on the polished staircase, breaking her ankle. It was badly set, gangrene set in and the leg had to be amputated.

"King George V and Queen Mary were among those who sent flowers to the sickroom. One morning her nurse brought her breakfast. Jennie said: 'Nurse, I think I've broken my hot water bottle.' She hadn't. It was a fatal hemorrhage. And if there is a dry eye in the house at this scene I shall be very upset.

Mitchell said he had taken an occasional liberty with history but the series has the full approval of the Churchills. Jennie is generally portrayed as she was — strong enough to insist on marriage to Lord Randolph in the face of family opposition from the powerful Marlboroughs, and to survive the circumstances of her husband's decline from a limitless future into illness and death.

Barbara Feldon Has A Unique Life Style

By VERNON SCOTT

She bought the cruiser a year and a half ago but has become a permanent resident only in the past nine months.

Barbara explains her domicile this way: "I bought the boat for weekends. But after the first weekend I decided I'd rather live here than in my house."

She still owns a seven-room dwelling in Hollywood, complete with fruit trees, reflecting pond and colorful garden.

But she prefers the boat and the continuing change in panorama — other boats gliding by, the tides, the gulls and small fish that dart around her floating home.

The boat itself is comfortably furnished. There is a full gallery but the head has a shower only. No tub.

There is a large stateroom aft with a double bed. The central cabin is spacious, all things considered. And the boat can sleep seven persons, more or less comfortably.

Barbara frequently entertains for dinner on the Cioppino but only one couple at a time to avoid giving her guests claustrophobia.

Her favorite dishes are her own version of sukiyaki chicken, onions, garlic, soy sauce, scallions, noodles, shrimp and bean curd cooked in a wok, and smorgasbord.

Indeed, Barbara said she leads a smorgasbord life, tasting this and that, traveling, meeting new people, seeing new places.

Since her divorce she has been the steady companion of producer Bert Nodello who is no stranger to the Cioppino. Barbara's other faithful companion is her pet cat of 13 years, a Siamese who answers to Yang.

Barbara hasn't seen her co-star, Don Adams, in the defunct "Get Smart" series since the show was canceled. They live in different worlds and never did have anything in common except the series.

Although she is five-feet-nine and weighs only 114 pounds, Barbara is a diet gal. She counts every calorie, even shunning beef and pork in favor of fish and chicken.

Barbara has a first rate mind and attends night classes in painting and drawing at UCLA.

Her Hollywood house displays much of her work as well as the canvases of her friends. It is a Spanish design with polished wood floors providing a rich border for her Persian rugs.

Aboard the Cioppino Barbara wears blue jeans, a blouse and boat shoes. She has a small wardrobe — there isn't much closet space on board — mostly pants, sweaters, shirts and blouses.

"Get Smart" has given her financial independence, making it possible for her to work at comfortable intervals. She appears on game shows and television specials — enjoying the travel to New York.

Only one element of her life doesn't fit Barbara's pattern. She has yet to sail her boat to Catalina — claiming she's not a good sailor.

Revival Of 'Your Hit Parade' Pleasing To Pair Of Old Ears

By ARTHUR UNGER
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

I thought there was something wrong with my ears the other evening. I was listening to pop music and I could actually understand every word of the lyric. But, then, I realized it was "I'm in the Mood for Love" and "Red Sails in the Sunset," and I was almost back in 1935 listening to the Oct. 26 survey winners on "Your Hit Parade." I wasn't dreaming though — I was watching the revival of "Your Hit Parade" (CBS, Friday, 8:30 p.m., check local listings), and I was loving every minute of it.

Barbara Feldon Has A Unique Life Style

By VERNON SCOTT

She bought the cruiser a year and a half ago but has become a permanent resident only in the past nine months.

Barbara explains her domicile this way: "I bought the boat for weekends. But after the first weekend I decided I'd rather live here than in my house."

She still owns a seven-room dwelling in Hollywood, complete with fruit trees, reflecting pond and colorful garden.

But she prefers the boat and the continuing change in panorama — other boats gliding by, the tides, the gulls and small fish that dart around her floating home.

The boat itself is comfortably furnished. There is a full gallery but the head has a shower only. No tub.

There is a large stateroom aft with a double bed. The central cabin is spacious, all things considered. And the boat can sleep seven persons, more or less comfortably.

Barbara frequently entertains for dinner on the Cioppino but only one couple at a time to avoid giving her guests claustrophobia.

Her favorite dishes are her own version of sukiyaki chicken, onions, garlic, soy sauce, scallions, noodles, shrimp and bean curd cooked in a wok, and smorgasbord.

Indeed, Barbara said she leads a smorgasbord life, tasting this and that, traveling, meeting new people, seeing new places.

Since her divorce she has been the steady companion of producer Bert Nodello who is no stranger to the Cioppino. Barbara's other faithful companion is her pet cat of 13 years, a Siamese who answers to Yang.

Barbara hasn't seen her co-star, Don Adams, in the defunct "Get Smart" series since the show was canceled. They live in different worlds and never did have anything in common except the series.

Although she is five-feet-nine and weighs only 114 pounds, Barbara is a diet gal. She counts every calorie, even shunning beef and pork in favor of fish and chicken.

Barbara has a first rate mind and attends night classes in painting and drawing at UCLA.

Her Hollywood house displays much of her work as well as the canvases of her friends. It is a Spanish design with polished wood floors providing a rich border for her Persian rugs.

Aboard the Cioppino Barbara wears blue jeans, a blouse and boat shoes. She has a small wardrobe — there isn't much closet space on board — mostly pants, sweaters, shirts and blouses.

"Get Smart" has given her financial independence, making it possible for her to work at comfortable intervals. She appears on game shows and television specials — enjoying the travel to New York.

Only one element of her life doesn't fit Barbara's pattern. She has yet to sail her boat to Catalina — claiming she's not a good sailor.

Revival Of 'Your Hit Parade' Pleasing To Pair Of Old Ears

By ARTHUR UNGER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

I thought there was something wrong with my ears the other evening. I was listening to pop music and I could actually understand every word of the lyric. But, then, I realized it was "I'm in the Mood for Love" and "Red Sails in the Sunset," and I was almost back in 1935 listening to the Oct. 26 survey winners on "Your Hit Parade." I wasn't dreaming though — I was watching the revival of "Your Hit Parade" (CBS, Friday, 8:30 p.m., check local listings), and I was loving every minute of it.

New 'Hit Parade' Easy On Old Ears

The original "Hit Parade" started on radio in 1935, switched to NBC-TV in 1949 where it remained through 1958, at which time it was moved over to CBS where it died the next year. Now, 15 years later, Bill Hobin, who directed the old show on NBC for three years, is producing and directing the new show for Chuck Barris Productions.

And it's all there — the bad lighting, the exaggerated phrasing, the outrageous dramatizations, the Marge Gower-type choreography, the foottapping tempo, the "hidden" numbers. The only thing missing is the breathlessness of the singers and dancers as they dashed from one production number to another in those early video-tape-less days.

I must report that instead of boyish Snooky Lanson, we now have boyish Chuck Woolery; instead of girlish Dorothy Collins, we have girlish Sharalee, and instead of perky Gisele MacKenzie, we now have perky Kelly Garrett. But, you'll hardly notice the difference as they swing into "Isn't It a Lovely Day" with the phony rain pouring down, which clears up instantly as the sun emerges at the end. Or when the titles come on which read: "sTOP at HATties — 8 miles." Get it? "Top Hat" — Number 8!

It's hard to tell what part of the current "Your Hit Parade" is — I hate to use the word — camp. And what part is — I hate to use another word — nostalgia. But, I suspect a good part of the show is pretty darn — and I hate to use this word — straight.

It's as if Busby Berkeley was called out of retirement to re-stage "42nd Street" production numbers. Chances are he'd do them exactly the same way with, perhaps, contemporary costumes.

Well, that's what has happened to "Your Hit Parade." Seven of the numbers are from the top 10 of that particular week (a different nostalgic week will be chosen each time), and they are staged in contemporary costume or authentic period of the sketch (however the fancy strikes art director Romain Johnson and costumer Frank Novak).

The extras however — two in number — are very contemporary, with songs chosen from today's top 40, performed by the original artists in this first show, Bo Donaldson and the Heywoods singing "Billy, Don't Be a Hero," and Blue Magic singing "Sideshow."

Those choices, however, might have been made by the old dictator of the original show, George Washington Hill himself, they are so much like the extras that used to be.

"Your Hit Parade" won't bear too detailed analysis —a critical look at it might reveal that it is trying to be all things to all men, and thus tends to tumble into the generation gap between camp and nostalgia. But, then again, I think of the millions of viewers who accept Lawrence Welk without sneer or chuckle and I realize that this "Hit Parade" can really claim a contemporary validity. So, suspend your judgment for a half hour, lean back and visit another era masquerading as today. And listen . . . listen to the glorious sound of lyrics as they were written. Of course, you may not like what you hear . . . but at least you hear it.

As far as director Hobin is concerned, "the public is ready again for 'Your Hit Parade,' and I think we'll be on longer than this five-week schedule indicates. We have options with all the stars for a January continuation in case TV audiences go for it."

Why did the old show die? "As soon as Elvis Presley came along, it began to be the performer rather than the song which people paid attention to. Unless you got the performer on the show, their songs meant nothing. And even then it was often impossible to duplicate their recording — they were so dependent upon electronics. The songs themselves didn't matter anymore."

Hobin feels the new show can appeal to everybody — young and old, straight and campy. "Most important, I think, is that we play songs that people can understand. Most people just aren't used to that anymore."

New 'Hit Parade' Easy On Old Ears

The original "Hit Parade" started on radio in 1935, switched to NBC-TV in 1949 where it remained through 1958, at which time it was moved over to CBS where it died the next year. Now, 15 years later, Bill Hobin, who directed the old show on NBC for three years, is producing and directing the new show for Chuck Barris Productions.

And it's all there — the bad lighting, the exaggerated phrasing, the outrageous dramatizations, the Marge Gower-type choreography, the foottapping tempo, the "hidden" numbers. The only thing missing is the breathlessness of the singers and dancers as they dashed from one production number to another in those early videotape-less days.

I must report that instead of boyish Snooky Lanson, we now have boyish Chuck Woolery; instead of girlish Dorothy Collins, we have girlish Sharalee, and instead of perky Gisele MacKenzie, we now have perky Kelly Garrett. But, you'll hardly notice the difference as they swing into "Isn't It a Lovely Day" with the phony rain pouring down, which clears up instantly as the sun emerges at the end. Or when the titles come on which read: "sTOP at HATties — 8 miles." Get it? "Top Hat" — Number 8!

It's hard to tell what part of the current "Your Hit Parade" is — I hate to use the word — camp. And what part is — I hate to use another word — nostalgia. But, I suspect a good part of the show is pretty darn — and I hate to use this word — straight.

It's as if Busby Berkeley was called out of retirement to restage "42nd Street" production numbers. Chances are he'd do them exactly the same way with, perhaps, contemporary costumes.

Well, that's what has happened to "Your Hit Parade." Seven of the numbers are from the top 10 of that particular week (a different nostalgic week will be chosen each time), and they are staged in contemporary costume or authentic period of the sketch (however the fancy strikes art director Romain Johnson and costumer Frank Novak).

The extras however — two in number — are very contemporary, with songs chosen from today's top 40, performed by the original artists in this first show, Bo Donaldson and the Heywoods singing "Billy, Don't Be a Hero," and Blue Magic singing "Sideshow."

Those choices, however, might have been made by the old dictator of the original show, George Washington Hill himself, they are so much like the extras that used to be.

"Your Hit Parade" won't bear too detailed analysis —a critical look at it might reveal that it is trying to be all things to all men, and thus tends to tumble into the generation gap between camp and nostalgia. But, then again, I think of the millions of viewers who accept Lawrence Welk without sneer or chuckle and I realize that this "Hit Parade" can really claim a contemporary validity. So, suspend your judgment for a half hour, lean back and visit another era masquerading as today. And listen . . . listen to the glorious sound of lyrics as they were written. Of course, you may not like what you hear . . . but at least you hear it.

As far as director Hobin is concerned, "the public is ready again for 'Your Hit Parade,' and I think we'll be on longer than this five-week schedule indicates. We have options with all the stars for a January continuation in case TV audiences go for it."

Why did the old show die? "As soon as Elvis Presley came along, it began to be the performer rather than the song which people paid attention to. Unless you got the performer on the show, their songs meant nothing. And even then it was often impossible to duplicate their recording — they were so dependent upon electronics. The songs themselves didn't matter anymore."

Hobin feels the new show can appeal to everybody — young and old, straight and campy. "Most important, I think, is that we play songs that people can understand. Most people just aren't used to that anymore."

Cavett Fumbles Talk To Nureyev

By ARTHUR UNGER

Whatever happened to the old Dick Cavett?

There's a long stage wait after he introduces Rudolf Nureyev, but finally "the divine Rudy" strides on, bedecked in spangled snakesskin and velvet, exuding a bravura presence which overwhelms the hysterical audience . . . and, unfortunately, Dick Cavett as well. What follows is an hour and a half of halting, cutesy-pie dialogue — no conversation, only remarks.

Dick Cavett originally made his reputation as an informed, concerned conversationalist — a listener who managed to ask intelligent questions and convince his audience that he was also interested in the answers. Most of that is gone now and we are left with a giggly, self-conscious, inadequately prepared Cavett struggling to hold up his end of the interview, reverting to groupie-type queries, tentative comments, always flirting — with the guest, the audience . . . with disaster.

That used to be Jack Paar's thing and it served him well. But where, oh where, is the bright, incisiveness of the old Dick Cavett?

Back to Nureyev — still no doubt the greatest ballet performer in the world today, a man whose name is destined to be recorded in the annals of dance with the all-time wonders. Cavett interviewed him several years ago — and now brings him back.

So what do we learn about him? That he owes a great deal to Pushkin, to Fonteyn, to Ashton, to Bruin. Why? Cavett didn't follow through. We learn that Nureyev admired Fred Astaire — "People filled their pockets with his inspiration." Colorful words? Not pursued deeply enough, although the Astaire talk is probably the area in which Cavett seems to have versed himself best.

Nureyev watches film clips — the best part of the show, by the way — and observes that the cinematographer "really cut my tootsies off."

Martha Graham? "She proves that if you stick around long enough, people will come back." Training and preparation for ballet? "I've molded my body into a dancer's body — it was difficult and painful."

Would Rudy consider a role in an American musical comedy? "Yes." Wouldn't his friends feel that was a comedown? "I don't think I would consult them."

At one point, Cavett obviously contemplates drawing Nureyev into the kind of intimate revelation which brought so much notoriety to his Bette Davis interview a couple of years ago. But Nureyev will have none of that: "Okay, we'll go 50-50. I suppose you are paid to be weird and ask weird questions."

That puts an end to the weird questions Cavett was obviously preparing to ask. So, he calls it quits with the flip adieu: "It's a shame you waited till 17 to start dancing — you might have really been something. . ." and Nureyev departs — his dazzling smile, his overwhelming presence, his bravura movement, his seeming intelligence virtually untapped. And with him departs a rare opportunity to learn a great deal more about this natural wonder of the world.

DICK CAVETT
Old style is gone

Okay, Dick Cavett, so you feel uncomfortable talking about a discipline in which you are an outsider. So bone up! Study. Prepare. Invite somebody who knows ballet to share the stage with you. But please don't invite Rudy Nureyev to your platform and then ask him Donald O'Connor questions.

In addition, you might tell your producer that it's a good idea to listen carefully to videotapes shot two months in advance and edit out inaccurate, outdated material such as your observations about the Russian dancer Valerie Panov who has since departed the USSR.

The show is not a disaster. There are interesting film clips. There are a few pointed questions, several amusing answers. And there is Nureyev. . . if nothing else, at least he is there! But it is a disappointing show when one considers what the old Dick Cavett might have done with it.

Cavett Fumbles Talk To Nureyev

By ARTHUR UNGER

Whatever happened to the old Dick Cavett?

There's a long stage wait after he introduces Rudolf Nureyev, but finally "the divine Rudy" strides on, bedecked in spangled snakesskin and velvet, exuding a bravura presence which overwhelms the hysterical audience . . . and, unfortunately, Dick Cavett as well. What follows is an hour and a half of halting, cutesy-pie dialogue — no conversation, only remarks.

Dick Cavett originally made his reputation as an informed, concerned conversationalist — a listener who managed to ask intelligent questions and convince his audience that he was also interested in the answers. Most of that is gone now and we are left with a giggly, self-conscious, inadequately prepared Cavett struggling to hold up his end of the interview, reverting to groupie-type queries, tentative comments, always flirting — with the guest, the audience . . . with disaster.

That used to be Jack Paar's thing and it served him well. But where, oh where, is the bright, incisiveness of the old Dick Cavett?

Back to Nureyev — still no doubt the greatest ballet performer in the world today, a man whose name is destined to be recorded in the annals of dance with the all-time wonders. Cavett interviewed him several years ago — and now brings him back.

So what do we learn about him? That he owes a great deal to Pushkin, to Fonteyn, to Ashton, to Bruin. Why? Cavett didn't follow through. We learn that Nureyev admired Fred Astaire — "People filled their pockets with his inspiration." Colorful words? Not pursued deeply enough, although the Astaire talk is probably the area in which Cavett seems to have versed himself best.

Nureyev watches film clips — the best part of the show, by the way — and observes that the cinematographer "really cut my tootsies off."

Martha Graham? "She proves that if you stick around long enough, people will come back." Training and preparation for ballet? "I've molded my body into a dancer's body — it was difficult and painful."

Would Rudy consider a role in an American musical comedy? "Yes." Wouldn't his friends feel that was a comedown? "I don't think I would consult them."

At one point, Cavett obviously contemplates drawing Nureyev into the kind of intimate revelation which brought so much notoriety to his Bette Davis interview a couple of years ago. But Nureyev will have none of that: "Okay, we'll go 50-50. I suppose you are paid to be weird and ask weird questions."

That puts an end to the weird questions Cavett was obviously preparing to ask. So, he calls it quits with the flip adieu: "It's a shame you waited till 17 to start dancing — you might have really been something. . ." and Nureyev departs — his dazzling smile, his overwhelming presence, his bravura movement, his seeming intelligence virtually untapped. And with him departs a rare opportunity to learn a great deal more about this natural wonder of the world.

DICK CAVETT
Old style is gone

Okay, Dick Cavett, so you feel uncomfortable talking about a discipline in which you are an outsider. So bone up! Study. Prepare. Invite somebody who knows ballet to share the stage with you. But please don't invite Rudy Nureyev to your platform and then ask him Donald O'Connor questions.

In addition, you might tell your producer that it's a good idea to listen carefully to videotapes shot two months in advance and edit out inaccurate, outdated material such as your observations about the Russian dancer Valerie Panov who has since departed the USSR.

The show is not a disaster. There are interesting film clips. There are a few pointed questions, several amusing answers. And there is Nureyev. . . if nothing else, at least he is there! But it is a disappointing show when one considers what the old Dick Cavett might have done with it.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BURT BACHARACH

Do you ever worry about losing your touch as a composer?—M. Reilly, Winnetka, Ill.

● Yes, as a matter of fact, I do. I'm doing well now, but my song-writing talent might run dry one of these days, and I want to have something to fall back on. For the past few years, I've wondered what kind of business I should enter. My profession, which puts me on the road a great deal, involves eating out a lot. So I thought it would be a good idea to invest in some restaurants. Right now I have two, on Long Island in New York. And I recently built a motel next to one of them.

FOR ROSEY GRIER

I read that you prefer needlepoint work to poker. Is that true?—M. T., Visalia, Calif.

● I usually combine the two. While I'm waiting for my buddies to play, I do needlepoint. They used to get mad because they said I delayed the game. Actually, it gave me time to think. When they figured this out, and saw the good hands I was getting, some of them started doing needlepoint too.

FOR JAMES B. IRWIN, former astronaut

Did your trip to the moon have something to do with your decision to start the High Flight Foundation, the religious organization to which you are now dedicating all your efforts?—John Dailey, Austin, Texas

● Yes. After my journey to the moon I believed I heard God saying to me, "I have taken you this far, Jim. Now I want you to go farther." I interpreted that to mean I should go farther toward heaven in a spiritual way.

FOR CATHY RIGBY, gymnast

I have often heard that after using parallel bars, etc., you became as strong as a bull. True?—Susan Marsh, Albany, N.Y.

● Heaven forbid! A small calf maybe, but I'd prefer not to be likened to a bull!

FOR JOHNNY CARSON

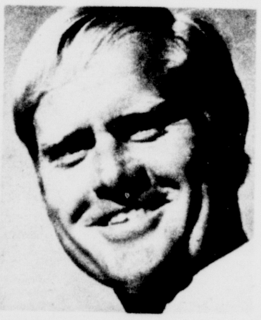
How much of your monologue is memorized and how much is ad-libbed?—Alan Brown, Steens, Miss.

● I have no script on the "Tonight" show, so my monologue is all ad lib in that sense. Actually I prepare it just before going on the air and have it in my head when I appear on camera.

FOR JACK LORD

Why do you think "Hawaii Five-O" has managed to stay on top so long?—J. Steed, Van Nuys, Calif.

● We're going into our eighth year because of a combination of things: the caring of the creator-producer Leonard Freeman, who died recently; the caring of myself, who had to take over many of the functions Leonard performed; plus the fact that we're 3,000 miles away from the network and have greater autonomy to do the things we want.



FOR JACK NICKLAUS, pro golfer

Arnold Palmer seems to be having a problem with his game. Have you tried to help him?—Don Miller, Chicago, Ill.

● Arnie's problem is mental. He has it fixed in his mind that he's having trouble. We all go through that, but Arnie is going through it longer.

FOR RONA JAFFE

Why haven't you ever married?—Becky Weldon, Clearwater, Fla.

● It's surprisingly simple. I didn't love any of the men who asked me to marry them; and the ones I loved never asked. I'm still old-fashioned enough to believe that without love there's no reason to get married.

FOR CHER BONO

Are your fingernails natural or artificial?—Monica Wenner, Nicollet, Minn.

● They're real. Keeping them is not easy—I have to be very careful. I really don't take any special vitamin or apply any special treatment. I'm just careful how I use my hands.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I know Vanessa Redgrave is politically active, but what about her sister Lynn?—N. M., Coos Bay, Ore.

● Lynn Redgrave doesn't have any political leanings or ambitions, and the fact that her sister does has no effect on their relationship. The two sisters are very close and, according to Lynn, when they meet and talk, there is so much else to discuss—such as their respective acting careers—that they ignore the political scene. Also, they feel it's wise to keep off a subject that might result in an argument. By the way, Vanessa ran for Parliament in the recent British election—and was beaten very badly.

Hugh O'Brian:

How a Week in Deepest Africa Changed My Life Forever

Ellen Blume Graham

"Dr. Schweitzer convinced me that I should put something back into the profession that gave me so much."

By Hugh O'Brian

One lazy Sunday afternoon back in 1957, I read an article in "The Saturday Review" written by Dr. Albert Schweitzer. It so impressed me that I wrote him to ask if I could visit him in Africa. About three weeks later I got a cable inviting "Dr. O'Brian and party." I don't know what made him assume I was a doctor, but I wasn't about to knock the only chance I thought I might have to see the famous humanitarian.

A short time later I landed in Douala, Africa, where I was met by a German doctor wearing a pith helmet. He took me on a short flight in a single-engine plane to a grassy airstrip near Lambarene, where we transferred to a native dugout canoe. From there, in tropical heat that reached 115 degrees, we paddled upriver. Besides the doctor and myself, there were six oarsmen, all wearing bandages on various parts of their bodies. They were lepers who contributed their efforts to repay Dr. Schweitzer for treating them.

We had to paddle upstream about a mile past the clinic, which was on the other side. Then we cut across the river, paddling like mad against the current. As we approached the hospital, I could see an old man in a white outfit moving slowly and deliberately down the hill. It was Dr. Schweitzer.

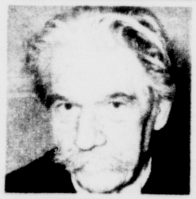
The next week was the most impressive of my life. I ate every meal with Dr. Schweitzer and his staff in the combination recreation hall-dining room. After each evening meal, Dr. Schweitzer and I spent an hour or more talking.

The first night, after he talked about half an hour, he was very tired. No wonder. He'd gotten up at six o'clock in the morning, as he did every day. I told him that I feared I was taking too much of his time and suggested we continue our discussion the next morning. Dr. Schweitzer said, "Nein," and then added, "I am very old and you are very young. You have lots of time left. I don't."

What impressed me most, and what influenced me so much, was the Doctor's total preoccupation with his work, his lack of interest in any luxury, his passion for people and his ability to make the most out of every moment of the day. His appreciation of time itself was fantastic.

Most people who are in show business, actors in particular, are involved in charities and give many hours of time. They do benefits, give money, lend their names. But because most charities have large national offices, there is often something impersonal about them. After watching Dr. Schweitzer I decided I wanted to create something for which I was solely responsible, some worthwhile project that depended on my energy. It was the Doctor's preoccupation with youth that spawned the idea that eventually led to the Hugh O'Brian Foundation, which is dedicated to seeking out, stimulating and rewarding the leadership potential in young people.

Every year I sponsor a leadership seminar attended by about 70 boys and girls, at least one from each state, plus ten from outside the U.S. [Editor's note: Except for occasional and irregular contributions from others, Hugh O'Brian pays for this himself. All high school sophomores are eligible. The final selection is made by the National Association of Secondary School Principals in association with the United States Jaycees. For further information, write the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation, c/o United States Jaycees, Box 7, Tulsa, Okla.]



"Since I met Dr. Schweitzer I have become more aware of the soul, of the force called God, of a life-giving energy. It is hard to describe, but religion means more to me now than before."

There is always a different theme to these weeklong seminars. In 1968, for instance, it was to teach the basic principles of the democratic process. Half of the boys and girls went to the Democratic convention in Chicago. The other half to the Republican convention in Miami. In 1969 they attended a seminar on oceanography in Miami. From 1970 to '73 they went to Cape Kennedy to learn about space. In 1974 it was a leadership seminar on government, held in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Schweitzer, who gave up a lucrative practice when he went to Africa, and who inspired other doctors and nurses to do the same, also convinced me that I should put something back into the profession that gave me so much. That's why I started the yearly acting awards at UCLA.

These are but a couple of the more easily described results of my pilgrimage to Dr. Schweitzer. There were other benefits.

When I first became successful in Hollywood, it was easy to be part of the "Hollywood scene"—big house, expensive cars, the works. After I came back from Africa I began to see that I could live comfortably without being a status symbol. Today I am satisfied with my 1963 convertible. I have a house that is comfortable, but not exactly luxurious. I have a part-time housekeeper and a secretary who comes in when I need her.

"Time," Dr. Schweitzer said, "is the gift of life. Use it carefully." I suddenly found more time for my aunts, who were getting older, for my brother and his family. I spent more time alone. I haven't exactly become a hermit, but where at one time I couldn't appreciate an evening without a girl—when a relationship was meaningless unless it was physical—I now see a lot of girls who are just good friends.

Even my attitude toward marriage has changed. If I had not met Dr. Schweitzer, if I had not learned how devoted he and his wife were to each other, I would probably have gotten married a long time ago and just as probably would have divorced not once, but maybe several times. Now I realize what a marriage is really meant to be, and I am determined not to make that permanent commitment unless I find a woman without whom I simply can't live. That's the kind of companionship I'm still looking for and still believe I will find. So if I haven't made a girl happy by now, at least I haven't made a girl unhappy either. I think that is some kind of achievement.

Dr. Schweitzer's religion has left a mark on me, too. As a child I used to go to church regularly, but I enjoyed it mostly because of the association with my parents and with other kids. It was a social sort of thing. Since I met Dr. Schweitzer I have become more aware of the soul, of the force called God, of a life-giving energy. It is hard to describe, but religion means more to me now than before.

When I stepped into the dugout canoe for the trip back downriver, Dr. Schweitzer came to the water's edge. His last advice to me was that I should do whatever I could to motivate young people; to try to do whatever I could as an individual, no matter how small, because he firmly believed that individuals could eventually move mountains.

He certainly proved it.

AT LAST! A DOCTOR WHO SAYS:

Take Food, Not Medicine, If You Suffer from Any One of These Ills!

"Why do I avoid prescribing drugs?", says this brilliant and controversial physician, who has cured literally thousands of patients with nothing more than ordinary food alone!

"For these four vital reasons"—

1. Because drugs do not produce health. They merely mask the symptoms of a disease . . . cover up the condition, while the body struggles on valiantly to cure itself.

2. This is the reason why so many men and women, of all ages, no sooner fight their way out of one ailment, than they fall right into another. Why they are always "half-sick". Why they never really know what it means to be completely free of pain, in glowing health. Because they, and their doctors, do nothing more than merely fight off each new attack, and never drain out the poison that is left from that attack, or rebuild the vital weakened tissue before it can fall prey to a new disease!

It Is "Tissue Weakness" That Opens The Door To One New Disease After Another! And NO Drug—Only Food—Can Build REAL TISSUE STRENGTH Again!

3. The lasting way to fight disease, then, is not just to counter-attack each new symptom in its turn . . . but to build such sheer physical strength into each threatened cell of your body that the organism that causes that disease is either destroyed, or rendered harmless, the very instant it enters your body!

4. This is done in two ways: First, to use a medical-diet to drain out the poisons that make your body weak today. And, finally, to use a second, even more powerful medical-diet to pour Super-Nutrients—Nature's own medicines—into every crippled organ of that body . . . not only to force out that specific disease, as fast as humanly possible, but also to leave that organ perhaps even healthier than before it was first attacked!

For example—

See How This NATURAL Method Has Worked—In Thousands Of Case Histories, From Every Walk Of Life, And With Almost Every Ailment You Can Imagine!

We shall let Dr. Nittler's patients speak for themselves:

"When I came to you I suffered from swelling and tingling of extremities, almost constant hunger, periodic weakness, great sensitivity to glare and loud noise . . . Since becoming your patient I find myself energetic and alert until nearly midnight, awake fully by 7:30 or 8 each morning, in good spirits, not sluggish, and continuing throughout the day glad to be alive, performing challenging tasks!"

"Before I became your patient, I had visited several skin specialists hoping to find help in the removal of what appeared to be growths on my face. Biopsies were taken; result negative. I asked how to get rid of these growths; how to prevent their growing back. I received a shrug of the specialist's shoulder (later, his bill!); he didn't know! Dr. Nittler took one look at the area involved and prescribed (natural) medication for external application which within one week's time cleared up the difficulty. It has not returned."

And Still More Thrilling Results! All Told In The Patient's Own Documented Words!

"However, on Easter Sunday, March 29, 1970, I suffered not only another occlusion, but an acute cardiac arrest. This was preceded by three days of intense weariness, fatigue and restlessness . . . Only extreme good luck made it possible for me to write these words . . . They (his regular physicians) believed open heart surgery to be the only hope for giving me a normal life span . . . It was at this point that I was referred to Dr. Nittler . . . after his initial examination and after reviewing my medical history . . . he started me on his "basic heart program". . . Within weeks, I noticed great improvement . . . an increased surge of well-being with each passing week. My family doctor continues to monitor my case. He cannot, at this point, rule out the open heart surgery recommended by his peers, but he is honest enough to admit I've shown great improvement. He says my heart is beating more slowly and stronger and that everything sounds good. My laboratory tests are all normal . . . I'm looking forward to returning to work and a normal productive life."

"I've been subject to asthma all my life. It would come with a cold or when I laughed or exercised too hard. The situation became dramatically worse when we moved to Santa Cruz in 1966. For some reason I'd catch a cold every four to six weeks . . . Only when I got it, it would go to my chest, develop into asthma, and I could hardly breathe. I was fed up with being sick and tired all the time . . . So I went through Dr. Nittler's whole program . . . Now (1971) the few colds I catch are very mild. I can't even remember the last time I had asthma with or without a cold!"

"In the latter part of November past, I broke out in an allergic dermatitis—severe hives . . . in addition to the hives, I would get a severe pain in an area above the right kidney . . . It was an acute shattering pain that immobilized me. I was next given cortisone. After 24 hours this would lessen the severity of both hives and pain. As long as I continued with cortisone . . . I was fine, but when I stopped, severe hives and pain recurred. Then back to cortisone for four or five days, followed by hives and pain. I seesawed back and forth in this manner for several weeks . . . A friend of mine gave me Dr. Nittler's phone number and begged me to call him. . . . Then on the tenth day under Dr. Nittler's care, something wonderful (to me, a miracle) happened—I was free of my ailments! A staggering weight had been lifted from both my shoulders and my wife's . . . Now I am in the thirteenth month after the doctor's care, enjoying the best of health and feeling great."

And Literally Thousands Upon Thousands Of Case Histories More! ALL STEMMING FROM NATURAL "SUPER-FOOD" TECHNIQUES LIKE THESE, THAT YOU CAN USE TOMORROW IN YOUR OWN HOME!

Again, to list only a few examples of the specific, step-by-step "Super-Food" Treatments given you in this great book:

Home treatment for constipation that works through your skin, and removes internal poisons, painlessly and automatically, at the same time it restores normal functions.

How to increase the blood flow (and therefore the life-giving oxygen) not only to your heart tissues, but your entire circulatory system. (As just one side-benefit of this new, natural therapy, cold feet simply feel warm and good again!) This process automatically lowers the work load of your heart, and your lungs, and so, as another marvelous side-benefit, almost immediately diminishes the ever-increasing shortness of breath that plagues most people!

How to get rapid relief from gallbladder pain. A treatment that also may enable you to actually, painlessly pass a stone or two (and get rid of them for good). And, at the same time, stimulate the flow of bile from your liver, and begin simultaneously stomach-healing food-therapy.

Why hemorrhoids do not have to be endured any longer! A simple capsule that may yield apparent benefits in a day or two, with restoration of normal function and comfort in a few weeks, just as it has in case after case in Dr. Nittler's own files!

How to keep from being poisoned by commercial food sprays. This method simply removes the spray from fruits and vegetables—in minutes!

A new way to brush your teeth that costs nothing. And that greatly increases your powers of digestion!

How, if you suffer from an acute illness, you can actually feed your body healing food-ingredients through the skin. That go to work to help you, in seconds!

Liver Detoxification! Follow These Simple Rules, AND PAIN-CAUSING POISONS LITERALLY POUR OUT OF YOUR BODY!

The best and most ancient method of healing wounds. (Animals do this instinctively. But we've forgotten it.)

A do-it-yourself prostate massage that involves only a simple motion with the legs and soles of your feet . . . plus a little-known and delicious food that greatly aids in the normal function of this important gland.

What to do for repeated violent pains in the chest (called Intercostal Neuralgia, and often mistaken for heart trouble or even attack). How to tell the difference at once. And then use a simple natural spray that relieves this torturous pain in minutes, for hours!

The inexpensive food that has fantastic results with cold, and even flu! As Dr. Nittler says: "This remedy alone cures many cases of flu."

Why Dr. Nittler dares to say: "I have known very severe long-standing cases (of Athlete's Foot) respond dramatically after one application"!

And why he also says: "I have seen a deep nasty boil on a cheek drain through the skin in one night with the use of this (natural food product). The infection was on the pad, there was no infection left in the boil and no wound visible."

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Allan H. Nittler, M.D., received his diploma in medicine almost thirty years ago from the University of Cincinnati . . . has been associated since then with both the United States Army and the San Francisco City and County Hospital. He was one of the first physicians to recognize the need for vitamins in medical therapy and the radical difference in effect between synthetic and organic vitamins in therapeutic dosage. He is a frequent contributor to various magazines and journals, and is recognized today as one of the leaders of the new medical science of preventive nutrition as a major factor against both fatigue and disease.

PLUS: emergency treatments for burns that prevent scarring . . . a simple remedy for poison ivy that works . . . how to melt away warts (and even some brown spots) . . . a non-prescription product (as are all the other remedies given here) that has a wonderful healing effect of the mucous membranes of the intestinal tract . . . home remedies for internal parasites . . . what you must do, at once, for diarrhea . . . how Dr. Nittler treats ulcers . . . how to rebuild weak stomachs, without aggravating them . . . how to break fever in emergencies, especially in children . . . the tested routine to follow for any virus infection . . . strength-foods for every part of the body . . . how your body can build up its own reserve supply of nutrients to fortify its natural resistance in terms of stress or epidemic . . . weight-reducing without tears . . . the most effective treatment ever invented for hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) . . . and much, much more!

TRUE OR FALSE?

2. Daytime dreams – such as those occurring during an afternoon nap–tend to be entirely different from nighttime dreams.

3. The younger you are the more you dream.

4. Women's dreams differ appreciably from men's dreams.

5. It's perfectly normal to have nightmares.

6. If you really want to know what you have dreamed, you must record it as soon as you wake up.

scented or unscented

ANSWERS

1. False. Unpleasant dreams are par for the course, and perfectly normal. A study of the dreams of more than a thousand men and women college students showed that only about one dream out of four was pleasant. And an appreciable percentage were downright fearful.

2. True. Studies at the University of California show that daytime dreams tend to be uninteresting, so-what productions, short on action and excitement, and with tedious and commonplace scenes and happenings. Nocturnal dreams were found to be much more bizarre, emotional and romantic, more action-packed.

3. True—as evidenced by studies, conducted by a team of University of Florida dream researchers, which show that the younger you are, the more time you spend dreaming. By the time you reach adulthood, dream time has tapered off sharply—with the result that you dream only about half as much after you leave your teens as you did as a young child. When adulthood is reached, dream time stops diminishing and becomes more or less constant.

4. True. A psychological study based on 500 male and 500 female dreams has shown that "the contents of the dreams of men and women are quite different, and that while women frequently dream about being indoors and in familiar surroundings, . . . men's dreams are more adventurous and feature more physical activities." Fifty percent of the aggressive encounters in men's dreams featured brawls, fisticuffs and similar acts of violence. However, a study of boys and girls of high school age found that, contrary to expectations, many girls expressed more aggression in their dreams than boys. It was concluded from this that "girls can be as or more aggressive than boys when they are permitted to be so."

5. True. Nightmares are something that happens to most people now and then. In one study of a college-student population, for example, it was found that 86 percent experienced nightmares. Frequent repetition of this type of dream, however, may occur in connection with deep-seated emotional conflicts.

6. True. As Miami University psychologist Dr. Alvin R. Mahrer, who has made a special study of dreams, observes, "Using a tape recorder next to my bed, I am often surprised by the differences between what I later think I had dreamed and the actual content of what was recorded." His advice: Record a dream as soon as possible, describing in detail every thought and idea that occurred during the dream, especially during moments of peak feeling. Incidentally, dream studies show that the more abruptly you awaken, the more vividly you'll remember what you were dreaming about. A gradual awakening tends to make a dream become fuzzy.

To the 56,000,000 people who smoke cigarettes.

A lot of people have been telling you not to smoke, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine. But smoking provides you with a pleasure you don't want to give up.

Naturally, we're prejudiced. We're in the business of selling cigarettes.

But there is one overriding fact that transcends whether you should or shouldn't smoke and that fact is that you do smoke.

And what are they going to do about that?

They can continue to exhort you not to smoke. Or they might look reality in the face and recommend that, if you smoke and want low 'tar' and nicotine in a cigarette, you smoke a cigarette like Vantage.

And we'll go along with that, because there is no other cigarette like Vantage.

Except Vantage.

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

Not that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. (But you probably wouldn't like the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette anyway.)

The plain truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

But Vantage is the only cigarette that gives you so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

So much flavor that you'll never miss your high 'tar' cigarette.

Family Weekly COOKBOOK

By Marilyn Hansen

You may be on a holiday, but your family's appetites aren't! Here's a collection of simple recipes that can be turned out quickly so your own leisure time can be at a maximum.

Great Outdoor Recipes for Boat, Camp or Backyard

Bill Holland

Food ideas to charm captain and crew: steaming mugs of "Warm-Up," tempting "Chicken-in-a-Roll," a plate of "Spaghetti With Clam Sauce" and the "Day's Catch" with a special sauce.

Warm-Up

1 can (10¾ ozs.) tomato soup, undiluted
1 can (10½ ozs.) beef broth, undiluted
1 cup water
⅓ cup vodka*
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon hot-pepper sauce

1. Combine all ingredients in saucepan. Heat just to boiling, stirring occasionally. Serve in mugs. Makes about 4 cups, 4 servings

*Variation: Omit vodka; increase water to 1 soup can.

Editor's note: One of my doctor friends loves to mix up soups on his 30-foot cruising sailboat. This "Warm-Up" is his choice to chase the chills on a cold, damp morning.

CHICKEN-IN-A-ROLL

2 cans (5-oz. size) boned chicken or turkey
1 jar (5 ozs.) Neufchâtel cheese spread with pimientos, room temperature
2 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
1 cup finely chopped apple
¼ cup sweet-pickle relish
¼ teaspoon onion salt
6 individual hero rolls

1. Drain broth from chicken, reserve. Chop chicken.

2. In medium bowl, gradually blend reserved broth into cheese. Stir in chicken, eggs, apple, pickle relish and onion salt.

3. Cut a thick slice from one end of each roll; hollow out soft center. Fill each hollow

The Fisherman's Catch, The Family's Meal

with about ½ cup chicken mixture. Wrap in foil or plastic film and refrigerate, if not serving immediately. Makes 6 sandwiches

Editor's note: This recipe was given to me by a woman who does a lot of boating and fishing with her airplane-pilot husband. She finds the rolls easy to eat in-the-hand.

SPAGHETTI WITH CLAM SAUCE

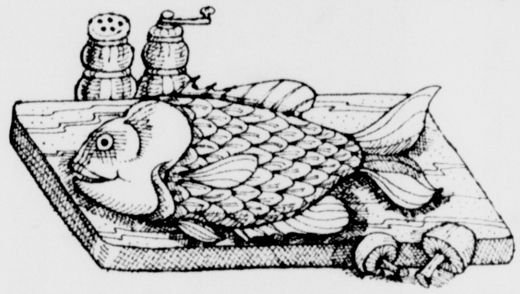
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning or oregano, crushed
2 cans (10¾-oz. size) tomato soup, undiluted
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon hot-pepper sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
3 dozen small raw clams, scrubbed
½ cup water
½ lb. spaghetti, cooked

1. In 2-qt. saucepan melt butter; add onion and Italian seasoning. Cook, stirring, 5-8 minutes, until onion is tender.

2. Stir in soup, water, hot-pepper sauce and garlic powder. Heat to boiling, stirring. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered 10 minutes to blend flavors; stir occasionally.

3. Meanwhile, place clams and ½ cup water in large covered skillet or saucepan. Heat to boiling. Cover and let boil until clams steam open; drain. Add clams to sauce. Serve with spaghetti.

Makes about 3½ cups sauce, 4 servings



DAY'S CATCH

2 lbs. fresh fish, cleaned (bass, trout, etc.)
Cornmeal
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ ozs.) mushroom soup, undiluted
⅓ cup water
1 tablespoon ketchup
2 teaspoons parsley flakes
½ teaspoon dillweed
Hot cooked rice

1. On waxed paper, lightly coat fish with cornmeal.

2. Heat butter in skillet until hot but not smoking. Add fish and cook over medium-high heat until fish is browned on both sides and flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove to serving platter, cover with foil to keep warm.

3. In same skillet combine golden mushroom soup, water, ketchup, parsley flakes and dillweed. Heat, stirring to loosen browned bits. Pour into sauceboat, serve with fish and rice.

Makes 1¾ cups sauce, 4 servings

Editor's note: We found that cornmeal is a favored ingredient in fish-frying on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Makes as many as desired

Your baby's first foods should be plain and simple.

When your baby nears his first month, his world begins to broaden. Eyes begin to follow light . . . tiny fists unfold . . . as he discovers the world around him.

And soon it's time for one of the most unique experiences of all . . . the introduction of solid foods.

It's important that your baby begin on the simple foods. Traditional starters are single-grain cereals . . . one-fruit juices . . . plain strained meats. They'll make up the basic diet for your baby, not only helping to provide adequate nourishment, but also helping to broaden his tastes.

Keeping to the simple varieties at the beginning is important, too, in helping you and your doctor note any unusual reaction to certain foods.

How do you know your baby is ready for solids? It depends on individual needs and your doctor. Now the question is, which food will be used as a starter? For most babies, it's cereal.

Starting with cereal. Gerber single-grain cereals are excellent choices. They have an especially smooth texture. And the flavors are pleasantly bland, the way babies prefer them.

Rice and Oatmeal are the traditional cereals recommended. Like all Gerber dry cereals, each is enriched with iron, thiamin, and other important B-vitamins.

When first introducing cereals, it's a good idea to make the mixture quite soupy (4 or 5 tablespoons of milk or formula to 1 tablespoon of cereal). As baby gets used to the mixture, you can gradually make the cereal thicker.

Meats provide important protein. Simple strained meats are the best starting meats. And Gerber meats are high in the body-building protein that your baby needs during his first year—his fastest year of growth.

Gerber meats are lean and moist. They're processed the Gerber way to retain natural juices and lower the fat level, when necessary.

Time for variety. Your baby's interest in food at 6 months is likely to be higher than it will be at one year, so this is an ideal time to introduce him to a variety of foods.

Let your baby try one new food at a time. Small portions at first, then gradually increase the serving. And if you serve the new food at the beginning of a meal, when he's hungry, he'll probably be more ready to accept it.

Work for a balanced daily diet, including milk and milk products; meat and other protein foods; vegetables and fruits; cereals.

Feeding tips. Should you heat the baby food? Unless your baby likes it that way, it's not necessary. Try warming vegetables and meat, serve fruit and dessert at room or refrigerator temperature. Fruit juices should not be heated; it might destroy the Vitamin C.

Remember, too, that at the beginning, your baby will probably not be eating a full jar of food. So when you don't expect to use it all at one feeding, transfer the portion to be fed to a serving dish. Cover and refrigerate the unused portion. Try not to feed your baby directly from the jar.

And do relax. These are the times when your baby will form associations with food that will stay with him all his life. When mealtime is a happy sharing time, your baby will have a feeling of security and belonging.

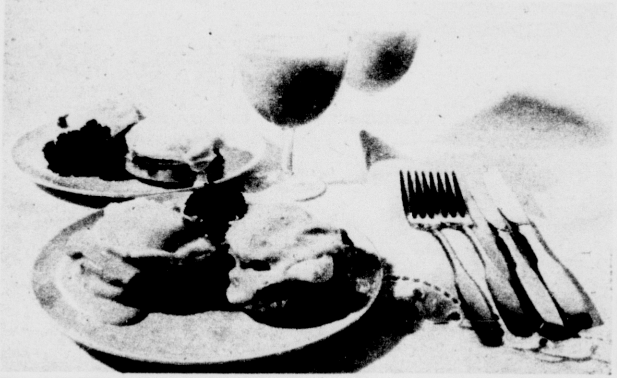
The World's Most Elegant Breakfast: Eggs Benedict



Elizabeth Gee

For pampered people: Frosty orange juice in giant goblets and perfect "Eggs Benedict" beckon the summer sleepyhead.

Whether you've made this recipe before or you're a novice, you'll love our super-easy recipe for "Blender Hollandaise Sauce." It makes the whole production fun!

EGGS BENEDICT

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 pkgs. (8-oz. size) sliced Canadian bacon
Water
2 tablespoons vinegar
8 eggs
4 English muffins, fork-split and lightly toasted
Blender Hollandaise Sauce (recipe below)
4 sprigs parsley

1. Heat butter in electric skillet until melted. Sauté Canadian bacon slices in hot butter until lightly browned on both sides. Place on foil, cover and keep warm.

2. Poach eggs: Pour off fat from electric skillet, wipe clean with paper towel. Pour in water to depth of 1 inch, add 2 tablespoons vinegar to water. (The vinegar helps solidify the egg white.) Heat water to simmer, with bubbles rising and breaking just below surface.

3. Break eggs one at a time into the simmering water. (The fresher the eggs the higher and prettier the whites will be.) Baste eggs gently with simmering water, using large spoon. Cook until whites are firm, yolks soft.

4. Lift eggs gently from water with slotted spoon, draining liquid off eggs and blotting them with paper towel.

5. Meanwhile arrange Canadian bacon slices on toasted English muffins. Place 2 halves on each heated plate. Top each with a poached egg. Spoon a little Blender Hollandaise Sauce over each. Garnish with parsley. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings

BLENDER HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash salt
2 drops Tabasco sauce
½ cup (1 stick) butter or margarine

1. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and Tabasco in warm blender container. Turn motor on and off at medium speed, just to blend.

2. Heat butter in small saucepan until bubbling and very hot.

3. Remove blender cover, turn motor to high speed; drizzle in hot butter slowly until all is added. Turn off blender. Serve warm. Makes about 1 cup

TIPS FOR PERFECT HOLLANDAISE

1. Yes, this is the same hollandaise sauce that is traditionally painstakingly prepared over simmering water in a double boiler. As you can see, this electric-blender method makes slow hand beating unnecessary.

2. To keep Blender Hollandaise warm, set blender container in pan of warm water. Just before serving, blend again to freshen.

Man to Watch

Senator
Lloyd Bentsen
The Dark-Horse Texan Who Wants to Be President

Lloyd Bentsen does not believe in playing coy. Barely past the halfway mark of a freshman term in the U.S. Senate, the tall, tanned Texan looks, talks and acts like a presidential candidate. He even has a $365,000 campaign treasury to nurse the inclination.

"Am I testing the waters?" he tells those who ask him. "Sure I am. Would I like to be President of the United States? You bet!"

It is a dream that most Washington insiders would have hooted at three and a half years ago when the 53-year-old Democrat entered the Senate with a reputation as an arch-conservative. But no one is laughing these days. The advance notices were quickly cast aside when Bentsen began lining up against Senate filibusters and even supporting end-the-war legislation. Hard work, moderate political stances and a striking ability to get opposing camps together mark his style.

Bentsen—whose wife is called B.A. (for Beryl Ann)—was first elected to the House back in 1948 at age 27. He was the youngest freshman in that class, thanks to a campaign that openly borrowed its slogans from John F. Kennedy's first congressional race two years earlier. The energetic Texan served three terms as a protégé of Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Texas), then went back home, where he made himself a Houston millionaire as head of a financial conglomerate called Lincoln Consolidated. He decided to run for the Senate in 1970 because "I want to be remembered for something besides my bank balance."

The reentry began with a bruising primary battle against the liberal Democratic incumbent, Ralph Yarborough. Bentsen, a close associate of Lyndon B. Johnson and John B. Connally from earlier days, won narrowly, but the campaign, he confesses wryly, left many voters thinking of him as "somewhere to the right of Attila the Hun."

Headed back to Washington, Bentsen hired a consulting firm at his own expense to study some of the most smoothly run Senate offices and help him organize his own. It is regarded as a model of efficiency.

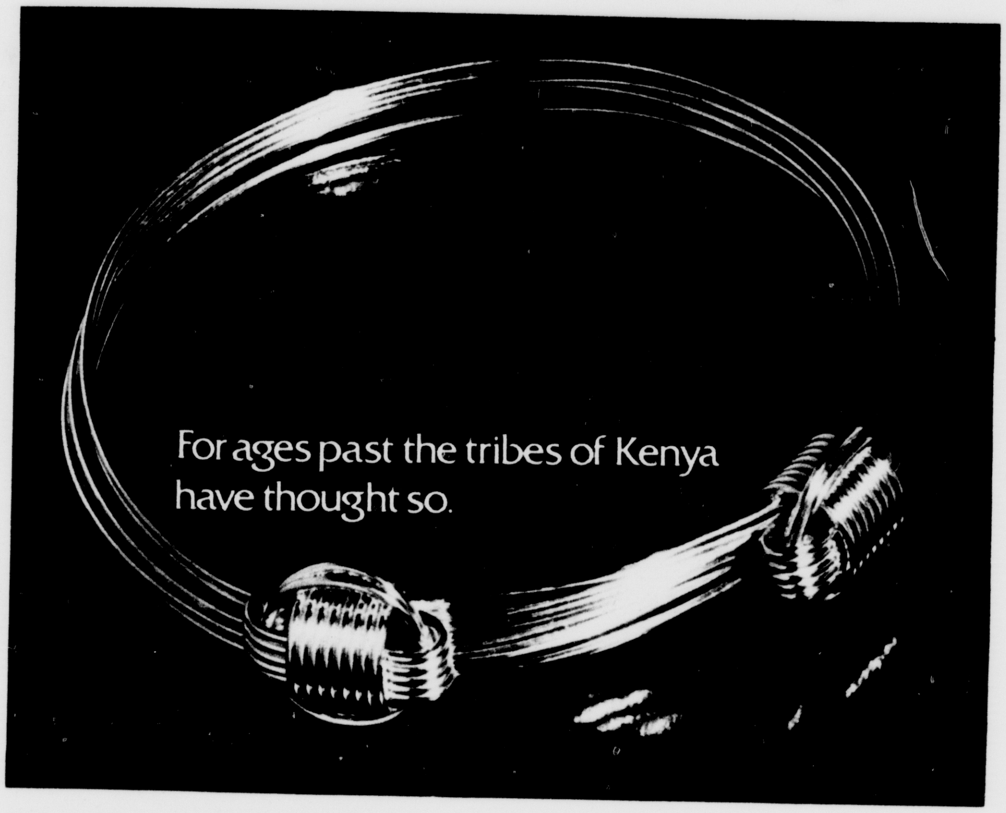
Bentsen woke up the Senate establishment in 1972, when he led the fight against a speedup of the Trident submarine system and did his homework so well that he very nearly won. More recently, he won high marks for his work in getting pension-reform legislation through the Senate, where it had been bogged down for years in a jurisdictional squabble between rival committees. Those who worked with Bentsen say his grasp of the technicalities of pensions was amazing.

"I want to be remembered for something besides my bank balance."

Liberals still regard Bentsen warily. He hotly opposes school busing. He helped fight off a "windfall profits tax" on oil companies. But Senate elders are highly impressed. "When we're up against him, we know we have to work," says Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott. "He's a heavyweight." Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield has been speaking of Bentsen as presidential timber for months.

Bentsen is still a very dark horse. A Harris poll in January indicated that no more than two percent of the nation's Democratic voters know who he is. But that doesn't bother Lloyd Bentsen. It's the same percentage that Texans gave him in 1970 when he first announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate. Sometimes, he says, it helps to have "a new face."

WILL THIS TALISMAN BRACELET BRING YOU GOOD LUCK?



For ages past the tribes of Kenya have thought so.

ORIGINALLY created with intricately knotted elephant hair, these bracelets were thought to inherently possess good luck and were often given by tribesmen to hunters after a successful elephant hunt.

Later, made in multi-strand gold, silver and copper wire, they became talismans of good fortune for either sex in finding a mate . . . getting and keeping good health . . . and success in any enterprise.

Can you solve the riddle of its ancient design?

The first question people will ask you about this Talisman bracelet is, "How do you take it off?"

When you mysteriously slip it off your wrist, you'll be asked more:

Is it all one piece of wire? Where does it start . . . where does it end? Does it really give you good luck?

And why have elephant hair styled bracelets suddenly become so overwhelmingly desired?

As old as Africa . . . as new as today!

Based on the original ancient design from the tribes of Kenya, these bracelets have been re-created in 5-strand copper, silver-plate and gold-plate wire. These handmade bracelets have an untamed, sophisticated look that is sure to attract attention wherever you go.

One of the most ingenious features of these unusual bracelets is that they're completely adjustable and look as well on men as they do on women.

At last at a price you can afford!

Only wearing these bracelets can show you how superior they are to any elephant hair bracelets you've yet seen.

The handmade feeling . . . the unusual knots . . . the way each bracelet adjusts . . . the mystery of its design can only be experienced by actually wearing one of these bracelets. The good luck is not guaranteed, but complete satisfaction is.

Please compare them with the $40 . . . $50 . . . and $100 elephant hair bracelets you've seen. Unless you feel these Talisman bracelets are superior, return for no cost.

Only $3.98 for the copper, $4.98 for the silver-plate, $5.98 for the gold-plate—or $11.95 for the entire collection.

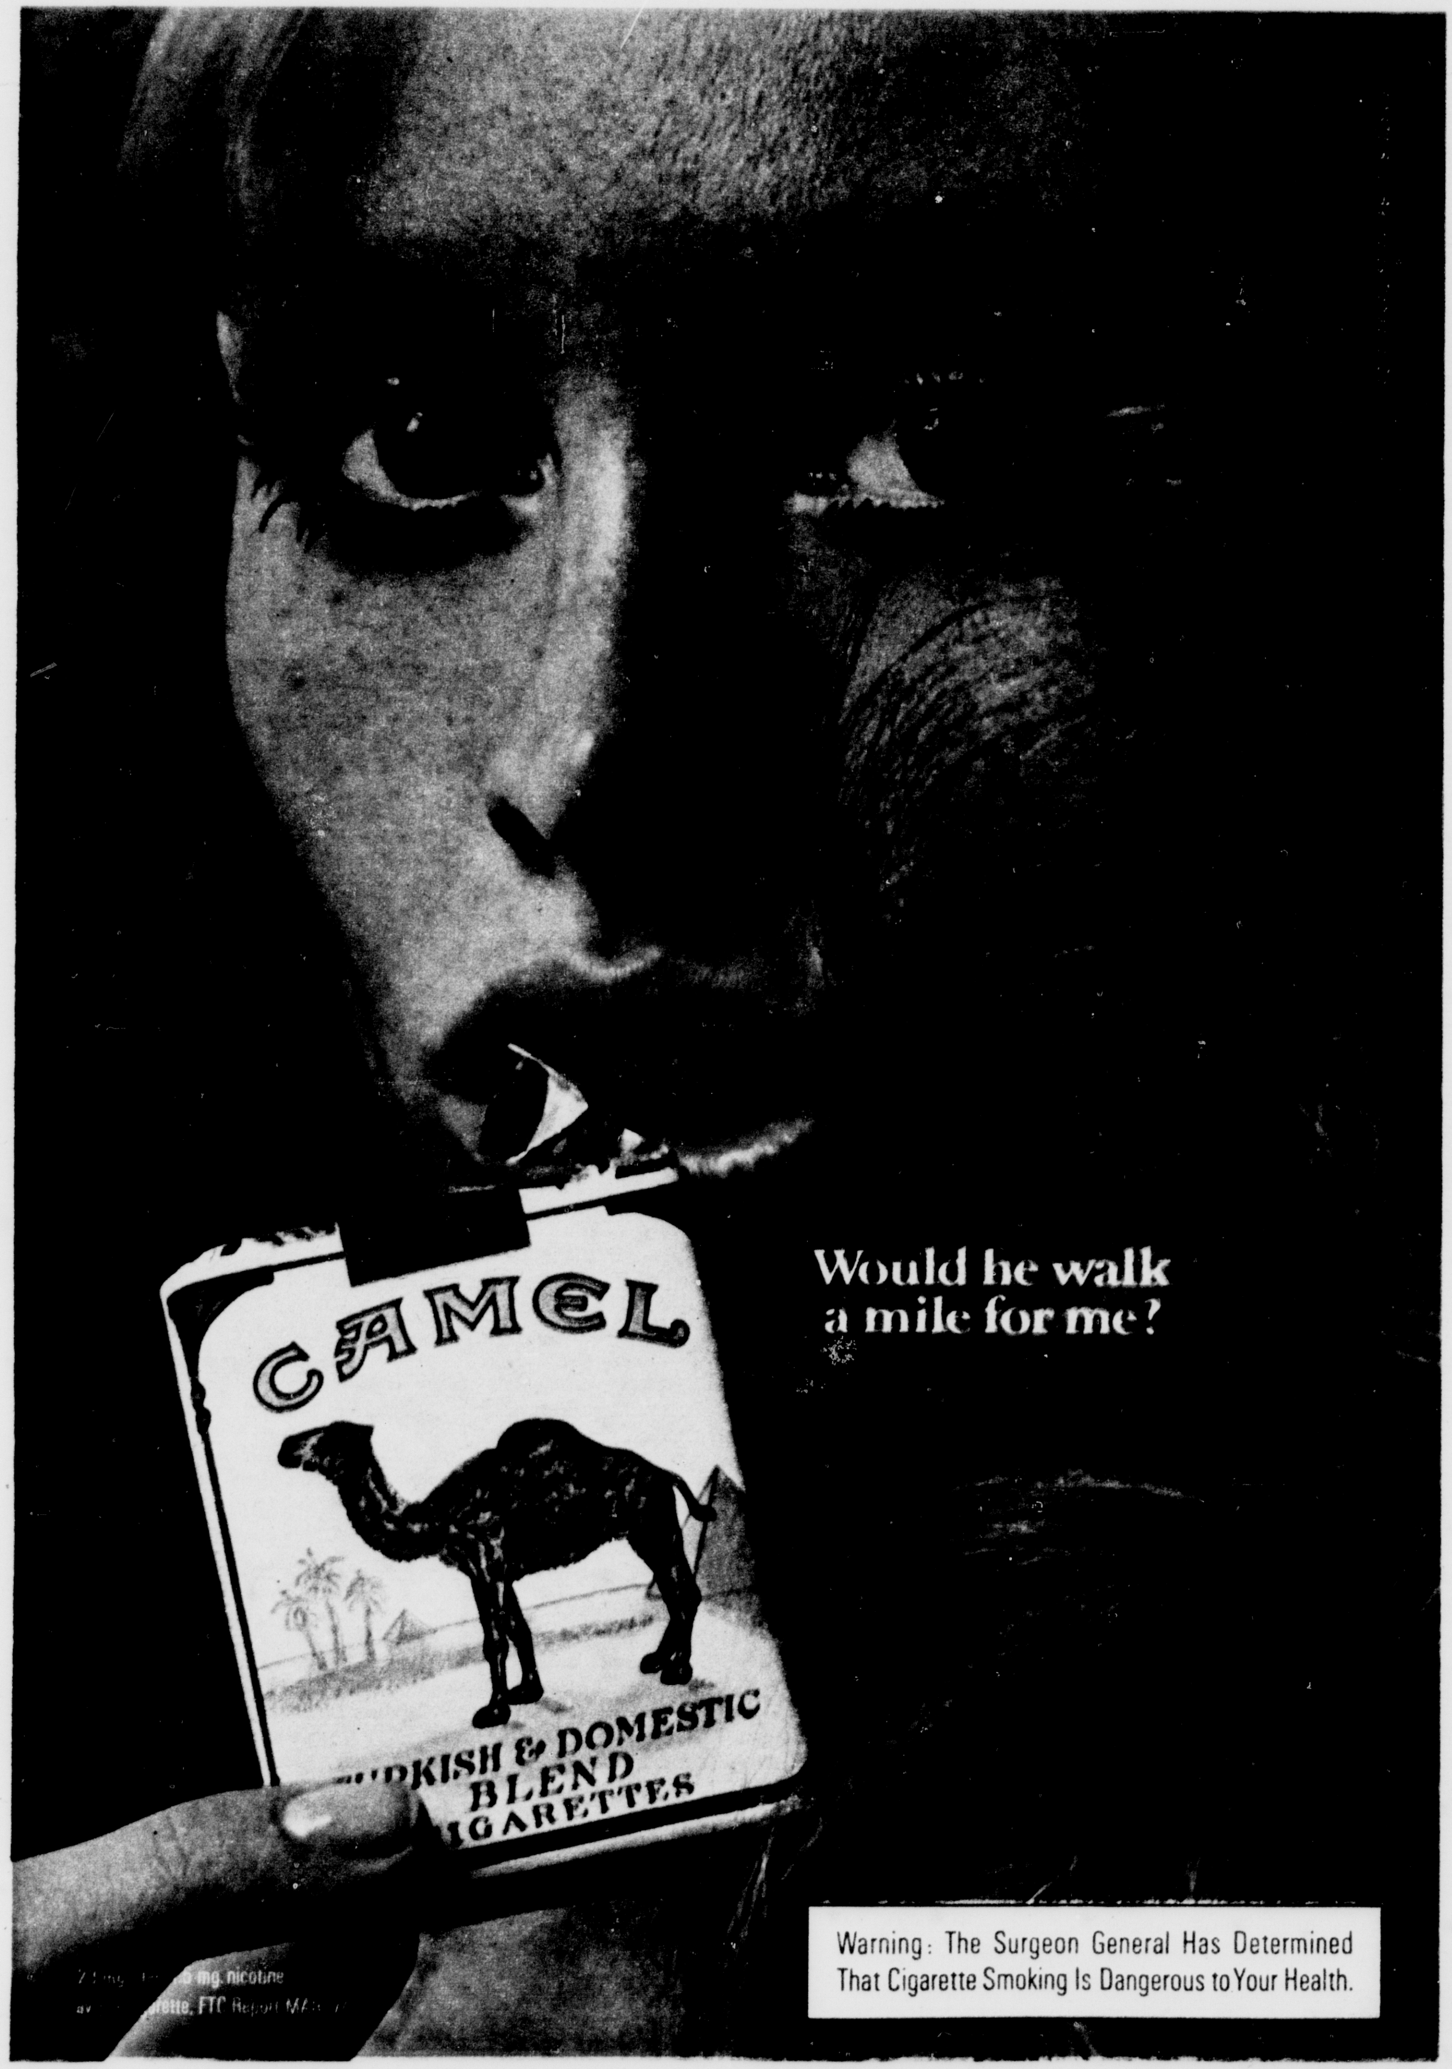
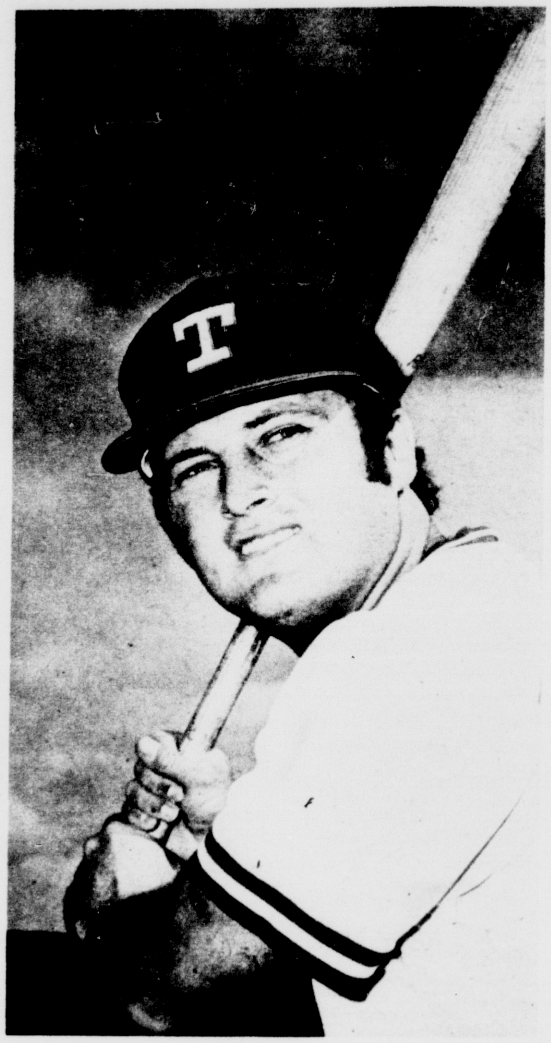
Jeff Burroughs of the Rangers: Henry Aaron—Watch Out!



Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

[illegible] mg. nicotine
av. [illegible] cigarette, FTC Report [illegible]



When Jeff Burroughs of the Texas Rangers blasted 30 home runs (including three grand slams in ten days) in his first full major-league season last year, people began to take notice. And this year, as he continued his strong home-run pace and was batting over .300 at mid-season, it became clear that here was a budding superstar. Manager Billy Martin says the 23-year-old Burroughs has the best chance of any current player to surpass the one-season homer record of 61, and some baseball buffs have expressed the opinion that he can eventually catch up to Henry Aaron's all-time homer total. Burroughs says, however, that such speculation is premature. . . . Burroughs is also a golfer. He teamed up with Denver football player Bob Anderson to win the American Airlines Golf Classic last spring. His manager allows him to play golf during the regular baseball season provided he finishes before noon. (Ted Williams, former manager of the Rangers, used to fine his players $1,000 if he caught them playing golf during the baseball season.) . . . Burroughs, who comes from Long Beach, Calif., was baseball's No. 1 draft choice in the 1969 selections. He batted .358 during his first minor-league year in Wytheville, Va., before moving up the ladder. . . . Burroughs' teammates felt he would have hit 40 circuit blows last season except for the fact that the Rangers' park has strong winds blowing in from right field, which cause long drives to fall into outfielders' gloves. This year, the right-field fence was moved in ten feet. Burroughs insists it wasn't done as a special favor for him. "It makes things fairer for all power hitters," he says. "Also, fans like to see more home runs hit by players on both sides, so it creates more spectator interest."—By Barry Abramson

This is THE collector plate that's streaking its way to becoming the most important limited edition issued this year, and would you believe it -- Rockwell, prophet that he is, painted our 1974 "Streakers" over 50 years ago! This charming painting first appeared on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post way back in 1921 — and it was called the "Old Swimming Hole". You can see Red in the lead, with shirt a-flying, and the Alfalfa type freckle-faced lad tied for second place along with his dog, while bringing up the rear is their chubby friend with cheeks aglo a-huffin and a-puffin.

A First Edition Work of Incomparable Beauty

This first edition is produced in an extremely limited quantity on Gorham's finest china. Rockwell's art is faithfully rendered with all its vibrant colors and warmly human details with the rim hand painted and hand rubbed with 24KT gold. Each plate, of course, bears the famous Rockwell signature.

What in the World!

MONROE LOOK-ALIKE
Is she Marilyn's daughter?

Janet Raymond believes she is the daughter of the late actress Marilyn Monroe. Janet, 21, is an orphan. She was born in a Los Angeles hospital during the same period that Marilyn was an appendectomy patient there. According to sources, Miss Monroe's appendix was not removed. Peter Lawford, a very close friend of Marilyn's, has met Janet and is amazed at her strong resemblance to the star. Ironically, Janet even won a Marilyn Monroe look-alike contest a few years ago. She was also interviewed on an ABC-TV special, "Marilyn Remembered." For Janet, however, the resemblance is not much help. There isn't any way she can prove she is Marilyn's daughter. Janet, who worked as a secretary in Santa Monica Hospital, is a member of the Screen Actor's Guild and is determined to follow Marilyn's path to stardom.

Roger Williams

Roger Williams has sold well over 15 million albums since his first hit, "Autumn Leaves," in 1955. Despite his vast success he still practices 10 to 12 hours a day when he is at his home in Encino, Calif., and two to three hours a day when he is on the road. "If you want success and all that goes with it, you must be prepared to pay a high personal price. For me, the price is discipline. I apply this same discipline to other factors of my life," says the 49-year-old Williams. "I still weigh the same as I did in high school. Discipline has me jogging two miles every day when I am home, and one hour in my hotel room, in one place, when I am on the road. This requires strong personal discipline. But it is the only way I know of attaining success. Practice and being in good physical condition." Williams, who has performed all over the world, has missed only one performance—when he was snowbound at an airport.

HANK AARON
His legs were rubbery

QUOTE: When Hank Aaron hit home run number 715, breaking Babe Ruth's record, "he remembered only his relief that it was over with, and the vague happiness that a weight 'like a stove' had been lifted from his back, and that his legs seemed rubbery as he took the tour of the bases, the Dodger second baseman and shortstop sticking out their hands to congratulate him. 'I don't remember the noise,' he said, 'or the two kids that ran on the field. My teammates at home plate, I remember seeing them. I remember my mother out there and she hugging me. That's what I'll remember more than anything about that home run when I think back on it. I don't know where she came from, but she was there. . . .'" HOME REMEDY

You need not lie upon a couch
For this psychiatrist
And answer questions human sorts
Would probingly insist.

This "home psychiatrist" of course
Might lie down by your side
And asking not a thing of you
There calmingly abide.

Or else he might look up, warm eyed,
And seem to understand,
And maybe paw your sleeve a bit
Or even lick your hand.

He might relax, relaxing you,
And go to sleep, lie still.
Of this, however, be quite sure:
He wouldn't send a bill.

Ford Swings Quickly Into His New Duties

Commutes To Capitol For Cabinet Meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More like a typical suburban husband than the nation's Chief Executive, President Gerald R. Ford commuted into Washington today from his Alexandria, Va., home for the first Cabinet meeting of his new administration.

The new President was moving fast to place his personal stamp on the shape of the government. He ordered a meeting of the National Security Council, the group that handles defense and intelligence matters, to follow immediately his one-hour session with the Cabinet members.

Ford has chosen to retain, at least for the present, the department heads who made up former President Nixon's Cabinet. Sitting in Nixon's old chair and flanked by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, he opened the Cabinet meeting at 10 a.m. EDT.

One of Ford's key objectives was to lay down the guidelines for the transition from Nixon's administration to his own.

He asked members of the team he has assembled to handle that transition —including former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton and the U.S. Ambassador to NATO, Donald Rumsfeld —to join the Cabinet meeting.

Both before and after the cabinet meeting, Kissinger met with envoys representing 33 countries and assured them that there would be no major foreign policy changes in the Ford administration. He saw the ambassadors from Pakistan, Iran, India and 30 African nations.

A White House spokesman made clear Ford would not work all day today. He said the President would return to his northern Virginia home, where he still lives, for a luncheon and would probably remain in the suburbs throughout the weekend.

In an open and informal style quite different from that which marked Nixon's tenure, Ford had about five couples, all old friends, over for dinner at his house last night.

The President was up early today. He fixed his own breakfast, stuck his head out the door to get the morning paper — only to find that it had not arrived —and took a swim. Then he climbed into a limosine and left for the White House.

Even though his presidency had barely begun, Ford seemed to be settling in comfortably to the job. By mid-afternoon yesterday he seemed at home sitting in Richard Nixon's gold armchair in the Oval Office.

In the six hours he was at the White House after his inauguration yesterday, Ford met with the ambassadors of 57 nations, conferred with his economic advisers, held his first news briefing, selected a panel to advise him on taking power, and sent a message to the Greek government urging restraint and moderation in dealing with the Cyprus crisis.

Ford's early-morning activities today at his suburban home graphically illustrated his unpretentious style.

He awakened at 5:50 a.m. and, clad in baby-blue short pajamas, opened the front door to pick up the Washington Post. The paper had not yet arrived,

Congress Asked For VP Choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford today called on Republican and Democratic leaders to suggest vice presidential nominees by Wednesday.

Ford's press secretary, Jerry TerHorst, said Ford planned to name a vice president in the next week or 10 days. TerHorst told newsmen that Ford had asked Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott, House GOP leader John J. Rhodes and Republican National Committeee Chairman George Bush as well as the party governors for suggestions for "men they think of as potential vice presidential nominess by next wednesday."

TerHorst said that Ford also intends to seek the advice of House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield.

Conservatives and moderates in the GOP are each manuevering to have one of their own named vice president. One congressman said he doubts any of the GOP "elder statesmen" will get the nod.

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., predicted yesterday that Ford would not name the party's most prominent spokesmen. He specifically said that Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and California Gov. Ronald Reagan all appeared unlikely choices.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott and others want a more liberal vice president such as Rockefeller to balance the Ford administration.

Twenty conservative Republicans met privately yesterday and "overwhelmingly" agreed to support Goldwater, the party's presidential nominee in 1964. Both groups have given Ford lists of alternative candidates.

"There are a lot of attractive people on our side that Ford should consider," said one conservative senator who did not wish to be identified.

"We don't want to have the 1972 mandate reversed by Ford's appointment at this stage of the game," he added, saying a liberal Republican would go against the vote given the Nixon-Agnew ticket in the last election.

Rockefeller was vacationing at the family's retreat in Seal Harbor, Maine. He made no comment and canceled a news conference lest his reaction be misunderstood. A spokesman said Ford has not contacted Rockefeller, who reportedly would accept the post if it is offered by the President.

The two groups were not unanimous in their feelings. Sen. William Brock, a conservative, said he could support Rockefeller if that is Ford's choice.

Brock, his fellow Tennessean Howard Baker, and Sen. Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky appear on both the lists drawn up by Scott and the conservative wing.

One name mentioned frequently was former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, but a congressional source friendly with Laird said the former congressman was resisting an active role in the new administration.

Others on Scott's list were Sens. Peter Dominick of Colorado and Jacob Javits of New York, Ambassador William Mailliard, (former congressman

HOME ON THE RANGE

Seeing may be believing, but 13-year-old Christopher Bonell, cooling off on a visit from Orinda, still finds the beast on the bank a surprising eyeful. The cow bison, or buffalo, which roams loose on the El Adobe Hereford Ranch near Petaluma was bought by Babe and Reno Pronzini four years ago in Fallon, Nev. They intended to cross her with Hereford bulls as has been done elsewhere, but thus far have not been blessed with calves. The buffalo is one of the major attractions at their working cattle ranch where they operate a dude ranch each summer for children. (Photo by Bob Hax)

Governor's Pay Hiked By Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Acknowledging it would be unpopular, the Senate has reversed itself and voted to give the governor and six other constitutional officers a 20 per cent pay increase next year.

That would bring the governor's salary to $60,000 a year from its present level of $49,100.

Yesterday's bare minimum twothirds vote, 27-9, was a turnabout for senators, highly conscious of their re-election campaigns. They had rejected the measure only Monday by a 18-15 margin.

During both floor fights, they testified to "extraordinary heat" from constituents and news media editorials.

"What's the matter with us? We run for cover because a few newspaper guys have nothing to write about. Vote 'aye' and teach them a lesson," argued Democratic Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena.

Beginning with the swearing in of new officers next January, the salary for attorney general would go from $42,500 to $51,155.

Salaries of the other constitutional officers — lieutenant governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer and superintendent of public instruction —would rise from $35,000 to $42,500.

One of those who changed his vote in favor of the bill was Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, who said, "These constitutional officers shouldn't be the whipping boys for the public disaffection with politicians in general."

Drug Advisers Shun Watchdog Duties Over Narcotics Squad

Members of the Marin County Drug Abuse Technical Advisory Committee said yesterday they do not believe the committee should act as a board of review for the proposed countywide narcotics squad.

The federally-funded squad would be under the operational control of the City of San Rafael, even though it would operate throughout the county. Consequently, it has been proposed that a review board, a kind of watchdog agency, be set up to oversee its operations.

The technical advisory committee said such a board should include representatives of several agencies in the county and not just the committee.

Several committee members said they did not have the time or expertise to review actions of a narcotics squad. Others cited possible conflict of interest which might occur since some committee members are law enforcement officers.

The committee agreed yesterday to recommend to county supervisors that any review board formed should include three members of the drug abuse committee, a local student, Marin's drug and alcohol coordinator and representations of the criminal justice division of the Marin County Bar Association, the Board of Supervisors, the county Police Chiefs Association, the San Rafael City Council and the County Juvenile Justice and Human Rights commissions.

But committee members expressed reservations that a review panel could operate effectively, Dorothy L. Hughes, who opposes it, said. She didn't believe a review board would work.

The committee recommended that any review board would need to have the power to: inspect and copy all narcotics enforcement records, investigate complaints about the narcotics squad and take testimony and evidence from anyone involved with the narcotics unit.

And it suggested that a review board member should sit as a voting member on the board which reviews applications for jobs on the squad.

In addition, the committee recommended that juveniles, parolees and individuals on probation should not be used as informants by the narcotics squad.

The committee also stressed that supervisors should not approve formation of the narcotics squad unless appropriate controls are possible. (County opposition would kill the project.)

The drug abuse group's suggestions will be forwarded to supervisors.

Bridge Craftsmen Get 19% Pay Raises

Pay hikes of up to 19 per cent for 59 craft workers were approved yesterday by Golden Gate Bridge District directors.

Cost of the pay hikes, including fringe benefits, will be $217,800, according to the district's auditor-controller, Robert D. Tough.

Directors agreed, however, that next year they will reexamine their policy of paying craft employees whatever the prevailing hourly wage is in private industry.

Director Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley, who cast the only vote against the pay hikes, argued it was "inappropriate" to pay public employees the same as workers in private industry. Public employees are guaranteed work and pay every day, while those in industry are subject to periods of unemployment, he said.

The security of public employment should be offset by somewhat lower pay, Meyer said.

The issue was settled quickly for this year after Director Lawrence Mazzola, a plumber's union official, warned that "if you vote this down today, you'll get yourselves in an awful lot of trouble — I can see it coming."

The wage hikes cover four carpenters, one cement mason, 18 ironworkers, five operating engineers and 31 painters. The highest pay hike, 19 per cent, was for journeymen painters, whose pay will go from $9.27 to $11.27 an hour.

Supervisors To Be Asked To Remove Housing's Jones

Marin County Supervisors will be asked Tuesday to remove Rogers Jones of Marin City from his seat on the seven-member Marin County housing authority board asking for his ouster.

A petition has been submitted to supervisors by the Marin City Homeowners' Association. It lists 127 names.

The document charges Jones with "misconduct and incompetence in office" and calls for his immediate removal.

A second petition, filed by the Marin City Tenants Council, urges supervisors to retain Jones. It contains 236 signatures and says Jones "has given the people of Marin City a meaningful voice on the housing authority board. . ."

Jones, an outspoken critic of the housing authority's Executive Director, Wallace K. Shepherd, is part of a four-member board majority seeking Shepherd's dismissal.

The homeowners' association supports Shepherd, as does a majority of the board of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, which he also serves as executive director

(The redevelopment agency board has filed a suit against the housing authority to block it from firing the joint executive director.)

A hearing on the redevelopment agency's suit has been postponed until later this month, leaving the door open for the housing authority board to consider Shepherd's firing at a special meeting Tuesday.

That session is set for 7:30 p.m. in the planning commission chambers at Civic Center.

The redevelopment agency board, meanwhile, will meet in closed session Monday at its San Rafael office to discuss the pending suit, challenging the housing board's right to dismiss Shepherd unilaterally.

The Homeowners petition came under fire Monday from Jones' fellow board members who are investigating a charge that it was circulated among Marin City residents by a housing authority employee during working hours.

The authority board ordered a staff probe of the matter and requested the Marin County Human Relations Department to assist.

The employee reportedly is Maintenance Supervisor Otis C. Gaines Jr., husband of Collie B. Gaines, chairman of the redevelopment agency board. She is a supporter of Shepherd.

The petition alleges that Jones has a conflict of interest in a suit filed against the housing authority, has "openly and actively worked against the housing authority" in another suit, has "sabotaged" a remodeling program for the community's public housing units, and "cannot understand the issues that come before the commission and votes only when and as directed by another commissioner."

Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino wrote supervisors yesterday advising them to refer the matter to the county administrator for investigation.

Wizard Of Oz Children To Wed

Minnelli

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI — Singer Liza Minnelli, whose mother, Judy Garland, played Dorothy to Jack Haley's Tin Woodsman in "The Wizard of Oz," yesterday said she will wed Haley's son, Jack Haley Jr., next month in a private ceremony.

She said she and Haley, who produced the movie "That's Entertainment," have been seeing each other for five or six months. The couple was here for Miss Minnelli's appearance at a county fair.

Miss Minnelli was divorced about three weeks ago from Australian song writer Peter Allen, whom she married in 1967. They separated in 1970.

New Viet Attacks

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist gunners launched new attacks near Saigon today, pounding the city of Bien Hoa with a series of rocket barrages, military officers said.

The Saigon command said 18 Russian-made rockets hit the Bien Hoa airbase during three separate attacks 14 miles northwest of the capital, killing at least two civilians and wounding seven civilians and two airmen.

Another rocket hit Cong Thanh district capital, four miles north of Bien Hoa, at mid-afternoon. One civilian was killed and two other wounded, spokesmen said.

Body Found

BELFAST (UPI) — A fisherman today found the body of an apparent assassination victim floating in a loch near the western border, police said.

A police spokesman said the victim was believed to be Tyrone County councillor Patrick Kelly, a 33-year-old Roman Catholic reported missing 19 days ago.

Restraint Urged

ATHENS (UPI) — President Gerald R. Ford urged restraint and moderation in the handling of the Cyprus crisis in a message to the premier of Greece, a Greek government spokesman said today.

The new U.S. President also pledged support in helping bring peace to the island nation.

In a letter to Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis, Ford said he has "watched the tragic crisis over Cyprus embroil two of our trusted allies and endanger the stability of the area.

"Your emergence on the scene is a symbol of hope to me and all those who are working for a speedy resolution of that difficult problem. I know you share with me the conviction that cool heads and moderate behavior are essential. Be assured we are committed to assist in any way," the message said.

Cargo Ship Sunk

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebel gunners sank a general cargo ship from South Vietnam today as it moved up the Mekong River en route to Phnom Penh, port police said.

The ship was part of a 14-boat convoy that came under rebel gunfire near Kos Thmei, 43 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Police said all of the ship's crew members were rescued, and none was reported seriously injured.

No other ships in the convoy were damaged police said. The convoy was composed of three petroleum tankers, seven cargo ships and four ammunition barges.

Leaves Hospital

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace returned home yesterday after a week in a Brimingham hospital for minor surgery.

The governor said he felt well and was looking forward to speaking engagements next week that will take him to New Orleans, Albuqueque, N. M., and Lynchburg, Va.

Wallace was hospitalized to drain an abscess caused by a stitch which failed to dissolve after a previous operation. He watched the swearing in of President Ford shortly before checking out of the hospital and sent Ford a telegram wishing him well.

Ambassador Quits

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — Citing his friendship with Richard Nixon, the U.S. ambassador to Honduras resigned his post today.

"Three times in my life I've been appointed to positions by Richard Nixon. I consider him my friend," Felipe Sanchez told newsmen here.

He added, however, that his resignation would be subject to approval by President Ford.

"What I most admire about Richard Nixon is his attitude toward Latin Americans," Sanchez said.

Caller Claims Credit For Airport Bombing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An anonymous telephone caller took responsibility yesterday for the bomb explosion at the Los Angeles International Airport which killed two men Tuesday.

At the same time, a $50,000 reward was offered for information leading to the arrest of the bomber.

An anonymous caller, with what sounded like a Middle Eastern accent, called the CBS television network here and said he was responsible for the bombing and that more bombs were still in the airport, unexploded.

He said he was the same man who telephoned the Los Angeles Herald Examiner following the blast and said he had placed the bomb in a locker at the airport.

Police, following his directions and guided by a bombsniffing dog, found two green napkins, one containing a tape casette and the other a key, which the caller had said would fit an airport locker.

Police said the tape contained a message six to eight minutes long in which several threats were made, but investigators would not describe the threats.

Girl's Death Comes After Diploma

DETROIT (UPI) — For more than two years, 17-year-old Geneva Smith fought the steady onslaught of leukemia with the idea of earning a high school degree.

Yesterday, she got it. She smiled. Then, five hours later, she died.

Geneva died at Detroit Osteopathic Hospital from Hodgkin's disease, the form of leukemia she had.

As the Madison Heights, Mich., girl lay on her deathbed this week, it seemed likely that she was soon to die without the thing she wanted most — her high school diploma.

Her neighbors, Beverly Stamm and Mrs. Cecil Robinson, learning of her desire, told her high school principal, Laurence Decker, that the girl more than anything wanted a diploma.

"We did the right thing," said Decker, principal of Madison Heights High School. "It was one of those things she wanted from life. It wasn't legal, but it was right."

Decker decided to give Geneva an honorary diploma even though she had missed several months of classes due to her illness.

"A big smile came across her face," he said of Geneva after he gave her the diploma Wednesday. "She was so pleased her eyes sparkled. She even asked me to move closer so she could hold it."

Geneva's sister, Beverly Champion, said Geneva probably knew how sick she was "but never talked about it."

"She kept her worries and fears to herself."

Some Strikes Are Settled

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Despite a brief walkout by union negotiators who said management broke a promise not to do their work, talks were to resume today in an effort to settle a month-old strike at the giant General Motors plant at Lordstown, Ohio.

Local President Marline Ford said union representatives entered the plant yesterday to check on an agreement reached Thursday in which the company promised no salaried personnel would do union work during the strike.

"We walked in and saw foremen doing our jobs," said Ford. "This perturbed us highly and negotiations were broken off for the rest of the day."

Company spokesmen said the foremen were doing work required for "health and safety."

The strike, which started July 12, involves a new contract for the 7,800-member local, and numerous unresolved grievances.

The giant automaker announced yesterday it would lay off 4,500 workers at its V-8 engine plant in Flint, Mich., for one week starting Monday because of the strike.

Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. and District 7 of the Communications Workers of American reached agreement yesterday on a new three-year contract at Omaha, Neb.

About 40,000 carpenters in 11 southern California countries voted to end their six-week-old strike and return to work Monday. The carpenters' strike against members of the Associated General Contractos virtually halted southern California's $1.5 billion construction industry.

About a fifth of the 10,200 striking United Steel Workers of America returned to work Friday after settlement was reached with one of five iron ore companies it had been striking, Pickands Mather Co. of Cleveland, Ohio9

In a joint statement, the USW and the firm said they felt they had reached a model settlement which could lead to the end of strikes with four other iron ore comanies operating in Minnesota and Michigan.

In Montreal, strikes by 1,300 marine engineers and deck officers, now two days old, could result in layoffs of up to 3,200 persons, a Seafarers' International Union spokesman said.

The spokesman, executive vice president John Royce, said most of the 145 ships in the 15 companies making up the Canadian Lake Carriers Association have been halted by the strike.

St. Clair May Just Finish Up

BOSTON (UPI) — James D. St. Clair, lawyer for former President Richard M. Nixon during the Watergate investigation, indicated last night his legal defense of Nixon would continue only through the end of current litigation.

"President Nixon is no longer the president, and my responsibilities are to the office of the President," St. Clair said when asked by newswriters if he would continued as Nixon's lawyer. "My responsibilities, of course, relate to matters before the court."

St. Clair gave the statement at Logan International Airport where he arrived from Washington en route to his suburban Wellesley, Mass., home.

Court Suspends Ehrlichman

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) – The State Supreme Court has suspended John D. Ehrlichman, once domestic adviser to former President Richard Nixon, from the practice of law because of his conspiracy conviction.

The court said yesterday that the suspension would remain in effect until final disposition of disciplinary proceedings expected from the Washington State Bar Association.

Faucette To Superior Court In Synanon Tape Theft Case

George Gilbert Faucette of Woodacre, accused of stealing some 80 tape recordings from Synanon in Marshall, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on a felony burglary count.

Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court ordered the 61-year-old man to appear for arraignment in the higher court on Aug. 19.

In a November 1973 deposition in connection with a damage suit against Synanon, Faucette admitted taking the tapes to "expose Synanon" and find out why he had been kicked out of the commune two months earlier.

The tape theft is involved in a confusing tangle of litigation between Synanon and the San Francisco Examiner.

The rehabilitation center has filed two suits against the Examiner, including a $32 million libel suit sparked by a series of articles on Synanon.

Faucette was working for newspaper attorneys when he took the tapes to help the Examiner defend itself, Synanon officials claim.

Another former Synanon member, Twilver Tenola Earle, 25, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty to helping in the burglary and was sentenced to complete a drug treatment program at Delancy Street Foundation.

Cyprus Fighting Stops, But So Do Peace Talks

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Fighting on Cyprus came to a standstill today for the first time in weeks but talks in Geneva aimed at working ot a political settlement were delayed when Turkey walked out over its demand for separate representation for the islands Greek and Turkish communities.

Conference officials said Turkish foreign minister Turan Gunes walked oat of the Palais des Nations back to his hotel saying, "I will wait there until someone contacts me."

Gunes' insistence of separate Greek and Turkish Cypriot representation, delegates said, underscored Turkey's hard-line position that the future of Cyprus must be based on autonomous Greek and Turkish Cypriot regions.

Both Greece and Clerides in tte name of the Greek Cypriot majority rejected that idea.

The lull on Cyprus marked the first complete halt in fighting since the Turkish army invaded the island July 20, five days after a Greek-led military coup ousted President Makarios.

The fighting ended after Greek and Turkish army officials meeting in Nicosia signed an agreement yesterday to separate their armies on the island.

In Geneva, British, Greek and Turkish foreign ministers tried today to save the deadlocked peace talks. But one delegate said "the situation does not look too good."

They agreed to meet again today with Glafkos Clerides, Greek Cypriot provisional president of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, Turkish Cypriot vice president.

The two men joined the talks under a cease-fire declaration signed in Geneva July 30. It was the first time members of the Cypriot communities had been in a role to settle the dispute.

The Greek government served notice it will not go ahead with negotiation of a new constitutional setup in Cyprus until alleged violations of the cease-fire by Turkish forces end.

In Ankara, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit said yesterday his government would not discuss a political settlement unless Greece agreed to turning Cyprus into a federation.

Under the plan, Greek and Turkish areas would each have their own autonomous administrations.

FORD

and Ford looked startled to see an array of reporters and cameramen watching him from across the street.

A short time later he cracked the door and tried again, but there was still no newspaper. So he took a swim and fixed his own breakfast of hot tea, melon and English muffins. He later said no other members of his family were up at that time.

It was clear the new President was anxious to see how the newspapers were playing his inauguration as the nation's 38th president and his inaugural remarks.

So when the Post was delivered by 14-year-old Shelley Deming of Alexandria, barefoot and wearing faded bluejeans and a sweatshirt, a Secret Service agent hurriedly took it inside the house to the President.

Soon afterwards Ann Williamson, 10, also clad in bluejeans, delivered the Washington Star News to the President's doorstep. She said she was pinchhitting for her brother Bill.

Ford walked out of his home at about 7:20 a.m. wearing a light gray summer suit with a white shirt and a dark tie. He had a newspaper tucked under his arm, and called out a friendly "Hi, how are you" to reporters across the street.

"How do you like being President," a reporter shoulted. "It's great — so far," he replied. "Wait until tomorrow," quipped a reporter. "You make it sound so nice," Ford tossed back with a wry smile.

Rain Comes Too Late To Save Parched Midwest Corn Crops

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The rains finally came to the Midwest yesterday perhaps in time to save the soybeans, but weeks without rain have left the corn crops to waste.

Iowa agriculture officials say the thunderstorms which barreled across the Plains states into Texas, dumping up to 10 inches of rain in places, were too late to help the Western Iowa corn crop.

In Oklahoma heavy rains sent flash floods cascading across drought-parched land, closing highways, washing cars into ditches and collapsing bridges. No one was hurt. Garber, Okla., received 10.63 inches of rain Friday.

In other Midwestern and Southwestern states, left dust-dry by weeks of little or no rain, as much as 5 inches fell. But Iowa corn farmers said the rain came so late, they expect only stunted yields.

"The rain will help some, but I don't think it will appreciatively change the picture, " Iowa Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounsberry said. "It's not going to have that big an impact."

Elsewhere, government and state officials, farmers and ranchers, echoed the situation in Iowa. Most of the drought-stricken states, including Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, Texas, Nebraska and Ohio, have conceded that corn crops are beyond saving.

The rains, which the National Weather Service predicts will last for several days, should provide enough moisture to save at least half the soybean and grain sorghum crops.

Experts estimate drought losses at $10 billion and some have likened the dry spell's impact to the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

The state governments of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma have asked emergency federal assistance like that already offered to two South Dakota counties.

Reports from state farm bureau presidents show that yield production ranged from average in Wisconsin to a 50 per cent reduction in Nebraska. Several states also reported serious financial problems for young farmers and others who suffered heavy livestock losses and are now experiencing dry conditions resulted in little or no crop yield.

Robert Watson, chief of the administration division of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ACSC) for Iowa, said the rains should help the pastures and could even given the beans a boost.

Home Loans Bill Vetoed By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has vetoed two bills to provide home financing for low and middle income Californians by creating a state "corporation" and floating a $500 million bond issue.

In his veto message yesterday the governor said he recognized the need for increased housing but the bill establishing the corporation "has serious defects and would substantially alter the state's fiscal policies."

That bill (SB1633) and the companion bond issue (SB1634) were authored by Sen. George Zenovich, D-Fresno, and supported by the housing and construction industry. Both were rushed through the Legislature this week in hopes of placing the proposed bond issue on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Reagan cited several reasons for rejecting the package. He said the bond issue could jeopardize California's top credit rating and would grant banks and mortage institutions a break by shifting the responsibility for lending risks to the state.

Under the proposal, the state corporation would funnel home loan money through regular lending institutions.

Golden Gate Bridge Directors Delay Ferry Terminal Decision

Directors of the Golden Gate Bridge District yesterday postponed a decision on what to do about a $14 million bid for construction of the Larkspur ferry terminal. The board will consider the matter at a special meeting Aug. 23 at 10 a.m. in the toll plaza. (See another story, page 1.)

The low bid was almost $4 million more than estimated by district consultants.

Directors yesterday asked the staff to look for ways to trim costs for the ferry terminals in San Francisco, Sausalito and Larkspur.

Board members debated over whether the Larkspur facility's $1,350,000 roof should be eliminated. Marin County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. led arguments for the roof, insisting it was necessary to attract enough riders to make the ferry system successful.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring, however, said the roof was "certainly not an operational necessity." A roof could be provided at no cost to the district if air rights above the terminal were leased for commercial use, he suggested.

Anthony A. Braccia, one of the primary consultants on the terminal, defended his $4 million error, saying an accurate cost estimate was impossible because of unexpected inflation for labor and material. "We're not prophets, we're estimators," he insisted.

Director Lowell Edington of Napa County suggested that the district could save money by not building permanent terminals at Sausalito and San Francisco. Temporary facilities at each location could do the job, he said.

Golden Gate Bridge District Directors Also:

TRANSIT — Endorsed pending state legislation to build a new downtown San Francisco transit terminal, primarily to serve Marin, Sonoma and East Bay bus commuters.

CIVIL RIGHTS — Received a staff opinion that the Civil Rights Act does not apply to composition of the bridge board because the district has no control over the government bodies that appoint directors.

FERRY — Received a staff report that 133,200 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry last month, a record for any July. The figure was 3,600 more than last July.

TIMETABLES — Bought 120,000 timetables from low bidder Product Agency Ltd. of San Rafael for $2,650.

TRAFFIC — Received another staff report showing a decline in traffic, this one noting the vehicle count last fiscal year was down 5.19 per cent from the previous year. It was the first decrease since the bridge opened in 1937, except for the World War II years.

Ford Names Four Prominent Men To Help With Transition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has named four prominent men to help him make the transition from the Nixon administration to the Ford administration.

They include Rogers C.B. Morton, Secretary of the Interior; ex-Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton; Donald Rumsfeld, U.S. Ambassador to NATO; and John O. Marsh, the defense adviser from Ford's vice presidential staff.

Morton, 59, joined the Nixon administration in January of 1971. He has headed the Republican National Committee and represented Maryland in the House from 1962 to 1971.

Scranton, 57, was the envoy sent by President-elect Nixon in 1968 to explore the Middle East situation.

A Yale University law school graduate, he was called on in 1970 to serve as chairman of the President's Committee on Campus Unrest and in 1971 and 1972 to be a member of the presidential price commission.

Rumsfeld, 42, has been the chief U.S. representative to NATO since February 1973.

He held several high positions in the Nixon administration, including the posts of director of the Office of Economic Opportunity and Counselor to the President. A former Navy aviator, he was graduated from Princeton University.

John O. Marsh Jr., 47, has been Ford's assistant for defense affairs since early this year. He served four terms as a Virginia Democrat in the House of Representatives and has practiced law privately in Washington.

Congress Drops Probe Of Nixon

BOSTON (UPI) — Congress will not carry proceedings against Richard Nixon any further, Democratic Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said yesterday.

"It is no longer up to Congress to pursue the matter of Watergate or Mr. Nixon's involvement in it," O'Neil said after returning from Washington where he attended the inauguration of Gerald Ford and later conferred with the new President.

"It is up to the courts to pursue the mattter if they want to," O'Neill said.

The majority leader said the Democratic-controlled Congress would not continue disagreements over Nixon administration policy automatically into the Ford administration. He said Congress would give Ford a "90-day honeymoon period."

O'Neill returned with former House Speaker John W. McCormack, who attended the inauguration at Ford's request.

"I was of course honored by the request of President Ford," McCormack said. "And I was exceedingly pleased. Given the stress and strain of the situation, it would have been so easy for the President to overlook an invitation to an old friend."

Ervin Says Congress Can't Give Immunity

HONOLULU (UPI) — Sen. Sam Ervin, who chaired the Senate Watergate Committee, said yesterday that Congress did not have the power to grant former President Nixon immunity from criminal prosecution.

Ervin, D-N.C., arrived to address the American Bar ASSociation's annual convention next week.

The senator said, "Congress cannot grant immunity, in my opinion, because it is not an exercise of legislative power."

Ervin said only the executive branch would have power to grant Nixon immunity, and he said it would probably be up to President Ford. He avoided expressing his personal opinion about whether immunity should be granted.

While talking with reporters, Ervin said he would have preferred that the impeachment process be carried to its constitutional conclusion because "then there would have been no question of whether the President was guilty or not."

Bills Found Unsigned On Nixon's Desk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the decisions facing President Gerald R. Ford are whether to sign a number of bills that were lying on Richard M. Nixon's desk when he resigned.

The most important is one appropriating federal money for elementary and secondary education. It includes what is considered by many the strongest legislative language yet opposing the busing of schoolchildren.

The House and Senate approved a conference agreement on the bill late in July. The Senate approved it 81 to 15; the House 323 to 83 —margins that are more than enough to override a veto. There are no indications Ford would be inclined to veto the measure.

The bill would forbid courts to order children bused beyond the school second nearest to their homes. The only exceptions would be where courts felt wider busing was needed to protect children's constitutional rights.

Another major bill on Ford's desk is one that would let Americans buy and own gold for the first time since the Depression era.

The bill is technically a measure to extend United States participation in the International Development Association. But an amendment was added allowing private dealing in gold.

The bill is of interest particularly to congressmen from states whose gold mines have long since been closed.

Private ownership of gold — except for coin collectors, jewelers and dentists —has been banned since Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration. The ban was one of Roosevelt's moves to fight the Depression.

Proponents of private ownership contend there is no reason now to continue to bar Americans from having gold if they want it.

Other bills awaiting presidential signature or veto are mostly minor. As one of his last actions as president, Nixon vetoed an appropriations bill for the Agriculture Department and some other agencies, saying it was inflationary and contained unworkable programs. It may be altered and reintroduced in Congress soon.

Bolinas-Stinson School District Approves Budget

Bolinas-Stinson School District trustees have adopted a $443,476 budget for 1974-75.

Supt. Bernard Barrish said the district cannot estimate its 1974-75 tax rate until it obtains its assessed valuation figures from the county. Last year's tax rate was $2.23 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Included in the tax rate will be a one year 20-cent override tax to finance the down payment on a $117,000 state loan to renovate the administration building at Bolinas School, bringing it up to present earthquake safety standards.

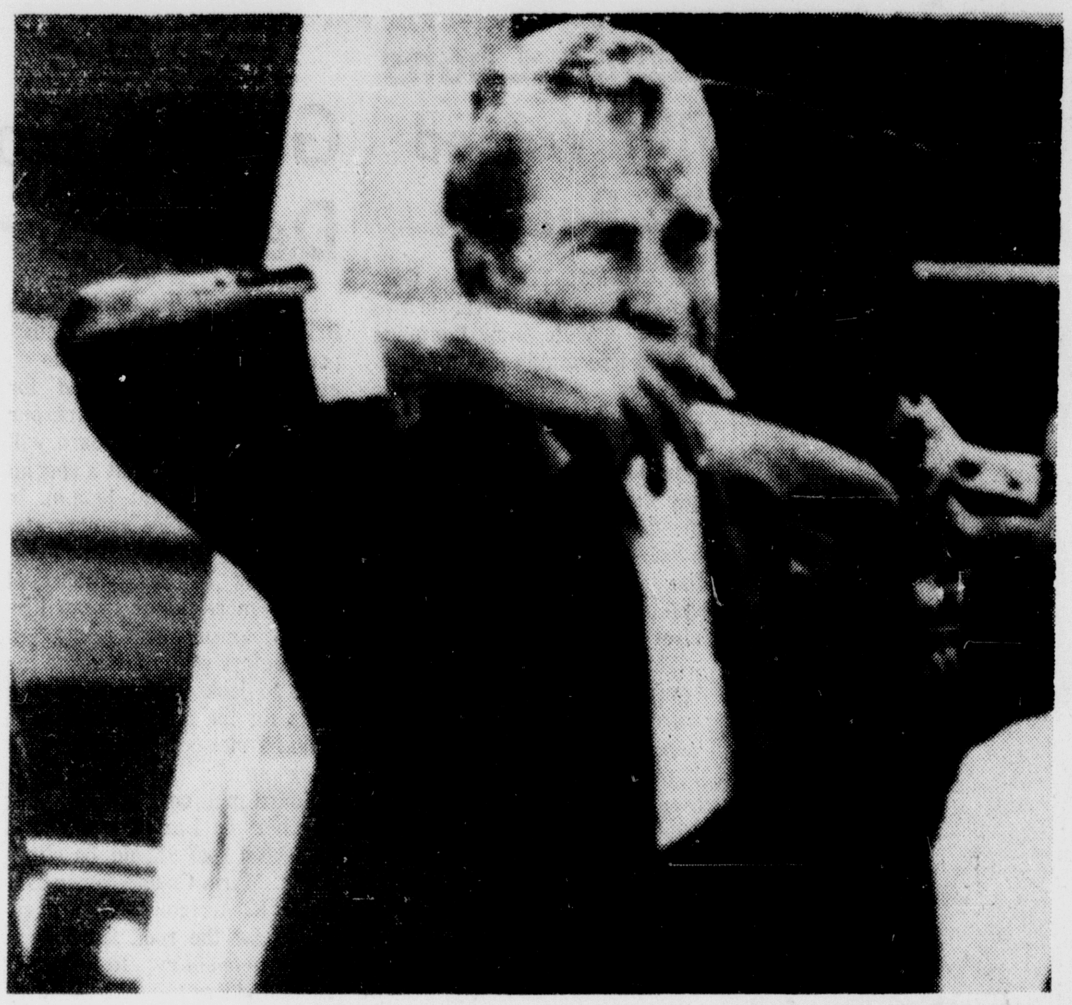
Barrish said that in succeeding years, the loan, which was financed at 4.8 per cent interest, will probably only require a tax override of six or seven cents.

Additionally, the tax rate will include five cents override to expand recreational offerings at the school and improve playgrounds.

The budget includes a 10 per cent salary increase for teachers and a seven per cent wage hike for classified employees.

Sanitary Board

The Almonte Sanitary District board will discuss a proposed plan to share sewer permit allocations in the Mill Valley area at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at district offices at 234 Shoreline Highway.



EMOTIONAL GESTURE — As he stepped from his plane at El Toro Marine Air Station yesterday, Richard Nixon lifted his hand as if to hide an inner emotion. Nixon received a tumultuous welcome from a crowd of more than 5,000 who wept and cheered. At Nixon's request, the base was opened to the public for the first time.

Senate Republicans Oppose Prosecution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans appear to have concluded that Richard M. Nixon has suffered enough over Watergate and should not be prosecuted.

"A pound of flesh is enough," Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott told reporters yesterday, following a meeting of all GOP senators. "Why should we demand the blood that goes with it.?"

Sen. Norris Cotton, N.H., chairman of the conference of Republican senators, said the "punishment, agony and the disgrace he has undergone is probably the worst punishment there could be."

Their remarks apeared to represent the sentiment of the group, although no formal decision was announced.

A grand jury named Nixon an indicted co-conspirator in the Watergate case after being advised it could not indict a president. It would be up to Special Proseutor Leon Jaworski whether to seek to bring any charges against Nixon. He has indicated no decision on that will be made anytime soon.

In other developments:

—Lawyers for John D. Ehrlichman asked yesterday that the Watergate cover-up trial, set for Sept. 9, be delayed at least two months on grounds that "inflamed passions" and "massive and pervasive publicity" during Nixon's last days in office make finding an impartial jury impossible. Attorneys for co-defendant H.R. Haldeman said they are considering making the same request.

White House lawyers, the last time, reported one of his missing Watergate tapes had been found. They said more than half of another subpoenaed conversation never was recorded because the tape ran out. Both involved talks with key aide Charles W. Colson in early 1973.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic chairman at the time of the Watergate bugging, settled his suit against the Nixon campaign out of court for $400,000. The suit sought damages for the bugging. O'Brien said he would give the money to his party for a campaign "to reenlist the confidence of the American people in our two-party system.

Grand Jury Now Feels Nixon More Indictable

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal grand jury that named former President Richard Nixon as a co-conspirator in the Watergate scandal now believes ixon is "much more indictable" in light of the three new tapes released Monday, the New York Daily News reported today.

The Daily News said the original Watergate grand jury has put Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski "on notice" that Nixon, now a private citizen, must not escape punishment in view of his admitted role in the cover-up.

The Daily News, quoting an unnamed source, said members of the grand jury will probably decide during the next several days whether they actually wnat to indict Nixon.

Nixon Goes Home; Just A Citizen

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard M. Nixon returned to his home in California a private citizen yesterday after bidding an emotional, sometimes tearful farewell to public life as the 37th president of the United States.

Then it was on to California and a warm welcome from some 5,000 supporters who turned out at the El Toro Marine Air Station where the Presidential jet "Spirit of '76" landed. They cheered and sang "God Bless America."

Nixon told the crowd he would "continue to work for peace ... for opportunity and prosperity in this country."

He was accompanied by former press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, his appointments secretary, Stephen Bull, Tricia and Edward Cox and his wife.

Nixon ceased being President at 11:35 a.m. EDT, when his letter of resignation was handed to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

He was at his desk aboard the presidential jet 13 miles southwest of Jefferson City, Mo., at 39,000 feet when Gerald R. Ford was sworn in as the 38th President three minutes past noon.

One of Nixon's closest friends Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., said Nixon broke down with a group of close friends Thursday night before he went on national televison to announce his resignation.

New White House press secretary Jerry TerHorst said Nixon did not pardon himself or grant immunity to anyone before he left office.

Bar Association Head Calls For Nixon Disbarment Examination

HONOLULU (UPI) — Disbarment proceedings should be considered against former President Richard Nixon if he decides to return to the practice of law, the president of the American Bar Association said yesterday.

ABA President Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, Fla., also said it would be appropriate for the California or New York bar associations to take up the issue.

But, Smith said, he doubted Nixon would return to the legal profession.

If Nixon returns to practice, he said, "it would be the appropriate time to take up the question of disbarring him."

Smith, who was in Honolulu for the ABA's annual convention, said that, although the nation should put Watergate in the past, he personally felt Nixon should be called to account for his actions.

"No man is above the law," he told reporters, "and I don't want to let anybody go who has violated the law. But it is for the people to weigh the evidence and determine Mr. Nixon's future."

The president of the California Bar Association announced last month that it would hold a preliminary disciplinary hearing within two months for Nixon and he would be treated "just like any other attorney in the state of California" whose professional conduct had been called into question.

The state bar announced earlier that it was also investigating six other members connected to Watergate — John Ehrlichman, Herbert Kalmbach, Frank De Marco Jr., Robert Mardian, Gordon Strachan and Donald Segretti.

Nixon Retaining Some Ex-Presidential Aides

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Richard Nixon still has Ronald Ziegler as his news spokesman, and other aides who were with him in the White House.

The members of the former president's staff who flew to Califronia with him yesterday "are going to remain on as long as we are wanted or needed," former Appointments Secretary Stephen Bull said Friday.

Under law, a former president is given a federal expense account to pay for aides, secretaries and other expenses.

Bull and Ziegler left the White House staff with Nixon's departure, and came to California along with several others, including Col. Jack Brennan, a military aide.

Bull said he had no idea how long the former White House staffers would go on working for Nixon. "No one is talking about the long term stuff yet," he said. "We're not even trying to figure out the answers yet. We'll try to figure out the questions first."

Photographic Essays Outline Canadian Parliament Grandeur

By ADA GARFINKEL

The spiritual and temporal grandeur of the Gothic Revival architecture of Canada's Parliament Buildings is shown in a series of photographic essays now on dsiplay in the main floor of the Marin Civic Center.

The exhibit, combining panels of photos from the book "Stones of History" (produced by the National Film Board of Canada and photographed by Chris Lund and Malak of Ottowa) is handsomely mounted.

The photos, both in color and black and white, focus on the carved exteriors characteristic of Gothic architecture and include unusual 360-degree globular and kaleidoscopic views.

Informative placards which accompany the display acquaint one with a good bit of history and procedure. One, for example, proclaims that the elegantly carved "Speaker's Chair" in the House of Commons is an exact replica of the one in Parliament in London, and was made partly from Admiral Nelson's flagship "Victory." Another states that the red velvet throne chairs in the Senate represent the Crown and are used by the Governor-general and his Lady in the absence of the Queen.

Some of the more spectacular shots are of the arched windows and soaring vaulted ceiling, carved book shelves and parquet floors, and the dome of the main library of Parliament.

Others portray the rotunda ceiling of the memorial chamber in the Peace Tower; the gargoyles and shield-bearing lions flanking the outer entrance and its sky-reaching stained-glass windows.

Quite unusual is a softly pink-tinted multiple-shot of the memorial chamber in its entirety — in the round, as it were.

More traditional is a panoramic view of the entire Parliamentary complex standing on a rocky promontory of 29 acres of land overlooking the Ottawa River 150 feet below. One, an enchanting winter scene, transforms the austere formality into a glowing, tawny fairyland.

Other intriguing shots are the close-up view of the "Book of Remembrance" honoring the war dead, parts of ceilings which bear the national symbols of Canada, England, France, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

A series of six behind-the-scenes views show Canada's official stone carver, Eleanor Milne, and her team of craftsmen who continuously clarify the intricate tracery and carvings of the exteriors.

This exhibit, which is sponsored by the Canadian Consulate General, will continue to Aug. 30, and may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

DRAMA REVIEW

Not Much Worth Praising In Sunset Players 'Mame'

By GERALD GENESE

It is difficult to pan the efforts of a relatively new group. But it is equally hard to find anything worthwhile in the newly-formed Sunet Players' production of "Mame" which opened last night at the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

It appears that Edward Decker, director of the company and the show, bit off more than he could chew.

The talent in the company is very thin. Only Decker's youthful enthusiasm would permit him to think he could stage a large musical with people who neither sing nor dance very well.

The Sunset Players is a group of recent San Rafael High School graduates, and a few others, who appear to have little musical or acting experience or training. (This is the players' second production.)

In the play, Mame, is a woman of indominitable will and spirit who — against all odds — fights to keep and raise her nephew. Cece Garrison, who plays Mame, has a pleasant, but not overpowering, voice or presence. She does not really dominate the stage or the play, which she must for the play to work.

The choreography, singing, acting and directing all suffer from a lack of energy and imagination.

It might be better if, Becker selected plays that were commensurate with the talent in the company. He does have something of a nucleus to work with, but he must build and not overreach at this stage in the company's development.

Perhaps he could have acting workshops until the company has gained strength and cohesiveness. It would be advisable, though, for him to move more slowly until he gets a firmer base to work from.

"Mame" will be performed at the High School tonight at 8:30, and August 11, 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Auditions Are Set For French Musical

Auditions for roles in the French 19th Century musical," Italian Straw hat," to be produced by the Big-Little Theater Co., will be held Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club.

James Borgwardt, a director with the amateur theater group, said the production will open in September, with date and place to be announced.

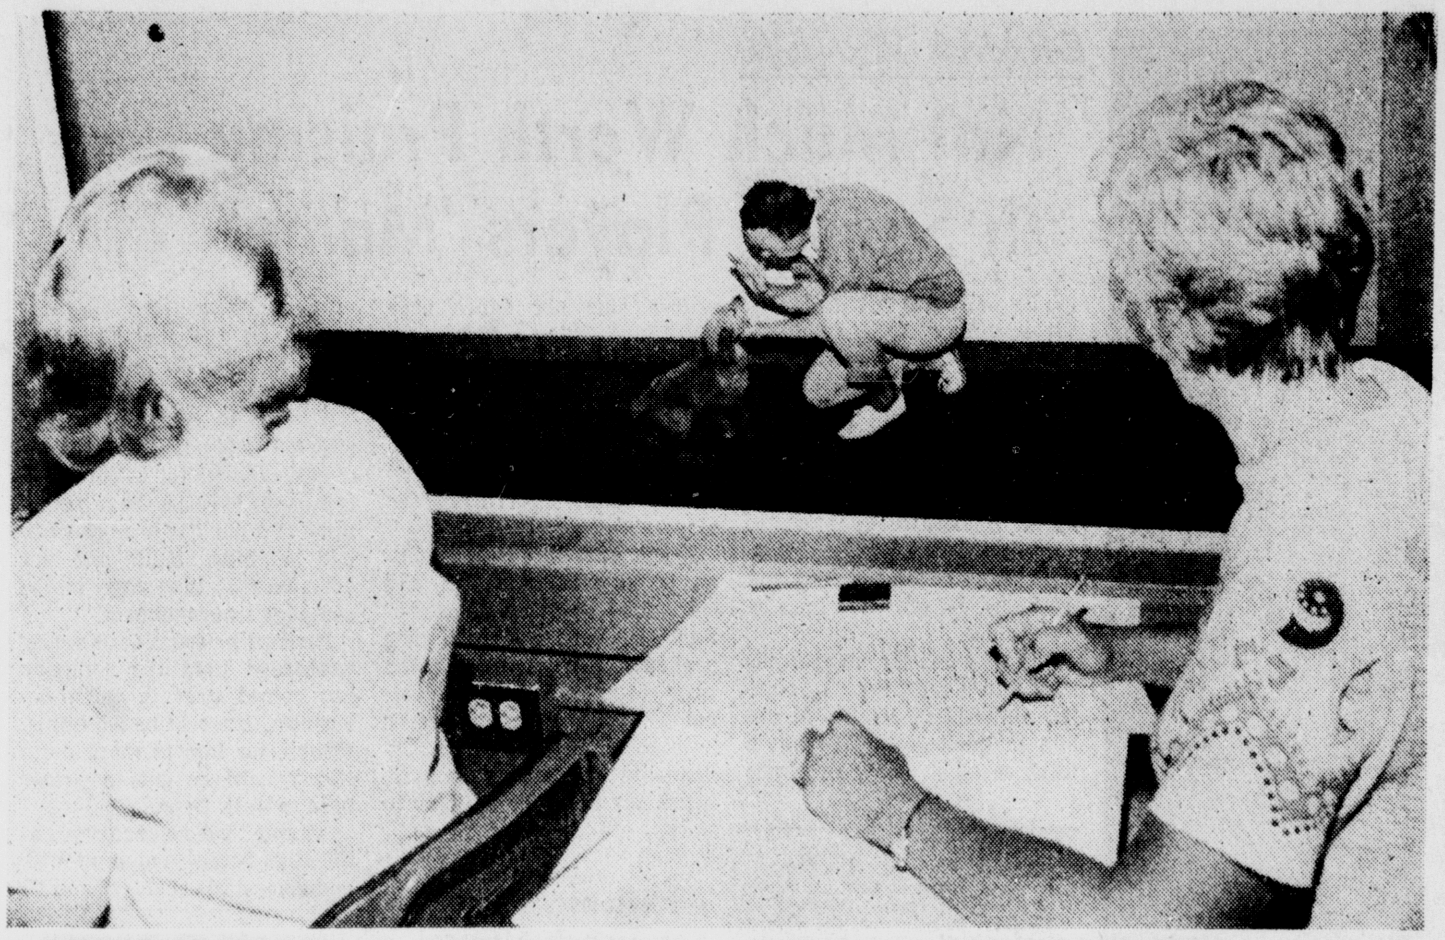
HMM, THAT'S a long drop, Alfred seems to be thinking as volunteer Peggy ter Laare watches her charge's downward trip on the first leg of "puppy testing" day at Guide Dogs for the Blind.



WITH PENCIL IN hand, volunteer graders Evelyn Hoffman (left) and Ellen Casey watch closely to see if Alfred responds to commands from Emilie Stamm.

KEEPING HIM steady as she adjusts the scale, Bernice Irwin passes Alfred through the final phase of the 20-minute testing program. Here he is checked to see if he is growing and developing properly.

FIVE WEEKS OF EXAMS

Testing Leads To Guide Dog Selection

By KAREN PETERSON

"C'mon baby," murmured puppy trainer Peggy ter Laare of Woodacre as she led the romping 8-week-old Golden Retriever up the stairs. "This guy is gonna like stairs like I don't know what."

This is the third Thursday that Mrs. ter Laare has worked with her charge. He and the rest of his puppy friends are going through a five-week "puppy testing" program staffed by volunteers at Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

TWENTY-EIGHT WOMEN volunteers staff the once-a-week, year-long program, spending two to three hours evaluating the personality, intelligence, motor reactions and determination of these potential graduates of the school's kennels.

Mini-sized barking echoes down the hall of the kennel as the women pick up their assigned pups, each identified by ingenious patch cuttings on his (or her) fur. At 10 a.m., everyone is gathered to begin the morning's activities.

Alfred (as we dubbed him) was led out of his cage by Mrs. ter Laare, a volunteer since 1972. While he romped through the series of tests, she and the other volunteers were keeping a close eye on his behavior. They're determining if the dogs will ultimately become future guide dogs.

AS HIS CHUBBY little legs ran to keep up, Mrs. ter Laare noted that he has "been heeling all along." He's very responsive and very sweet."

Next he struggled joyfully to the top and back down the makeshift stairs, his only hindrance his short legs. "A lot of small puppies are afraid of stairs," explained program supervisor Fred Maynard.

He walked easily across the facsimile of a city street grating; if he balks at this task, it could mean rejection from his future career.

Next, he went indoors where Emilie Stamm of San Francisco commanded him to sit, come, and fetch. "That's a real good boy," she said as Alfred sat. "You're something else," she complimented as he ran to her with tail wagging.

WHEN HE POUNCED on the bright orange ball and returned it to his tester, the two women sitting behind the glass partition gave Alfred an "above average" rating.

He got all threes and fours, said grader Evelyn Hoffman of San Rafael, a volunteer since 1964. Sometimes, added supervisor of volunteers, MoZelle Zimmer, puppies start testing their testers after the third week. "(They) see if we really mean it," she said, "with their eyes looking at us all the time."

Miss Stamm, who has been a volunteer for 22 years, said she just watches the puppies to see if they're "willing, stubborn or playful."

FROM THERE, Alfred went outside again where nine women graded him on temperament, intelligence, hearing and body movements. They checked his hearing with blasts of a horn, buzzer and chimes; then watched as two loud gun blasts sounded, an indication as to how he will react to the noises of the "outside" world.

The gun blasts didn't bother Alfred, who continued his sniffing adventure around the judging area. He also played with his image in the mirror, an indication, said Mrs. Zimmer, of intelligence.

HIS LAST STOP was the weighing and measuring room where volunteers Bernice Irwin of Kentfield and Celine Kelly of San Rafael checked to see if he was growing and developing properly. Alfred's weight checked in at nine pounds.

As Alfred was escorted lovingly to his cage after the 20-minute day with the volunteers, Mrs. Zimmer nodded that he "had been very good" during this week's testing. If he makes it, he'll spend a year at home with a 4-H member, a year of training at Guide Dogs and then a month with his new owner before starting his career of devoted service.

"We love them all," said Mrs. Zimmer of the puppies. "We all want to pat and kiss them" all the time.

If you're interested in the program, it may be a while before an opening comes up. There's a long waiting list and Mrs. Zimmer, who has been there since 1953, said the "girls just don't quit."

IT'S ALL OVER until next Thursday when once again the women volunteers will urge their pupils through the tests that may someday mean a diploma as a full-fledged guide dog. (Photos by Ty Barbour)

THE LAST WORD

If The I-J Women's Section Changes, What Should It Be?

By BETH ASHLEY

A woman walked by the door of the women's department last week, escorting a group of CampFire Girls on tour of the I-J plant.

"I hope you're going to stop writing about all those weddings," she said. "Write about what women are really doing."

The women's department staff, thirsting to write tomes of major significance, waved and commented assent.

"Right on," we said.

But as news writers we knew: what women are really doing — some of them anyway, judging from the items that cross our desk — is having weddings.

And the I-J, as a local newspaper, should print their news.

HER COMMENT opened up continuing thoughts about just what this department should print. Should there be a women's section at all?

There's a school of thought that says a women's section is an insult to women. It implies that women aren't interested in general news elsewhere in the paper. It says to men: skip these pages, there's nothing in stories about women's interests that you should read.

"In these days of women's lib," one reader wrote, "shouldn't you be called the Person Editor? Of the Person's Pages?

NEWSPAPERS throughout the country are wrestling with this question. Big city papers, almost wholesale, have abandoned such titles as "Women's Pages" and "Society."

What have they come up with? The answer is, "Er — nothing, really." There's "Style" (Washington Post), "View" (Los Angeles Times), "Scene" (San Francisco Examiner). There's "Tempo," and "Family" and "People." The New York Times has an unobtrusive line at the top of its non-news pages that says "family food fashions furnishings."

And in these sections are features, mostly about people, but sometimes about consumerism, home furnishings, health tips, recipes, fashions (men and women's), advice to the lovelorn and how to raise the biggest zucchinis.

ARE THESE PROPER fixtures for a newspaper? Do only women care about prices and cooking, gardening and a happy love life? If you decide these features are of interest to both sexes, what do you call your page?

The way we see it, in a newspaper like the I-J, the newsworthy things local women are doing should be reported. The things local women are interested in should be examined. The things women are doing elsewhere should also be explored — if there's relevance, or useful information, or amusement to be gleaned.

MOST NEWS HAS been desexed, and the best features are those which address common human concerns and pastimes. Maybe men's news, too, should be on the "women's" pages.

Just when we consider doing away with a regular fixture of this section — a crochet pattern, for instance — in comes a report that the crochet pattern is extremely high in reader response.

The overriding purpose of these pages is to print what interests our readers.

Maybe one day soon we'll abandon the name "Marin Women." Probably we'll shift the story emphasis a bit, change columnists here and there.

But what'll we call it? And what kind of stories would you like to see?

Skilled Workers Project Slated

The U.S. Office of Education has awarded a half-million dollar project grant to the American Home Economics Association to create and coordinate a training and employment system that "ultimately will enhance the image and salary of the whole pool of workers who use home-related skills in their jobs."

According to Dr. Doris Hanson, executive director of AHEA, the primary objective of the project is to develop and validate a nationally-standardized system of curriculum modules which will certify workers as "skilled" rather than "unskilled," provide logical avenues for career advancement and mobility, upgrade the quality of human services and bring dignity and self-respect to the human service workers.

The AHEA project represents the first single program to be implemented on a national scale.

Annual 'Vintage Sound' Concert Set At Masson

The third annual Paul Masson "Vintage Sounds" concerts beginning Sept. 7 will benefit Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael.

The four concerts will be held each Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the vineyard in Saratoga. Artists to appear are the George Shearing Trio, Sept. 7 and 8; "Sonny" Terry and Brownie McGhee, Sept. 14 and 15; Oscar Brown Jr., Sept. 21 and 22, and Dizzy Gillespie with the Vernon Alley Trio, Sept. 28 and 29.

Also appearing during the concerts will be Simon, Tressa Lewis, a blues and jazz singer with the Vernon Alley Trio; John Thomas, folk singer and guitarist and Karlos and Nyomi.

Dean M. Jennings, executive producer of the jazz and folk rock series said the concerts netted $1740 in 1972 for replacement of the birds at the Lagoon at the San Francisco Palace of Fine Arts and in 1973 it netted $2500 for the Bay Area Sickle Cell Anemia research organization, S.C.A.R.E.

Couple Wed In Novato Church Rite

Patricia Mary Swensen and Paul Arthur Pedroli, both of Novato, were married last week at St. Anthony of Padua Church in Novato.

Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle D. Swensen, was attended by Laura Keenan of Greenbrae as maid of honor.

Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pedroli. His brother is Brian Pedroli, who served as best man, and his sister is Patsy Green of Novato.

Paul's ushers were Greg Noonan and Mike Allen, also of Novato.

A reception was held at Marin Country Club. The bridal pair is visiting Oahu and Maui before returning to Novato to live.

An employee of Wells Fargo Bank in Novato, Patricia attended Ursuline High School in Santa Rosa and College of Marin. She has two sisters, Dorothy Varellas of San Francisco and Linda Burdusis of Pleasanton.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Novato High School and is employed by Automatic Tube Co. in San Rafael.

Woman Thinks Becoming A Nun Might Ease Virginity Pressure

RAP:

I'm 25, but socially, I'm more like 17, as I became ill six years ago and almost died. Up until last year I was still fighting for my life but now, thanks to doctors and medicines, I'm doing fine.

This past year I've had lots of dates and proposals of marriage. People tell me I'm very attractive — I try to hide my shyness. Every time I go with a guy he wants to go to bed and I'm tired fighting them off. You see — I'm ashamed to say I'm a virgin! I can't let anyone know or I'd be laughed out of town, so I'm thinking of becoming a nun.

That's problem number one: Have I got another (shameful) disease —virginity — and should I take the veil?

Problem number two is a terrific, somewhat older man who treats me as a buddy. He assumes I've "been around" and is always kidding me about my sex life. He thinks because I date a lot of fellows, I'm fickle, when actually a lot of them don't come back because they don't get anywhere with me.

Should I tell my buddy the terrible truth and risk his kidding or keep quiet and risk his disrespect? — EDIE

EDIE:

Problem number one: If your only reason for becoming a nun is your virginity, you'd probably never make it and you'd be miserable if you did.

It's nothing shameful, believe me! And you aren't alone. Stop worrying. — HELEN

EDIE:

Problem number two: Good buddies don't kid their buddies about real worries. Tell this older man the truth and I'll bet you'll be closer than ever. (And since I think this is what you want, don't waste time about it.) — SUE

DEAR RAP:

Here's my version of "What Are Friends?"

Friends are people with whom you share different emotional feelings. They are different in their ideas, beliefs and looks because they are human beings but to you they are all the same because you love each one with a special love.

Friends are the ones who all hang around together, at the movies, church, parties or especially at the bowling alley. They are people who are from all different religions and discuss their beliefs with one another but don't knock if they don't agree.

Friends are known as kickers, surfers, hippies and some even dopers, but to you they are great people — even the ones who smoke dope, because around you, they don't. (Not because you'll fink, you won't, but because they have respect for your feelings.)

Friends are a great lovely bunch of guys and gals who have a good old time together but when one dies, as one did, there is deep sorrow.

This friend didn't die a normal death. He was killed on a motorcycle when a motorist didn't see him coming after he (the motorist) ran a stop sign.

At the funeral, the friends who cried were comforted by the others. Charlie left us, but we will always remember all the good times we shared.

Yes, there are good times, bad times, happy and sad times shared with friends but without them, there is nothing. — JOYCE

SEW SIMPLE

Eliminating Seam Is Unwise

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate

DEAR EUNICE,

I am in the process of making bridesmaids' dresses for my daughter's wedding. They have selected rather simple patterns, but there is a seam directly down the center front of the dress. Perhaps it won't be as noticeable as I imagine. However, with your approval, I would like to eliminate this seam altogether. Would I be wrong doing this? — MRS. S.K.

DEAR MRS. S.K.

There are several reasons why there would be a seam at the center front of a garment. First, perhaps the fabric was not wide enough to cut without the seam. Skirts have so much more fullness today than with the simple A-line dresses, that depending on the width of the fabric, perhaps a seam is necessary.

I have found, too, that when there is a seam at the center front, it is usually shaped. Sometimes it is indented slightly at the waist, giving it a closer fit to the body and very often it is flared out at the hemline to help achieve the slightly wider and more flowing skirt.

I think you will normally find more garments with seams at the center front if they are cut without a waistline seam. When a waistline seam is cut into the pattern, there are other ways of gaining bodice fit and flare at the hem.

I think you will also find that the seam will not be noticed and because of the cut of the garment you would be unwise to eliminate it.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have my closet filled with shirtwaist dresses and I must admit, I do love them. They are flattering and feminine to everyone. My pet peeve in blouses and dresses is the vertical buttonholes. They simply will not stay buttoned and I think I am speaking for everyone in the world who has a shirt or shirtwaist which has those vertical buttonholes (there ought to be a law against them). Why can't they be made horizontal like they are on every other type garment? — MRS. M.T.

DEAR MRS. M.T.:

This is a very common complaint in women's clothes. Guess the men don't complain because their shirts are fitted so loosely (they wouldn't put up with such a thing if they had the same trouble we do).

The reason for the vertical buttonholes is the design of the garment, where there is a front band or plastron and the buttonholes are centered on this band. There is no way you could use a horizontal buttonhole and have your button end up at the center of the band, without the buttonhole extending off the band completely.

If you are large in the bustline, this is an extra problem because there would be more strain on this area and I can see that the buttons would be constantly open.

I would suggest you find a blouse or a dress pattern which has a shirt look. Instead of a separate band at the front, you will find a standard closing without this separate piece of fabric.The appearance will be almost the same, however it won't have quite the same tailored look.

If your pattern doesn't have the separate band for the front closing, you may make your buttonholes in the horizontal position just as you would on coats and suits. Anything to make a garment more comfortable can also make it a "winner."

DEAR EUNICE,

I need help with cording. I am making a bedspread with boxed corners. When I apply the cording to one side of the fabric it looks smooth, but when I join the second piece of fabric it is never flat and the stitching isn't close enough to the cording. Please help. — VIRGINIA P.

DEAR VIRGINIA P.

The cording should be applied the same, whether you are making pillows, spreads, or a garment for yourself. If you follow the instructions carefully, you should have perfect results every time.

Cording should be covered with the same fabric as your spread, or a contrast if desired; however, it must be cut on the bias. Be sure when stitching it close to the cording that you keep the bias even or you will end up with diagonal wrinkles.

Cut the excess fabric from the covered cord to a seam allowance of 5/8 inch. Place the cording on one section of the spread (or one section of your garment), keeping the cut edges of the seam extension of the bias even with the cut edge of the garment. Pin or baste in place and machine stitch on the same stitching you had on the cording.

It is a good idea to use the cording or zipper foot for this so that you can get very close to the cord itself. This stitching will later be your guide stitching for the final steps, so be sure it is accurate.

Lastly, place the second section of your spread (or garment) over the first, right sides together, with the seam extending. Pin from the side where you can already see a row of machine stitching where you stitched the cording to the first section.

The final step is to machine stitch over your first stitching. Again, be sure to use the cording foot. If your stitching is accurate, you should have beautiful results, with no guesswork involved.

Mill Valley Man Dreams Of Glory In Yo-Yo World

By MARC LITTMAN

Steven A. Ball arched his wrist and a spinning yellow yo-yo eased back into his hand.

He spread his fingers and the small plastic globe sprang from his grip and quickly grew taut at the end of its four-foot string. It dropped to the ground them skipped lightly along the sidewalk for several seconds before Ball drew it back, apparently effortlessly.

It wasn't as easy as it looked.

"That yo-yo is traveling at speeds of up to 180 miles per hour. Sometimes you can't even see it," Ball said as he practiced in front of his Organic Hair Care Center in Mill Valley.

He cocked his wrist again and the yo-yo swung out and wrapped itself twice around both his arms, the spinning disc suspended.

Ball was silent as he gazed intently at the twirling yo-yo, oblivious to the steady stream of people — mostly children with eyes full of admiration — who passed by.

One elderly woman stopped to ask how long it had taken him to become so accomplished.

"I'm 32 now and I've been playing with yo-yos since I was seven years old," Ball answered as he launched into another trick.

He became serious about the sport two years ago while recuperating from a back injury.

A trim, muscular man, he said he first mastered the 10 basic tricks outlined in a Duncan Yo-Yo book from "walking the dog" to "double or nothing" and then began to improvise.

"It's crative, playing with yo-yos," he said. "It's a kinetic brain exercise that balances the mind."

He was fortunate to be able to train "with an expert." John Garber, a former supervisor for the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department. "But an expert will only show you a trick once and that's it," Ball said.

For the past year and a half, he's been practicing three hours a day during the summer and five hours a day in the winter.

Ball, whose beauty salon has been written up in magazines such as Redbook and McCall's for introducing the use of herbs to the cosmetology industry, said he's occasionally driven away customers by his daily practice in the shop.

"Some people are afraid the thing's going to fly off the end and hit them," he said.

The amiable Mill Valley resident — who is single — is a familiar figure to the operators of a local drug store where he regularly buys four new Duncan yo-yos a week, along with 14 packages of strings.

"The centrifugal force just blows a yo-yo apart," Ball. (who never goes anywhere without one) explained.

Ball recalled that when he was a child living in Los Angeles, representatives of Duncan Yo-Yo Co. would come to a neighborhood park and perform tricks and pass out autographed photographs.

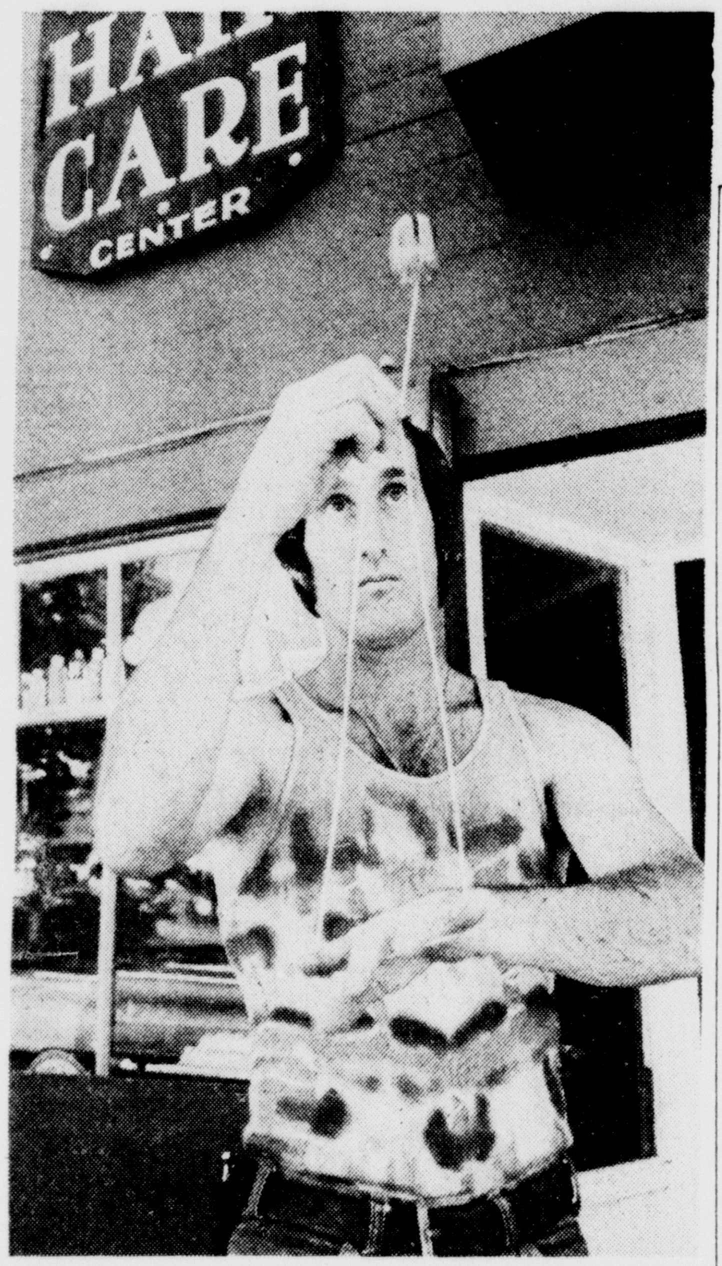
He has dreams of becoming a demonstrator for Duncan since he loves being around children. (He's judged yo-yo tournaments in Mill Valley although he has never entered a competition.)

"I wrote Duncan a letter of application (for the demonstrator's job) but they just sent me back some strings," Ball said.

But he hasn't given up.

"There's no great rush. I'm not ready now and maybe they're keeping their eye on me," Ball said, concentrating on another difficult trick.

"But just wait a couple years. I'm going to be the Evel Knievel of the yo-yo world."



YO-YO MAN — Steven A. Ball, 32, practices yo-yo tricks in front of his Organic Hair Care Center in Mill Valley. Ball aspires to be the "Evel Knievel of the yo-yo world" in a couple of years.

Westrum Not Man For Job

"They say that Adversity is a better teacher than prosperity." With these words Giant manager Wes Westrum opened his post game comments Tuesday night.

The Giants had just completed the second game of a two-game series with Houston. In this short series, the Giants pitching staff had somehow managed to give up 37 hits. Two games: 37 hits!

WES WESTRUM is a fine person. He is softspoken and friendly. He is honestly concerned about the individual feelings of his players. For all of the above reasons he is not the man to manage the San Francisco Giants.

I have a feeling, and that's all it is, that Westrum has not been signed to a contract to manage next year. I think that Horace Stoneham's announcement that Westrum would be back was simply made to keep the press off his and Wes' backs. I think that Wes will quietly step down at the end of the year and that a new manager will be named.

IF MY SPECULATION proves to be correct then the question of choice of manager once again pops up. Frank Luchessi third base coach for the Texas Rangers, had been mentioned as a possible choice when Charlie Fox was on his way out. Luchessi is a North Beach San Franciscan. He briefly managed the Philadelphia Phillies. He is very popular and well respected by the players at Texas. They were disappointed to learn that Westrum had apparently been extended through next year. They wanted Frank to get the job.

I talked briefly to Frank Luchessi about the Giant managing job. I mentioned to him that he had been prominently mentioned in the San Francisco press. Luchessi replied that he was aware that his name had been brought up but that he hadn't talked to the Giants. We talked about the City and as the conversation broke up he said that "something might still happen." Very interesting.

Let's get back to Wes Westrum and this year. He is extremely surprised at the way some of the Giants are playing. He said, "I'd been led to believe that these guys could play." I asked if he felt he'd been given bad information or that the players had been rushed along. He thought that a little of both had happened. He said, "When I came up here I had some definite ideas about the team. Very little has happened to change my earlier opinions."

WES WOULDN'T single out anyone for special criticism because he didn't feel it would benefit the situation. He did say that trades would be made and that a number of players would be brought up from the minor leagues at the end of this year. He felt that, "Maybe that will wake somebody up."

For someone to be woken up, they must first be asleep. Wes Westrum may have inadvertently touched on the major problem. It's going to take a very strong-minded person to come in and arouse the sleeping Giants.

Schlee Talking His Way To PGA Title

Confident Leader Is Stroke Up

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — A one stroke lead at the halfway stage of a tournament can hardly be considered decisive. It's even less so in one of the big-four championships, but John Schlee appears to be talking his way to the PGA title.

In the locker room the players kid the 35-year-old Texan about his love of astrology. They may live to regret the fact they did not take him seriously.

Schlee shot a 67 yesterday to go with his opening 68 for a 36-hole total of 135, five-under-par, and a one-stroke lead over Hubie Green, winner of three tourneys this term and over $160,000 in winnings. Green shot a 68.

"My signs are in the right alignment," Schlee has insisted all week. He's helped the signs by keeping the ball on the fairway and making the putts he's supposed to make.

Nicklaus spoke before Gary Player, his great friend and rival, went out on the course to tie the tournament record, held by Nicklaus and Bobby Nichols, with a six-under-par 64.

The 64, which included a run of six birdies in seven holes from the eighth, left Player, winner of the Masters and British Open earlier this year, tied with South African countryman, Bobby Cole, on 137. Cole shot a 68 yesterday.

A further stroke back stood Nicklaus, following his second straight 69, with Lee Trevino alone on 139 after a 66 yesterday which was the tournament low until Player began his hot streak.

(UPI Telephoto)

Schlee said you have to be lucky to win a championship. He was lucky Friday. He completed his round yesterday heavy rain forced a 45-minute postponement in play.

When he needed a stroke of genius to get out of trouble he pulled it out. At the ninth he was on the edge of the green, some 80-feet from the cup. He chipped in. Birdie!

But Green, disqualified in the third round of last year's PGA at Canterbury for handing in an incorrect scorecard, was not about to be upstaged.

After the rain delay, with his ball resting in casual water, he came up with a 25-foot birdie putt, his fourth, to put himself back on course after making successive bogeys at the 12th and 13th just as the heavens opened up.

"I don't like playing in the rain. I prefer not to play in the rain," said Green.

Player, a two-time winner of the tournament, had a similarly inspired run en route to his second Masters title last April.

"I've had several such runs," Player said of his birdie barrage, but he was disappointed about his bogey on No. 17 which cost him the outright tournament record. "I'd have liked that record," said the man who has won 99 tournaments in 22-years of globetrotting.

Player fashioned his round with accurate iron play and dead-eye putting. He canned putts ranging from 25 to just 2 feet for his birds.

Nicklaus was upset even before he arrived at the first tee. His caddie complained of "tired feet" and failed to show and Jack had to go out with a new man. He started with a bogey, made another at the fifth, but then got his game under control and made three birdies to post his second straight 69.

Cole, who has played in the shadow of Player all his young golfing life, missed eight fairways, but recovered well enough to post his two-under 68.

Seventy eight players with scores of 149 or better made the cut, but Tom Weiskopf was not one of them.

SIX OUT OF SEVEN TO RED SOX

Boston's Mastery Over A's Is Mystifying

OAKLAND (UPI) — Vida Blue, whose non-heart attack earlier in the week had everyone except the star lefthander hitting the panic button, trys to get the Oakland A's straightened out today against the one ball club they haven't beaten—the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox, behind Bill Lee's clutch pitching in the face of four Boston errors, defeated the A's 6-2 last night and now hold a 6-1 season's edge on the defending World Champions, whom they may face in the American League playoffs.

Blue hasn't pitched in more than a week but yesterday he told Manager Alvin Dark he was ready to go.

"I feel fine," Blue said. "I think too much was made of my problem. It was a case of eating heavy food late at night. Sure, it scared me, but I never thought for a minute I was sick. Now, I want to take my regular turn. About the only complaint I have at the moment is that they made me spend too much time in bed."

When Blue faces the Red Sox, the A's' lead in the American League West will be down to 6 ½ games, still a comfortable one, but by no means insurmountable with 48 games left.

Both Manager Darrell Johnson of the Red Sox and Dark can't explain why Boston, which leads the AL East by four games, has had so much success against Oakland this year.

"They are a good ball club," said Johnson, "which makes it even tougher for me to explain why we have had so much luck against them. I hope it continues."

"It just seems as if we play bad ball every time we face them," said Dark. "They are a fine hitting club but that doesn't really explain it."

Lee of Terra Linda scattered nine hits in winning his 13th game in 23 decisions. Two errors figured in the A's' first run and Joe Rudi drove in the second with a long homer.

"We stay in the best sleeping hotel in the league here, and there's not much to do nights in Oakland, so we felt strong," said Lee, all business on the mound and all jokes afterward.

The Red Sox, meanwhile, jumped starter Ken Holtzman for three hits, an infield out and an error to score four runs in the second, and that was all the help Lee needed.

A's owner Charlie Finley, probably convinced the Red Sox will be his team's opponents in the playoffs, has assigned Coach Bobby Hofman to scout Boston full time from now to the end of the season. Hofman will remain in the bullpen this weekend then trail the Red Sox for their remaining 48 games.

Giants' Consistent Pitcher

CHICAGO (AP) — San Francisco's Jim Barr, known to teammates as the Giants' most consistent pitcher, has piled up six wins in a row, the last two of them shutouts.

"No doubt about it," Giants' manager Wes Westrum declared yesterday after Barr held the Chicago Cubs to six singles and went on to a 3-0 victory. "Barr is our most consistent pitcher."

The victory for Barr, who mixed slow curves and sliders with fastballs, was also the fifth loss in a row for the Cubs, who are stumbling along in last place in the National League East.

"He's tough," Cub slugger Billy Williams said of Baar.

Marinwood To Try Again Today

I-J Special Report

SANTA ANA — Center fielder Mike McCarthy put on a power display with a pair of home runs, but it wasn't enough as Marinwood-Lucas Valley lost to Lennox of Los Angeles, 14-4 last night in the Senior Little League western regional playoffs.

Each team has now beaten thbeother once, and they were to meet a final time this morning to decide who will represent the region in the baseball World Series starting Monday in Gary, Ind.

McCarthy blasted a solo homer in the second for Marinwood's first run and added a two-run shot in the fourth. Tom Kunst drove home Wayne Berger with a second-inning double for the other run.

Tony Costa, who won the regional opener against Portland, Ore., was named by manager Sesto Lucchi to pitch the final game. Costa also won the first and last games of the Division II tournament in Cupertino last week.

NO COMMITMENTS

Progress Reported In NFL Bargaining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Football League owners and players went back into bargaining sessions today with a federal mediator after the first few games of a full slate of pre-season contests showed fan reluctance to attend the strike-bound games. (See other NFL story, page 13.)

W.J. Usery, Jr., head of the Mediation and Conciliation Service, indicated that progress was being made in talks aimed at settling the 41-day old strike.

He declared during yesterday's 10 hours of bargaining talks that the negotiations were getting "down into a manageable area" and added "there has been some movement in some areas but nobody has committed themselves yet."

After adjourning the talks until 10 a.m. EDT today, Usery told newsmen that "things have been up and down but we had a damn fine session today."

In two exhibition games at Washington and Baltimore last night, an estimated 21,000 paid customers turned up at the two stadium that normally hold 115,000 spectatars.

Terry Bledsoe, spokesman for the owners, shrugged off the absence of fans at the two games as far as the strike situation is concerned.

"The difference is far greater than one crowd or two in this situation," he said. "We're not happy about the small crowds but we expect it's a problem that will resolved when the kids (rookies and free agents) get some experience and our veterans start coming to camp."

Veterans continue to trickle into camp, but the NFL teams are still a far cry from their usual caliber and fans continue to take advantage of the opportunity to obtain refunds for their exhibition tickets.

Additionally, the television networks are reassessing their positions in regard to televising exhibition games, seeking a reduction in the contract rate or considering turning off their cameras until the strike is settled and the veterans report to camp.

MARK SET BY GERARD IN ARCHERY

OXFORD, Ohio — Thirteen-year-old Mike Gerard of San Rafael has shattered the record for total scoring in the U.S. National Outdoor Target archery championships at Miami University. The competition ended yesterday.

Gerard, who three weeks ago won the young adults limited division at the U.S. Field Archery meet in Golden, Colo., won in nine categories here to take the junior championship with a total of 3,080 points. The previous record was 2,840, set last year.

Gerard won the 900 signle round, 900 double round, 50 yards and 40 yards competition, all U.S. events. He also took international events at 25, 35, 45 and 55 meters, and had the highest total score in them.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Brock Is Ahead Of Wills' Pace

THE TIPOFF:

There could be fireworks if some of the inducements used by NFL clubs to get vets to cross picket lines become public.

Q. How does Lou Brock's rate of stealing bases compare to previous seasons? Also, is it anywhere close to Maury Wills' pace in 1962, the year he stole 104 bases? — Steve Will, Harvard, Neb.

At the All-Star break, with the season little more than half over, Lou was already approaching his all-time best season total of 74 (set in 1966, when he was a callow 27-year-old). And he has been running consistently ahead of Wills, except you have to remember Maury pilfered 48 sacks in his last 55 games. Irv Kaze, the new National League facts dispenser, reminds us that Brock is a fast finisher, too.

Q. What airline do the Oakland Athletics fly? How often do the players' wives accompany them? Who is Bert (Campy) Campaneris roommate? — Audrey Togerson, Newark, Calif.

The A's vary their flight accommodations, according to the city they're visiting. Their wives are seldom along, except on special occasions such as a World Series. Campaneris, the veteran Athletic with the greatest seniority, rooms alone. Incidentally, the Bert in his name is short for Dagoberto.

Q. Could you tell me what distance runner Steve Prefontaine is doing? Does he plan to compete in the '76 Summer Games in Montreal? — Kaye Harris, Lenoir City, Tenn.

Prefontaine is competing this summer on the European track circuit and lost recently to the great Emiel Puttemans of Belgium. Steve, noramlly a gregarious soul, has been mum on his availability for the Olympics — the pro track people have been after him pretty heavy to run for money before '76.

Q. For the last 13 years I have coached basketball at the amateur and semi-professional level. Where might I go or whom should I see to acquire a license for a basketball school? — Earl White, San Jose, Calif.

No license required, according to Bob Feerick, the former general manager of the Golden State Warriors, who runs his own school in California's High Sierra. You just go out and get a place and announce you have a school.

Q. Can you tell me if there is Olympic or other international weight-lifting competition in the bench press? If so, what is the current record held in the 150-pound class? — Tom Geier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

There is no Olympic competition in that event. Olympics are restricted to two-hand snatch and two-hand clean and jerk. But there will be a World Power Meet in York, Pa., this November in which there will be bench press competition along with the squat and the deadlift. The American record in the 148-pound class is 362½ pounds, held by William Thurber of Lawndale, Calif.

Q. Whatever happened to my childhood idol Bob Hoffman, who coached the Olympic weightlifting team in the '30s and '40s? How old is he and is he still lifting weights? Even though he was a first-class egotist, he was a real inspiration to me. — John Nicolini, Oakland, Calif.

Bob Hoffman, going on 76 years young, still trains regularly and maintains a 52-inch chest and 35-inch waist. He's just back from the Pan-Am weightlifting games in Mexico City, where he helped coach our weightlifting team. And of course he still makes bar bells in York, Pa., though he no longer breaks chains with his massive chest.

PARTING SHOT:

Fred Williamson has a glittering off-field personality, but I just don't see the chemistry between him and Howard Cosell working out right. The egos are too great.

"Good control. He put the ball where he wanted. Pitched everybody outside. He keeps the ball away from everybody, so nobody gets a decent out."

The Giants, more than 20 games off the pace in the National League West, benefited from bases-empty homers off the bats of Gary Matthews and Dave Kingman.

Matthews' blast off Steve Stone in the fourth inning furnished the only margin Barr needed. Stone was lifted in the fifth when a double by third baseman Bruce Miller drove in another run.

Burt Hooton finished the fifth but not before serving up the home run pitch to Kingman.

Jim Todd and Dave LaRoche held the Giants scoreless for the rest of the game, but the Cubs remained feeble at the plate.

Old Timers Have Day In Baseball

Unsure Northrup Leads Win

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Jim Northrup, who had severe doubts about going to his new team, wasted no time in making friends.

The 35-year-old outfielder, acquired by Montreal two days ago from the Detroit Tigers, for whom he had played nine years, at first balked about going to the Expos. But after talking it over with his family, he decided to join them and arrived at Houston in time for last night's game.

As far as Montreal was concerned, Northrup didn't arrive a moment too soon. "The Grey Fox," as he was known in Detroit, delivered a solo homer to tie the score in the seventh inning then singled and scored the go-ahead run in the ninth to lead the Expos to a 4-3 victory over the Astros.

"I was told (of the trade) in the locker room and I hadn't even had time to talk with my wife. I wasn't sure she wanted to go to Canada and I didn't want to spend six weeks away from home."

WELL, UMP? — Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa and Braves' runner Mike Lum looked to the umpire for a call on a pickoff play at second base last night in Philadelphia. Lum was safe.

(UPI Telephoto)

Northrup said if his family had vetoed the move to Montreal, he would not have reported. But when he approached them about it, he said they were enthusiastic. The family decided they would catch Jim at all the Montreal home games.

"It is like a breath of fresh air to get away from Detroit," added Northrup. "They (the Detroit fans) were getting on me pretty hard and it's probably best that I got out of there."

In other NL games, St. Louis defeated Los Angeles 5-3, New York topped Cincinnati 4-1, Pittsburgh whipped San Diego 7-3, Atlanta nipped Philadelphia 3-2 in 11 innings and San Francisco blanked Chicago 3-0.

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 3

Ted Simmons celebrated his 25th birthday by hitting a two-out grand slam homer in the sixth inning which enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Dodgers in a battle of division leaders.

Mets 4, Reds 1

Don Hahn's three-run homer and combined four-hit pitching of Bob Apodaca and Tug McGraw helped the Mets defeat the Reds and prevented second place Cincinnati from gaining on Los Angeles in the NL West.

Pirates 7, Padres 3

A pair of errors by shortstop Enzo Hernandez allowed the Pittsburgh to score three runs in the first inning and the Pirates went on from there behind the eight-hit pitching of Jim Rooker to notch their fifth consecutive triumph and 19th in their last 27 games.

Braves 3, Phillies 2

Ralph Garr doubled and scored the winning run on Darrell Evans' sacrifice fly in the 11th inning to give the Braves a victory over the Phillies.

Cepeda Stars For Royals

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Gaylord Perry says he's feeling "great."

Orlando Cepeda says he doesn't "feel real good yet."

But you'd think it was just the opposite the way they're going now.

Perry, who hasn't won a game since July 3 when he won his 15th straight, suffered his sixth straight loss last night when the Indians lost to the Chicago White Sox 5-3.

Cepeda, back in the majors for just five games after being released by Boston in spring training, drove in five runs to pace the Kansas City Royals to a 13-3 rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I felt great tonight," Perry said after he took a 2-0 lead into the sixth when he was tagged for four runs including back-to-back homers by Pat Kelly and Jorge Orta. He also gave up a homer to Dick Allen in the eighth inning.

Cepeda, who's 7-for-23 with 10 RBIs in five games, joined the Royals last Tuesday and is being paid for just the last two months of the year.

"I've been lucky," he said, "I don't feel real good yet. I hadn't played in 10 days before I started here."

Cepeda drove in his five runs with a pair of doubles and Amos Otis added a three-run triple to the Royals' attack.

In the other games, Minnesota downed Baltimore 6-2, Texas beat Detroit 4-3 in 14 innings, Boston downed Oakland 6-2 and California downed New York 7-1.

Twins 6, Orioles 2

Steve Brye doubled in the first and second innings to highlight a pair of two-run rallies as Minnesota downed Baltimore.

Rangers 4, Tigers 3

Angles 7, Yanks 1

Bobby Valentine knocked in three runs with a pair of singles and Frank Tanana won his first game as a starter since May 25 as California downed New York.

A.L. President On Spot

Combined AP & UPI

OAKLAND — A group of Oakland A's fans, under threat of possible perjury charges, put American League President Lee McPhail on the spot today. But it could wind up being a meaningless exercise.

The group, calling itself A's Fans for Local Ownership, wants McPhail to disclose what he knows about moving an existing A.L. franchise to Seattle.

McPhail was quoted in a Seattle Times story written by Hy Zimmerman as saying he intended to move an "existing team" to Seattle. But McPhail refused to identify the team he had in mind. In their letter to McPhail, the Oakland fans demanded that McPhail end the secrecy as to which A.L. team he has in mind for Seattle. Reportedly, the three teams in question are the A's, Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles.

The letter suggests that as taxpayers the fans could bring a lawsuit if the American League has intentions of moving the A's from Oakland. The group also asked McPhail to issue a statement, under penalty of perjury, that the A's are not the 'existing team' (you) referred to in (your) Seattle news conference and that the American League will not, under any condition, permit the A's to be moved from Oakland."

S.F. TENNIS TITLE FOR FERNBACHER

SAN FRANCISCO — Beth Fernbacher came from behind convincingly yesterday to defeat Allison Applegarth of San Francisco and win the Girls 18 final of the San Francisco junior tennis championships at Golden Gate Park.

Eugene Lachelt of San Anselmo dropped a three-set final to Eric Lee of San Francisco in Boys 18. Lachelt had defeated top-seeded Doug Carlisle in the semi-finals, 6-2, 6-3 but lost to Lee, 7-6 (5-2), 4-6, 6-4.

For Miss Fernbacher, the top seed in Girls 18, the day started badly. She dropped the first set to Miss Applegarth, 2-6. But the Marin girl bounced back and dominated the rest of the match, winning 6-0, 6-1.

Magic Number Reduced To 2

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The Golden Gaters cut their magic number for a World Team Tennis playoff berth to two last night by defeating the Chicago Aces 30-21.

The Gater's Leslie Hunt beat Sue Strapp 6-2 for the first time this season and teammate Dick Bhernstedt downed Butch Bucholtz 7-6 with the tiebreaker going 5-4.

Then Bohrnstedt and Frew McMillan downed Kim Warwick and Graham Stillwell 6-2 and Hunt teamed with Ilana Kloss for a 7-5 win over Miss Stapp and Janet Young.

333 Teams Play

Attendance Figures Watched

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

National Football League owners will be keeping their eyes on the attendance figures tonight as the strike-plaugued league goes through its second week of pre-season play and if last night is any indication, they'll be seeing lots of empty seats.

The NFL, which lost anywhere from $2 to $4 million in tickets last week (depending on who you believe) could be in for a worse beating this week. Only 14,786 fans were on hand to watch the Houston Oilers crush the Redskins 48-3 in Washington's 54,000 seat Robert F. Kennedy Stadium and only 6,792 showed up in the 60,000- seat Municipal Stadium in Baltimore to watch the Detroit Lions down the Colts 6-3.

Seven more games are scheduled today, one tomorrow night and three Monday night and by all indications, fans are taking advantage of the league's offer to refund tickets for the duration of the NFL Players Association Strike.

The New York Giants are at New England tomorrow night and Monday night, Buffalo is at Kansas City, San Francisco at Cleveland and Chicago at Pittsburgh.

From random figures available, about 30,000 are expected in the 70,000-seat University of California Memorial Stadium for the Oakland-Atlanta game and about 25,000 were expected to watch Philadelphia-Cincinnati at the 56,000-seat Riverfront Stadium despite the return of linebacker Bill Bergey in an Eagle uniform.

Bergey was traded from Cincinnati this summer when he signed a World Football League contract but then had it torn up when he signed a fiveyear contract with the Eagles.

In the games last night, James Foote threw two TD passes and running back Steve Coleman threw another as the Oilers manhandled Washington. David Wooley ran three yards for a TD with six minutes left to lead Detroit over Baltimore.

FOR AMERICA'S CUP RACE

Challengers Getting Better

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The improved performance of potential challengers is causing more concern each day for U.S. boats in the America's Cup race,

Experts say the performance of Southern Cross, the primary Australian entry, and France, the only European candidate, made the skippers of such boats as Intrepid, Courgeous and Mariner.

In particular, the Americans are concerned about the fact that foreign craft appear to be doing particularly well on the downwind courses.

In developments yesterday, Jack Shaw, a sailor aboard the Southern Cross, injured his head when struck by a new mainsill. The wound required eight stitches and he will be out about three days.

Jack Summers, also of the Southen Cross, is recuperating from broken ribs.

But Bruno Bich, managing the French syndicate, remains critical of the Australians who have charged the French with abusing their course regulations.

"They came at us with a motorboat and we came here to race sailboats.

Aug. 20 Playoff Opener For Gaters

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The Golden Gaters announced yesterday that they would play their first-round World Team Tennis playoff game Aug. 20 at the Oakland Coliseum Arena.

A spokesman said the Denver Racquets or the Minnesota Buckskins would oppose the Bay Area entry in the match.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

pected resignation in his scheduled television address, two gloomy economic reports jolted investors and fueled concern over inflation.

The Labor Department's announcement that wholesale prices had climbed at a 44.4 per cent annual rate in July accounted for some of Thursday's market weakness. After the close, the Federal Reserve disclosed that business borrowing at 12 major New York City banks rose $73 million in the week ended Wednesday, raising the prospect of still higher interest rates and setting the tone for Friday's continued market slide.

But one economic verdict this week indicated inflationary pressure may be leveling off. The Fed revealed consumer installment credit rose by $1.09 billion in June, down sharply from $1.26 billion in May.

Now that impeachment has been removed from the "three I's"-Wall Street jargon for the inflation, interest rates and impeachment which have dogged the market for the past ten months — investors should tailor their moves to resolution of purely economic problems.

The Dow Jones industrial average added 24.72, closing the week at 777.30. The blue chip indicator rose 23.78 points in its best gain of the week Wednesday on news Nixon's GOP supporters in Congress had mutinied and the President's resignation was imminent.

The market plunged 21.16 points before closing early on Nov. 22, 1963 when President Kennedy was assassinated and soared 20.58 points the day after President Johnson announced he would not seek another term in office.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up 2.27 to 80.86. Of the 1,961 issues traded, there were 1,337 gainers, 416 losers.

The most active issue was Clorox Co., with 1,117,800 shares changing hands. It closed up 1 at 9 ½. Polaroid was second, down 1 ½ to 26 ¾ on 687,400 shares.

Marcor Inc. was third, ahead 3 ¾ to 27 ½ on 647,000 shares. Mobil Oil reached agreement to make a cash tender offer for Marcor at $35 per common share and $70 for each share of the company's Series "A" preferred stock. Mobil lost ¾.

The biggest mover was Revco, down 10 ⅞ to 13 ½. The discount drug chain dropped dramatically following a preliminary earnings report that failed to meet earlier predictions.

Williams Companies gained 5 ¾ to 62 ⅝ after reporting its second quarter net jumped to $2.17 per share from $1.54 a year ago.

The motors were stronger with G.M. picking up 2 ¾, American Motors 1 ½, and White Motors 1 ½. Sales of U.S. automakers fell 17.8 per cent in July from a year ago, but the annual sales rate for the month was the best so far this year. In addition, American Motors announced its net earnings climbed 12.4 per cent to $19 million in the April-June period over the same period last year.

The blue chips moved higher. Leading the way, Eastman Kodak picked up 4, United Aircraft 3, and International Paper 2 ½.

The glamors also saw some gains. IBM rose 9 ½, Digital Equipment 3 ¾, and McDonald's 2 ⅝. On the losing side, however, Texas Instruments dropped 4 ⅝ and Polaroid 1 ½.

Gold mining issues turned lower. Campbell Red Lake fell 1 ⅞, Dome Mines 1 ⅝, and ASA Ltd. 7/8.

Money Woes Plaguing Game Dept.

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Because of increased cost of wildlife and ecology programs, the state Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems, a department official testified today.

"For several years we have been struggling with finances and have sought ways to maintain our diverse fish and wild life programs," said E. C. Fullerton, deputy director of the department, "while at the same time meeting the increased demands for environmental programs."

Fullerton testified before the Assembly Ways and Means subcommittee on resources. The subcommittee will hold at least one more hearing on the funding of the Fish and Game Department.

The department's $25.7 million budget is primarily funded through sports license fees.

Fullerton supported a measure (SB1650) by Sen. Dennies E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, which would allow a $5 million increase, in fishing and hunting licenses.

"The Department of Fish and Game is facing severe financial problems," he said. "Hopefully the immediate fiscal crisis will be relieved upon the passage and signing of the license increase bill."

He said the increase in license fees will allow the department only "to continue programs at existing levels for a limited time only."

"Recognizing there are those who will accuse the department of following the old bureaucratic approach to solving all problems by seeking additional funds," he said, "we honestly and sincerely do not have other reasonable alternatives to present."

He said the department needs approximately $8 million more to operate at the same level.

He said all ot the department's present $2 million budget for environmental services work is spent in response to projects and problems not caused by the fish and game license buyer."

But said it is not fair to expect the hunter and fisherman to pick up the cost of programs and projects that are not directly beneficial to him.

Job Seekers Are Warned About Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Secretary of Labor has written "Dear Editor" letters to call to their attention to the price of a hamburger in Alaska.

The thrust of his memorandum was that job seekers should be encouraged to avoid Alaska.

"A good many workers are being lured to Alaska by stories of high paying jobs on the oil pipeline, only to find no work and great hardship when they get there," according to the secretary, Peter Brennan.

"No one seeking work should go to Alaska without a job commitment in writing from an employer before leaving home," he said.

"Alaska is a grand and beautiful state, but it is no place to be a stranger and stranded without a job," he said. "A hamburger, for instance, cost $2 or more and a milkshake about $1.60.

"Whatever you can do through your paper to get this information to the workers in your community who may be considering seeking jobs in Alaska will be of great service in preventing hardships for them and additional problems for the state of Alaska," he concluded.

Today is Saturday, Aug. 10, the 222nd day of 1974 with 143 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

Herbert Hoover, 31st president of the United States, was born Aug. 10, 1874.

On this day in history:

In 1776, a committee of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson suggested the United States adopt "E Pluribus Unum" as the motto of its Great Seal.

In 1833, Chicago was incorporated as a village with a population of 200.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill met in Quebec for the sixth conference of World War II.

In 1965, a Titan missile site explosion in Searcy, Ark., killed 53 persons.

A thought for the day: President Herbert Hoover said, "Older men declare war. But it is youth that must fight and die . . ."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Leading Right Suit May Not Be Enough For Staging A Defeat

In some bridge hands it may be fairly easy to pick the right suit for a lead or a switch. It may also be necessary to pick the right card in that suit.

Opening lead — ♡ J

West opens the jack of hearts, and dummy's queen wins the first trick. A club is returned from dummy, and East takes the king.

East must now think before he leads. A heart return is pretty clearly hopeless. Since South's jump to two notrump shows strength in each of the unbid suits, South is marked with the ace of hearts.

It is no great feat for East to see that a switch to spades is in order. Still, it's an important first step; many players would automatically return a heart and give up all hope of defeating the contract.

If East returns the three of spades, South plays low. West wins with the queen of spades but is unable to continue the attack. South has time to develop the clubs.

East can defeat the contract by switching to the ten of spades. If South plays low, East holds the trick and leads another spade. If South plays the jack, West wins with the queen of spades and returns the king to capture dummy's nine and force out the ace at the same time. Either way, the defenders get three spades and two clubs, defeating the contract.

How does East know that South has A-J-x of spades? He doesn't. If South has some other holding, the lead of the ten costs nothing; and if South has A-J-x, the lead of the ten is vital.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:

♠- A J 2
♥- A 8 5
♦- K J 9 5
♣- 9 8 6

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds.

It's dangerous to jump to two no-trump with one of the unbid suits wide open. Show a suit, such as it is, and await developments. If partner rebids in no-trump, you will raise to game; otherwise, you may have to show the heart support and settle for a game in hearts.

The Martyr Complex Of Richard Nixon

AS THIS IS written, the Nixon resignation seems only hours, perhaps only minutes away.

Its imminence impels one to recall personal contacts with Nixon over the years.

It must have been a quarter of a century since Richard M. Nixon paid his first political visit to Marin. At the time he was a young congressman whose only claim to note was that he won his seat by beating an "unbeatable" liberal Democrat in a Democratic era when Republicans couldn't lick stamps.

He came to Marin on a ground-laying trip with his eye already on a U.S. Senate seat.

Nixon met for dinner with a bare handful of Marinites at the old Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse. He spoke briefly but effectively after dinner, outlining what Republicans must do to recapture voter support. He was lucid in stating the problems and said, in effect, that Republicans must suggest solutions which would be more attractive that those which Democratic officeholders were trying.

It all made sense.

Trouble was, when Nixon ran for the Senate, his campaign speeches contained no specific recommended solutions to the problems of the time.

DURING THAT first, successful campaign for the U.S. Senate, Nixon surprised many by turning up with his wife and station wagon outside the gate to the old Northwestern Pacific Railroad yard at Tiburon, during the lunch hour. He was photographed, of course, chatting amiably with railroad yard workers.

It was an impressive picture. It helped relate Nixon to the working man, in the voters' eyes.

That may be about as close to the working man as Nixon ever got.

As that first Senate campaign drew to a close, Nixon made a curious, private remark which this writer has often had occasion to recall.

"We," he said, apparently referring to himself and to his campaign, "are going to surprise a lot of people by polling a lot of votes in areas which are supposed to be solidly Democratic."

He referred to the opposition as "they" and attributed to "them" the objective of somehow plotting to ruin "us."

Some have suggested that Nixon has long had a kind of persecution complex and perhaps that is why he was so intent on covering up Watergate, so "they" could not use it to destroy "us."

DURING NIXON'S final term as vice president, when he had his eye on the White House as Eisenhower's immediate successor, he addressed an overflow crowd at a meeting of the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

He adopted the attitude of the local boy who has made good in the distant big city and longs to fraternize once again with the old gang just like in the old days.

He was wishing, he said, that he could drop into the newspaper offices of California and talk personally and candidly with each editor and/or publisher, just like in the old days.

Trouble was, this writer couldn't find anybody in the audience with whom Nixon ever dropped in for a personal, candid talk — ever.

In a small, private reception before the massive public reception for all of California's assembled newspaper publishers, Nixon confessed privately that such occasions required great effort for him; that he really didn't meet people easily.

But he went on projecting for the public an entirely different image.

WHEN NIXON RAN for governor of California, after his defeat for the presidency by John F. Kennedy, the California Press Association decided to invite both the challenger, Nixon, and the governor, Pat Brown, to speak at the association's annual meeting.

The editor assigned to extend the invitation to Brown — not a particularly close friend or strong supporter of Brown's — simply picked up the phone, dialed the governor's office in Sacramento, stated his name and his business, and shortly found himself talking to Governor Brown personally.

Pat Brown may not be exactly an intellectual giant, but he isn't stupid. If an invitation to address a state press association arrived in an election year, he wanted to give it his immediate, personal attention.

What a contrast with the Nixon invitation! It was to be extended personally by the president of the California Press Association — a former Orange County newsman who had known Nixon personally 'way back when.

That pour soul telephoned the Nixon headquarters repeatedly, sent letters, talked to supposed members of the Nixon palace guard —all without a direct response from Nixon, ever.

Nixon was as isolated in his own campaign headquarters in the California gubernatorial race as he was later to become in the White House.

NOW, AS THIS is written Thursday morning before leaving town on a short business trip, shadows of the tragedy grow longer and darker. The climax approaches. The man who had such great opportunities in his lifetime has finally blown it all.

He unquestionably will say to himself in sincerest belief, "They finally got us."

And he probably will live out his life firmly convinced that he is a martyr, finally "got" by "them."

Comes The Revolution!

We read recently that if America's farmland were to be divided equally among its populace, it would provide about 25 acres and a fifth of a cow per family.

If this weird dream were to come true, we hope we get 25 acres in Marin or Sonoma and not some desolate, dryland place on the Nevada-Utah border. We'd even give up our share of the communal cow for such a solution.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the San Rafael City Council for its decision to place proposed purchase of the Dollar Estate on the November ballot.

BRICKBATS to Marin County probation and social workers and their union, Local 535 of Service Employees International Union, for demanding "free ride" inclusion in an enriched retirement plan for which other county employees must pay extra.

BOUQUETS to members of the Marin County Central Investigative Unit — police officers who do additional duty, without payment, in an effort to curb burglary in the county.

Candidate Hails Warm Springs Dam 'Demise'

The heart of every true conservationist/economist must be leaping with joy at the rapid and timely demise of the Warm Springs Dam.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas placed an injunction on the dam pending further studies, Congress has cut allocations for the dam by many millions, and the Sonoma Task Force has forced the issue onto its November ballot. That's all good news!

The work still lies ahead however, and we in Marin must do our share to see the dam defeated. The Army Corps of Engineers designed a project of overkill proportions with an open price tag which will affect Marin. If the dam is built, Sonoma will have water for Marin beyond our wildest growth needs, to say nothing of what it will do to Sonoma and northern counties. The dam has not been declared earthquake safe, nor has the water been found to be free of possibly damaging pollutants. All this for an uncalculated sum from start to finish!

Torture Of Geese In France Described

This letter is to alert readers to the torturous methods by which geese and ducks in France are forcefed to produce the abnormal liver used in pate de foie gras, and to urge they stop buying it. The cruel treatment of these highly intelligent creatures is outrageous.

An article in the December, 1973, issue of the Ark (English) by a woman living in France states: "Now, modern factory farming methods are used, and in order to increase production and save labour, hand feeding has been replaced by machinery. The unfortunate bird is pressed into a small metal cage and immobilized by a steel collar. A funnel is then thrust into its throat down which the machine pours the feed, the only manual work needed being to massage its passage down the gullet. The aim of this barbaric procedure is to enlarge the liver to 10 times its normal size, causing a state of hypertrophy and consequent pain."

The French paper Le Sud-Ouest published a photograph of a goose imprisoned in this device, its head pulled upward and beak forced wide, subtitled, "The tears falling from this goose's eye are of blood." A vet told me this is due to intense pressure on the delicate tissues of the throat and eye area.

Pate is made chiefly of pork liver; goose or duck livers only add a taste thrill for the gastronome. Must such intense suffering provide this unnecessary fillip for jaded taste buds?

I have asked Congressman John Burton to introduce a bill to prohibit the import of any pate containing goose or duck liver. Readers are urged to write him at 1610 Longworth Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20515, expressing their support. Let us put an end to the daily torture of these poor defenseless birds.

No Satisfaction In Nixon's Disclosure

I have never made any secret of my dislike for Nixon, which goes back over 25 years, for he has been a political gut puncher for at least that long.

But this business today that puts final, indisputable confirmation on the rightness of this feeling brings no feeling of vindication or victory. Only disgust and sickness.

What The Well-Dressed Tourist Is Wearing In Washington

WASHINGTON — The new summer fashions for American tourists visiting Washington have recently been released, and from all indications the clothes are going to be more formal than in previous years.

The source of this information was Sophie Glutz, the famous Washington tourist fashion expert, who said, "It appears now that women will be wearing more stretch pants than Bermuda shorts when visiting the public monuments."

"Does this mean that women tourists visiting this town will no longer be wearing blue jeans and sweat shirts?"

"Oh, I wouldn't rule that out completely. In the daytime you may find a certain number of women in blue jeans and sweatshirts, as well as shorts, but in the evening they will probably change into slacks, stretch pants and blouses."

"IS IT TRUE that the short shorts are out?"

"They are after 4 o'clock. Of course, many tourists will still visit the White House and the Lincoln Memorial in short shorts, but we're recommending longer shorts for the Senate and House of Representatives."

"I think that's wise," I said. "What about skirts?"

"Skirts are awfully dressy for sightseeing in Washington, but some women will wear them with halters and bare midriffs and open-toed sandals."

"What about dresses and suits for women?"

"Heaven forbid! A woman tourist wouldn't be seen dead in a dress or suit. All the other tourists would laugh at her."

"WHAT ABOUT stlyles?"

"Keeping your hair in curlers while sightseeing still seems to be the rage. The large colored plastic curlers which stick out all over your head are coming back in again."

"How about face cream?"

"It's optional. Many women tourists prefer it to suntan oil as suntan oil doesn't show up as well."

"I suppose socks and stockings are out?"

"They have been for some time now, unless you're going to a state dinner at the White House."

"What's new in colors?"

"In shorts, we're recommending plaids for women who weigh more than 150 pounds. They look so much better from the rear. Also, stripes are back in, at least as far as sweat shirts are concerned. The simple black toreador pants of a few years ago are definitely out."

"WHAT ABOUT MEN'S tourist fashions?"

"There hasn't been too much change in men's fashions this year. They'll still wear Army fatigues, bright-colored sports shirts, sneakers and baseball caps."

"And children?"

"We're not laying down any hard and fast rules on what children should wear in Washington. The National Gallery of Art has asked that children not wear bathing suits when visiting it, but you have to remember that the gallery is a very stuffy institution."

"I'm delighted to see how the standards in clothes have gone up in the nation's capital this year," I said.

"Yes, it's amazing how clothes-conscious Americans are when they visit Washington these days. It's as though they know that they're on display, and of course a lot of them wanted to look their best for the impeachment hearings."

Economists may argue whether 6 or 7 per cent unemployment is "acceptable," but anyone on the casualty list can testify that 100 per cent is not.

No Holiday Mood In Britain With Fast-Increasing Inflation

LONDON — The British Parliament has adjourned for the usual summer recess, but in a mood of far more than usual anxiety about what will happen to the country and its political parties before it returns.

As they head for trout streams, grouse moors, or constituencies for some early electioneering, all members of Parliament know that their country's inflation rate is running at 16 per cent and still rising.

The Treasury frankly expects it to hit 20 by the end of the year. The balance of payments is running heavily against British goods. Something around $5 billion will be borrowed this year to cover the imbalance in trade.

ONE BRIGHT SPOT is that British credit still seems to be good in spite of the inflation rate. London has just accepted a $1.2-billion loan from Iran, which was volunteered, not requested.

Another $2.5 billion is available in Eurodollars. Much more is available from the American Federal Reserve and through International Monetary Fund drawing rights.

Britain's line of credit is by no means exhausted.

THE OTHER SIDE of that coin, though, is that to borrow at a rate of some $5 billion a year means paying a great deal of interest. At some point there is a limit to the amount of debt that can be carried and serviced. True, that limit is not yet reached and the great hope here is that North Sea oil will begin to flow before the credit runs out.

But when the oil does flow, there will be the debt left over from the lean years —and what will have happened in the meantime to Britain's industrial production?

Railway engineers were granted pay raises a few days ago that will bring their take-home pay up by as much as 54 per cent. Shell refinery workers recently had a raise of 25 per cent. Building construction workers are demanding as high as a 100 per cent raise. The average raise for the year is expected to run somewhere around 25 to 30 per cent.

If wages rise that fast what will happen to the price of British goods on world markets?

DOUBTS ARISING out of these economic facts are intensifying political emotions. It is a fact that the extreme radicals of both right and left are in a mood of bitterness worse than this country has known since the general strike of 1927. It has reached the point where moderate people are beginning to worry seriously over the prospects for survival of parliamentary rule.

With emotions rising on the political fringes, and the outlook for the economy uncertain, there is no certainty about political developments.

The Labor government is planning on an early October election. The final decision must be made fairly soon. But the left and right factions of the party are badly split at the moment, and there is serious danger of more defections from the right wing of the party that could prove disastrous.

Does Prime Minister Harold Wilson push ahead with an October election or delay at the risk of being forced into a winter election with economic conditions worse than now?

This is not a happy prospect for the politicians who are off on their holidays in less than a holiday mood.

Supreme Court Decision Won't End Fight Over School Busing

WASHINGTON — In advance of the Supreme Court decision on the tapes, President Nixon's counsel talked about a "definitive decision," presumably a unanimous court, that would determine his response. This phrase is foremost in the thought of civil rights leaders who regard the 5-to-4 decision against busing as a long way from definitive.

Despite the many laments for the end of busing, well watered in some instances by crocodile tears, the fight is to go on. To accept it as the inevitable outcome means that the pattern of segregation will stand with only the most minor modifications.

To say that the answer is to change housing patterns is self-deception. That is happening in only a peripheral way, and with the present hurdle of high interest rates and a precipitous drop in the construction industry it will be even more marginal.

In the long run this may be the answer, but as John Maynard Keynes remarked in another context, in the long run we shall all be dead.

SUPREME COURT majorities change and in the next three years or so the switch could be in favor of busing. That has happened before in the court's history.

Steadfast civil righters like Joseph Rauh and the leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, examining the majority opinion of Chief Justice Warren Burger ruling out busing across school district lines, see a way the court could reverse itself.

It is essential, Burger wrote, that racially discriminatory acts of the state or of local school districts or a single district were the cause of interdistrict segregation.

"In such circumstances an interdistrict remedy would be appropriate to eliminate the interdistrict segregation directly caused by the constitutional violation."

Similar language is in Justice Potter Stewart's concurring opinion. If it could be shown that state officials had contributed to the separation of the races by drawing or redrawing school district lines, then a decree calling for cross-district busing might be appropriate. While the majority did not find this was true in the Detroit case, it might be shown to exist elsewhere.

THAT IS WHY, in the optimistic view, the fight on busing is far from over. A new case citing the language of the majority on busing could bring a favorable decision or, more remotely, a new court could overturn the 5-to-4 verdict.

No one can argue that busing is an ideal remedy. It is often disruptive, creating hostility and getting in the way of the educational process. But it is the only remedy with a chance under present circumstances of helping give the minority an equal stance at the starting tape.

The black separatists insist there is only one answer and that is to provide black schools with funds equal or better than those for white schools. That will enable the black schools to catch up. Given inflation and the economy pinch in governments across the board, this will not happen in the foreseeable future.

To cry the end is to indulge in the easy despair of Doomsville. It is a dangerous luxury. The past 20 years have seen important changes in the status of the blacks. But these changes have occurred almost entirely at the top, among the small minority achieving middle class status.

Within the mass, the change in status is negligible. One measure is the 20 to 25 per cent unemployment rate among young blacks as against the overall rate just released of 5.3 per cent. As the source of a potential explosion, this cannot be tolerated for long.

JUSTICE THURGOOD MARSHALL may have been too pessimistic when he said in his dissenting opinion that the decision was a giant step backward after 20 years of small, often difficult, steps toward integrating the races.

But it would be hard to disagree with Marshall that black children in Detroit will "receive the same separate and inherently unequal education in the future as they have been unconstitutionally afforded in the past." That, too, cannot be tolerated for long.

TONIC FOR A WEARY NATION

Ford's Reputation For Honesty

SKI BUFF — A family ski vacation to Vail, Colo., has been an annual thing for the Ford family. President Gerald R. Ford, described as "a good recreational skier," is shown on Vail Mountain last winter with instructor Dennis Hoeger (right).

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To a nation weary and disillusioned from the Watergate ordeal, perhaps the strongest tonic that Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr. can offer the American people is his unquestioned reputation for old-fashioned, Midwestern honesty.

His great ambition, never realized, was to become speaker of the House of Representatives where he served for a quarter century, the last nine years as a hard-working, popular Republican leader.

When President Nixon tapped him last October to succeed the disgraced Spiro T. Agnew, Ford swallowed his reluctance out of loyalty to his party and to Nixon, and won overwhelming approval of the House and Senate to be the nation's 40th vice president.

"I'm not at all interested in the vice presidency," he said then. "I love the House of Representatives, despite the long, irregular hours.

"Sometimes, though, when it's late and I'm tired and hungry, on that long drive home to Alexandria, as I go past 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, I do seem to hear a little voice saying: 'If you lived here, you'd be home now.'"

But Ford resisted the lure of that little voice, and insisted he never aspired to the White House Oval Office.

Now, at age 61, he has replaced Richard Nixon to become the 38th president.

Until Nixon finally made the fatal, climatic admission that he took part in the Watergate cover-up almost from the beginning, Ford staunchly defended Nixon and voiced confidence in the President's innocence of any wrongdoing.

At the same time, walking a delicate political tightwire, Ford staked out a position of independence by urging Nixon to cooperate fully with court and congressional demands for secret Watergate tapes.

From his past record in the House, Ford could be expected to pursue the general outlines of Nixon's foreign and conservative domestic policies. But Ford, observed one adviser, "is not a statesman —he's a politician."

Thus, given his past history of flexibility and compromise on legislative issues, some observers believe Ford will be an unknown quantity until he can put his own stamp on the presidency, much in the manner of Harry S. Truman, the little-known man from Missouri who succeeded Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The men Ford chooses to be his closest advisers and Cabinet members might provide the best clue to the direction he will take.

As Watergate closed in on Nixon, it was widely reported that Ford might name former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York or former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson as his vice president. Both are regarded ideological liberals compared to Ford.

Some observers believed that former Defense Secretary and White House counselor Melvin R. Laird and former Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., might also find a high position in a Ford administration.

A close political associate now in private life told UPI he believed Ford as President would be more liberal than during his years as a congressman, but would remain a fiscal conservative, and would rely more on his Cabinet than Nixon.

Liberals generally have critized Ford for opposing civil rights, housing, education and other social legislation in the House, and for his solid support of Johnson and Nixon administration policies in Vietnam.

Conservatives applaud his record of supporting a strong military defense, and his fights against costly Democratic spending programs have won him friends in the business community.

Ford's personal style has been characterized as dull, humorless and unimaginative. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he found Ford "something of a plodder, not brilliant, not creative, but adequate, competent and reliable."

His detractors are fond of recalling the time when President Lyndon B. Johnson tapped Ford's head and said of the former college football star, "Too bad, too bad, that's what happens when you play football too long without a helmet."

Ford shrugs off the private snickering about his intellect with the quiet, self-effacing confidence of a man whose Michigan constituents repeatedly returned him to Congress with majorities of more than 60 per cent.

"I'm a Ford, not a Lincoln," he said in his acceptance speech as vice president.

"I know they say I'm dull and have no charisma," he said later. "My only answer to that is that I'd rather be dull and sincere than have charisma and be phony."

Said one California Republican leader:

"Things might be better if Richard Nixon had made that Whittier football team. Thank God Gerald Ford made the Michigan team. He's strong and he knows it. He won't have to prove his manhood."

Ford was born in Omaha, Neb., on July 14, 1913, as Leslie King. When his parents divorced, his mother took her infant son to Grand Rapids, Mich. There she married a small business man, Gerald Rudolph Ford Sr., who adopted the boy and gave him his name.

It was not until Ford was a high school senior that he learned he had another father, by then a rancher in Wyoming. Ford was washing dishes and serving hamburgers in a Grand Rapids restaurant for $2 a week when his real father walked in and introduced himself.

"That was quite a shock," Ford said later. "I'd never thought about it. I couldn't care less. From my earliest days, I always assumed that my stepfather was my real father."

Ford was a hard worker from the start. He helped his father in the family's new paint and varnish factory, became an Eagle Scout and captain of the high school football team, and was inspired by famed courtroom lawyer Clarence Darrow to dream of a political career.

Later, he was star center for the University of Michigan's undefeated national champion football teams in 1932 and 1933, and was voted most valuable player as a senior in 1934.

Ford turned down professional offers from the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions and entered Yale Law School, where he says he was a B-minus student.

From Yale he returned to Grand Rapids to practice law briefly before serving aboard the aircraft carrier Monterey in the Pacific during World War II. Released as a lieutenant commander after four years, he went back to his home town law practice.

At the urging of Michigan's Republican Sen. Arthur H. Vandenburg, also from Grand Rapids, Ford in 1948 challenged and defeated his district's isolationist congressman, Republican Bartel Jonkman. He ran as an internationalist supporting Truman's postwar Marshall Aid plan for European recovery.

Ford, his House seat secure, quickly made a name for himself as a tireless GOP party loyalist who did his homework on the issues and never went back on his word. He still likes to say that "truth is the glue on the bond that holds government together."

In 1965, after Barry M. Goldwater's disastrous defeat had left House Republicans in shattered disarray, Ford toppled Charles A. Halleck of Indiana as House GOP leader with the help of a band of young party activists eager to give the GOP a new image.

Throughout his House leadership years under Nixon, Ford sought to strike a balance between demands of Republican congressmen, the White House and his Middle America constituents in Grand Rapids. Although steadfastly supporting Nixon policies, he parted company on a few issues, probably to underscore his frequent assertion that he was no "rubber stamp" for the White House.

One of Ford's most controversial moves came in 1970, when he led an unsuccessful fight to impeach Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas because of his connections with a private foundation and because excerpts from a Douglas book appeared in a magazine Ford claimed was pornographic.

The same year he was first elected to Congress, Ford married Elizabeth Bloomer, a slim Grand Rapids fashion coordinator. They have four children.

At the Fords' two-story brick home which he built 19 years ago in suburban Alexandria, Va., Ford keeps in trim by swimming twice a day in his heated outdoor swimming pool. A Christmas skiing vacation at his place in Vail, Colo., is a family tradition.

The Fords attend Immanuel-on-the-Hill Episcopal Church, on the grounds of Virginia Theological Seminary not far from their home.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., one of Ford's closest friends in the House, described him this way: "He is a great, open, decent individual with a tremendous amount of courage. He can pull together the forces in our economy who are worried over the danger we are in."

Another ally, former New York Sen. Charles Goodell, once said: "A Ford administration would be honest, open and believable. We could do worse and have."

Said Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking House GOP leader: "We will have a channel of communication between the White House and Congress that has never before existed."

During his confirmation hearings for vice president, House and Senate investigators dismissed as groundless an allegation by small-time lobbyist Robert Winter-Berger that he had loaned Ford $15,000 that was never repaid.

On orders from the Senate Rules Committee, the Internal Revenue Service audited Ford's tax returns for six years and found only one error. It disallowed an $871.44 deduction Ford had claimed as a business expense for clothing purchased for the 1972 GOP convention.

Ford paid the $435.77 in additional taxes without a penalty.

Attorney Jean McKee, his Democratic opponent for the House in 1972, said Ford's "image of believability" was so strong he would have to be caught smuggling heroin into the country to upset his trust among Grand Rapids voters.

"I think he's probably as clean as anyone can be," she said.

STRONG SWIMMER — Long active athletically, President Ford has made it a practice to swim for at least 15 minutes twice a day. Here he is shown taking an early morning dip in the pool at his home in Alexandria, Va.

Betty Ford Reluctantly Became The First Lady

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Before Gerald R. Ford was selected as vice president 10 months ago, he was considering retiring from Congress in 1976 at the request of his wife.

Then, after Ford replaced Spiro Agnew, his wife declared she would not want to become First Lady. "It's for a personal, selfish reason —for a few years I want Jerry to myself," she said.

Now, with her husband becoming the nation's 38th president, Elizabeth Bloomer (Betty) Ford is no longer as adamant and is prepared to put off retirement plans.

Despite the years of raising their four children and managing the family's finances while Ford was working long hours in Congress and making speeches across the country, Betty Ford acknowledges that "Of course, Jerry is the boss in this family."

When she gets a break from answering the ever-increasing mail arriving at their 20-year old brick house in Alexandria, Va., Betty Ford likes to work in her back yard garden growing flowers and vegetables.

Sports used to be a hobby, but she had to give up strenuous activity nine years ago because of pinched nerve in her neck, an injury that still causes her constant pain and one that is aggravated by constant stress.

In an effort to relieve the stress and frustrations she said were brought on by wondering whether she was doing a good job as wife and mother, Betty Ford saw a psychiatrist for two years.

A former dancer in the Martha Graham troupe and a one-time model, Mrs. Ford is still attractive at age 55, with a slim figure and shiny chestnut hair. She speaks slowly and softly, always smiling and friendly.

"The psychiatrist suggested that I shouldn't give up everything for Jerry and the children, that I also had to think about things that mattered to me."

"We're exceptionally close to one another," she says of her three sons and a daughter. During the times Ford was away from home for days at a time, it fell to Betty to make the necessary day-to-day decisions and enforce family discipline.

Although she helped Ford on the campaign trail in 13 elections, Mrs. Ford has not been as active as some political wives.

One of her faults, apparent not only to Ford but to the public on occasion, is her habit of showing up late for social events. The vice president has several times has glared her down or commented in public on her lateness. But Mrs. Ford, acknowledging her own tardiness, reminds people that Jerry Ford was late for their wedding 25 years ago.

"Jerry keeps tellig me that if he ever gets a heart attack, it won't be because of long hours or hard work but because I'm always late," she once said.

But her social grace was particularly welcomed by the Martin Luther King family last month when Mrs. Ford attended the funeral of the senior Mrs. King, who was shot to death. The government had not designated any high official to attend the funeral, so Betty Ford went, out of her own compassion for the family.

She has always been active in civic affairs, serving as a cub scout den mother, a Sunday school teacher and head of the local cancer fund drive. After Secret Service agents spent considerable time and effort last fall to make their modest suburban home more secure,

The Fords thanked their neighbors for putting up with the inconvenience the work caused.

The Ford's in 25 years of marriage have four children: Michael, 24; Jack, 22; Steven, 18; and Susan 17.

Though she said she never made a secret of it, many people were surprised to learn last fall that Betty Ford had been married before. She was divorced after four years from Grand Rapids, Mich., furniture company agent William C. Warren on grounds of extreme mental cruelty and incompatibility.

What kind of president does Betty Ford think her husband will make? "Excellent," she says, "as good as any."

And it is her conviction that a Watergate scandal could not happen under her husband because, she says, he would be too involved in the day-to-day workings of his administration not to know of wrongdoing.

NEWLYWEDS — Two big events in the life of Gerald Ford occurred in the autumn of 1948. He got married and was elected to Congress. The President is shown leaving Grace Episcopal Church on Oct. 15, 1948 with his new wife, the former Elizabeth (Betty) Bloomer.

Ford Is Getting A Big Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As President, Gerald R. Ford not only gets to move into the White House —he also gets a $137,500-a-year raise and a $50,000 expense account.

Ford's salary jumped from $49,500 to $62,500 last December when the former House Republican leader was named vice president. But as President he will make $200,000 annually.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Any individual, firm or agency who plans to build or place a structure in, on, under, or over the navigable waters of the United States must first obtain a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Such Permits are also required for any dredging, filling, or dredge disposal in navigable waters. Regulations governing the administrative procedures on permits for activities in navigable or ocean waters were published in the Federal Register on April 3, 1974 as 33 CFR 209.120.

Navigable waters are any waters which are, have been, or can be used for commercial or navigation purposes. Federal permit authority extends over the entire surface of such a water body. Thus, any work in areas presently or formerly subject to tidal action (below the plane of mean higher high water, including unfilled areas behind dikes) or below the ordinary high water mark of rivers and streams may require a Corps permit.

The Federal Corps of Engineers permit is required in addition to any State or local permits. Private ownership of land under or beside the water has no effect on the requirement. If work is done in navigable waters as described above without a permit from the Corps, civil or criminal actions (including removal) can be instituted pursuant to 33 U. S. Code Secs. 406, 407, and 1319. Any questions regarding permits for work in navigable waters may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch, San Francisco District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco 94102, telephone: (415) 556-5178 or 556-5489.

A Christian Behind Prison Walls

By THOMAS PLUMMER

(Thomas Plummer of Novato is a graduate of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry. He works as a correctional officer at San Quentin. The following article was printed in the August issue of The California Southern Baptist and was taken from an address Plummer made recently at the Prison Reform Forum in Oakland.)

I work at the California State Prison at San Quentin. For the past two-and-one-half years, I have worked as a Correctional Officer. To most people, that means I am a guard. To many people that means I wear the uniform of a semi-law enforcemetn officer, occasionally carrying a gun with my "trigger finger" ready to fire on someone, or turning keys all day, or doing whatever else the stereotype calls for in the minds of many "outsiders."

The perspective I wish to maintain in this presentation is my own, and not necessarily that of my fellow officers. It is the perspective of only one concerned Christian, a follower of Jesus Christ, behind the walls of San Quentin Prison.

Let me hasten to impress upon you the fact that there are many Christians employed at San Quentin, many of whom are wearing the uniform. They are persons who are genuinely concerned about the problems we face there and about implementing the principles of Christ to those problems.

First I want to share a few facts about life at San Quentin Prison.

Racially, the population, which numbers around 3400 at this time, is almost 50 per cent Caucasian, with the Blacks coming in a close second, followed by the Mexican-Americans. Other ethnic groups are represented, but they do not constitute a large percentage of the total population.

As a whole, life at San Quentin is regimented. That menas that most of the men incarcerated there are on tight schedules. They wake up, eat, go to work at certain times. There are many rules and regulations that govern their lives, their families, and their friends.

However, within the framework of a regimented life, there is a certain amount of freedom under "normal" conditions. Actually, the only inmates on 24-hour lockup status are those who have been segregated from the main population because they are considered menaces to either institutional security, or to the lives of others and to themselves. There is one honor block, in which inmates are allowed to stay out all day until 12:00 midnight, basically. The remainder of the population, with the exception of those authorized to remain out of their cells, must lock up in the evening.

Men are sent to San Quentin for a variety of crimes ranging in seriousness from possession of narcotics to first degree murder. The largest representative crime, however, I believe, is armed robbery.

Socio-economically, they range from the poor to the rich, with the lower classes predominating.

A large portion of San Quentin inmates name the Los Angeles and southern California area as their home. The distance from home and family is often a frustrating factor that has led many to bitterness and hostility.

As I work behind the walls, face-to-face with the inmates, on what someone might characterize as the "gut-level basis," I find my own attitutes mixed. On the one hand, I know that I would not want to have to be incarcerated for a long period of my life. As the old saying puts it, "There but for the grace of God go I." I am certain that, without a deep faith in Christ, if I were thrust into the present prison situation, having to spend much of my time in a small cell barely big enough to accommodate me, let alone a cellmate, I probably could become bitter, frustrated and feel dehumanized. If I had to experience not knowing when I were going home, or not knowing if I were going to stay alive, get a visit from my family, or receive mail from home, I would probably feel rejected, forgotten, and pessimistic.

As an officer, I experience frustration at times, especially in the face of hostility and the efforts of certain outside organizations to plan the disruption of our prisons.

As one seeks to maintain a Christ-like attitude, on the other hand, toward my work and those I work with, I find it frustrating when I fail to live up to my own expectations. Hopefully, I am treating others as Christ would, with the dignity and respect as human beings God gave to all persons. It is difficult at times to do this, especially when a particular person refuses to act or respond with dignity and self-respect. Most inmates are willing to "do their own time," that is, to mind their own business, but about 10 per cent are not willing to do "just their own time," but that of others as well. They create trouble for those who do not bend to their will. They are the ones whose trouble results in the restrictive measures everyone has to experience in response.

As a Christian correctional officer, I am often faced on the one hand with the opportunity to handle a difficult situation the best way pleasing to Christ, as I view it, and on the other hand to become harsh in a particular situation, such as when I am assigned a gunrail officer's position. There as a responsible person and as a Christian, I must seek to save lives. If I should, in the line of duty, injure someone or take the life of another human being, even if many other lives are saved, I must also be willing to accept the possible legal consequences.

As a Christian correctional officer, I see another face of San Quentin, the face of many self-help groups within the walls and of many concerned outside groups and individuals. I find encouragement from the work of the Squires, to name one of many fine inmate groups. Here is a group of inmates who invite troubled youth to come inside the walls for a few weekends and "rap" about what it is like. Their basic approach is "now we won't tell you not to get yourselves into trouble, but look where it got us." Squires has been instrumental in helping many young men reorient their lives.

A group called Scope helps inmates find jobs on the outside before their parole date arrives. The M-2 Job Therapy program provides outside sponsors to inmates, on a man-to-man basis. Often these sponsors are Christians, and when the inmate does obtain a release, his M-2 sponsors continue to help him.

As a Christian, I am obviously interested and encouraged by the Chapel activities. All expressions of faith are encouraged officially but are participated in voluntarily.

I find much encouragement from the recent interest that has been expressed toward matters relating to faith in Christ. I have been amazed at finding many inmates in the possession of copies of "The Way," the illustrated Living Bible, and at seeing inmates reading them and carrying them everywhere — to mealtimes, to work, as well as to chapel services. There is a program of Bible study behind the walls of San Quentin, an activity that thrills me tremendously. Many are being won to saving faith in Jesus, and baptisms occur from time to time. I looked in on a Sunday morning Protestant Chapel service recently, and I noticed that the Chaplain was extending a public invitation, with several inmates responding. One of the highlights of the Easter season is the annual Easter service, where both staff and inmates forget their differences, and, as one body, they worship the risen Savior.

I find encouragement from the fact that the inmates of San Quentin sponsor a little girl in South America, giving up part of their small incomes to remember her on er birthday and other special days.

I find encouragement from the fact that one inmate recently completed work on his invention, a "go-cart," a mechanized bed for a young woman who has been completely paralyzed since she was twelve years old and must be in bed at all times.

As a Christian officer, my attitude hopefully includes realism about some of the limitations of the penal system, as well as the need for justice balanced with mercy, and realism about what I consider and what evidence demonstrates to be the chief causes for the problems we are having.

However, my attitude, which is hopefully Christ-like, involves idealism. Men can be changed, and that by the Good News of the Gospel of Jesus Christ men can be born again, be given a new direction in life, find complete pardon from their sins and be completely forgiven; they can become useful people. This Good News is not jut for prisoners, but, thank God, it is for all persons who hunger and thirst for reality, meaning and change in life.

As far as I am concerned, I do not see my job as being merely to keep people locked up and, as an officer of the law, to enforce state laws and the rules and regulations of the director, but as a correctional officer, to try in my professional dealings with these men to help them realize that prison does not have to be a self-defeating experience, but a learning experience.

One of these days I am going to be out of a job. I see the day when all prisons will be closed, not because they will be burned or torn down by force or administratively closed, but because there will be no crime, and therefore, no criminals. I am speaking about the time in the future when, as the Bible assures us, God Himself is going to set all things right. If I did not have the confidence that God Himself, by His own hand, will ultimately solve the problems of injustice, hatred, and the conditions that lead to crime, both in society and within the human heart, and that His will will surely be done on earth, then I would throw up my hands in despair. I am convinced of the ultimate victory of God, that He will accomplish His purposes, that nothing man or the devil can do will thwart those purposes.

Finally, and until that day comes, Jesus said, "I came to set the captive free." Freedom is not necessarily in a physical sense, but it is freedom of the spirit, of the soul. He challenges us to work with Him toward the end of binding up the broken-hearted, freeing the captives, announcing the Good News of the healing of the sick. Most of us claim to have some kind of religious affiliation. To us Jesus has said,

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

I do not set myself up as the perfect example of what an officer should be, but by God's grace, I am trying my best. Each of us must accept the challenge of following Christ in his own individual way, with the only supreme motive being that of our intense love for Christ.

Thank you for letting me share these thoughts with you.

Postal Woes Help Kill A Magazine

GRAYMOOR, N.Y. (UPI) — The Lamp, for 71 years a major voice in the field of Christian unity by the Atonement Friars, will cease publication with its July issue.

Father Charles Angell, SA, director of the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute where the Lamb was published, blamed rising costs — particularly new postal regulations — and changing patterns of communications for the magazine's demise.

Mormons Use Microfilm In 'Work For The Dead'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — In steel-lined, man-made caves blasted into a granite mountainside, the Mormon Church collects and stores miles of microfilm for use by its members in "work for the dead."

Technicians process film of pre-1900 birth, death, marriage and legal records collected from 35 nations and every U.S. state and store the negatives in the naturally cool caverns — where they are safe from the forces of man and nature.

The $2 million granite mountain storage vault is part of the church's vast genealogy program in which members trace their ancestors in order to bring them the benefits of Mormonism "on the other side."

The caverns, entered through a bunker watched by a closed circuit television camera, are dug into a sheer granite cliff above the mouth of Little Cottonwood Canyon, just off the road that leads to the Alta and Snowbird ski resorts.

"They are structured to withstand a nuclear blast at the mouth of the canyon," said vault director Myron R. Bridges, pointing out that work areas are covered by 300 feet of granite and storage areas by 700 feet of solid rock.

In the front sections of the caves, modern film processing equipment churns out 25 million feet of microfilm negatives and prints a year and dozens of evaluators check them for quality before the negatives are stored and the prints distributed.

Behind the work area, huge 10- and 14-ton bank vault doors and "blast locks" provide access to the six vaults. In two of them, rows of gray filing cabinets hold nearly one million, 100-foot rolls of microfilm collected by the church since it started filming old records in 1938.

The films include land grants, deeds, probate records, marriage and cemetery records, parish registers and other items of known genealogical value.

The Mormons have generally concentrated on the areas from which most of the church's 3.3 million members are descended — the United States, Denmark, Great Britain, Sweden, the Netherlands, France and Germany but recently have begun filming in other parts of Latin America, in Asia and in eastern Europe.

Prints of the films, plus 130,000 printed volumes and seven million "family record sheets" are available for use by Mormons and non-Mormons alike at the genealogy library attached to the church's headquarters building in Salt Lake City.

The church's massive investment in genealogy research is motivated by the same doctrines which led the faith to build 16 temples around the world.

In the temples-closed to all but faithful Mormons — members are married for "time and eternity," and children are "sealed" to their parents so their family will remain intact in the afterlife.

But members also undergo rites of baptism, marriage and "sealing" by proxy for their forebears.

Thomas C. Daniels, administrator of the church's genealogical society, explained that the church believes the "family was designed by the Lord to endure through all time and eternity" — but that families will be united after the resurrection only if the temple rites have been performed.

"That makes the ordinances valid but not effective," he says. "The person on the other side has the option of accepting them or not."

Since the church was founded in 1830 more than 140 million persons — most of them "on the other side" — have had the ordinances performed for them.

"Considering the billions who have lived on earth, we're just scratching the surface," Daniels admits. "Except for royalty, records generally begin in the mid-1500s to early 1600s. If anyone claims to have gone back more than 10 generations, we question and check their sources."

What about those billions who lived before records were kept or in areas where they still aren't?

"We go back as far as the records are available; beyond that, it's humanly impossible. But we believe that the information will be made available to mortals during the millenium and the work will be performed then."

Then why spend so much time and money doing it now?

"The Lord helps those who help themselves. Life on earth is a mortal probation period for God's spirit children. It is our responsibility to do certain things and this is one."

Mr. Snowshoes Carries The Corgi Banner

By DON KEOWN

Mrs. Frank Hayward of Ross doesn't refer to Champion Bear Acres Mr. Snowshoes C. D. by his full title.

But on the other hand, neither does she call her Pembroek Corgi simply Snowshoes.

It is always Mr. Snowshoes, even though the mischief in the little dog's bright and alert eyes would seem to indicate that he is not one to stand on the proprieties.

AFTER ALL, THE winner of the best-of-show laurels at the San Francisco's recent big Golden Gate Kennel Club Dog Show, a pedigreed dog who has firmly established himself as the outstanding Welsh Corgi on the West Coast and certainly one of the top members of his breed in the entire country, is entitled to a considerable measure of respect.

The San Francisco triumph topped off what has been a brilliant career for the still young Corgi under the expert handling of Doug Bundock of Sebastopol.

For Diana Hayward, Mr. Snowshoes has been a first experience as the owner of a show dog.

BUT HE IS her second Corgi. And the culmination of a lifelong love for animals, particularly dogs and horses.

Because her father was a diplomat, she was born in Europe, and the family moved frequently. But her mother had a special affection for dogs. And thus as a child Diana knew a long succession of pets — fox terriers, cocker spaniels, German shepherds, Norwegian elk hounds, pugs, Irish setters, etc.

But she did not acquire her first Welsh Corgi until five years ago.

SHE WAS LOOKING for a pet, and she set her sights upon a Corgi "because I had been attracted to them at dog shows I had attended. Their faces were so expressive — so bright and clever. Their size appealed to me. And they present no grooming problem. So I decided to get one."

The first acquisition was Laurels Queen of Hearts, and Mrs. Hayward still has her.

"Mab," as Mrs. Hayward calls Laurels Queen of Hearts, was acquired primarily as a pet, and was not a show dog. But Mabs did compete in obedience trials, and before her retirement had established herself as the top Corgi in obedience competition in the country.

NEXT MRS. HAYWARD decided she would like to own a Corgi show dog.

Two years ago she made her selection at the Bear Acres Kennels of Mrs. Stanley Bear in San Jose, a well known breeder of Corgis.

Mr. Snowshoes, son of Champion Bear Acres Two for the Road, sire of many champions, was then a very small puppy.

"I took him at the age of six weeks," she says. "I was told it was chancy, and Mrs. Bear said she couldn't guarantee anything at that early age. But I knew from the moment I saw him that he was the dog I wanted, and that he would do well in the ring."

MRS. HAYWARD also made the decision for herself in selecting Bundock as the trainer.

"A lot of the credit for Mr. Snowshoes' success belongs to Doug," she says. "I had watched all the handlers at work at the dog shows, and I decided he was the best available handler. I've never been disappointed."

Up until then, Mrs. Hayward's participation in dog shows had been limited to the role of spectator, although she had taken an active part in horse shows "and that helped prepare me for what was to come."

"WHAT WAS TO come" was a growing string of successes for Mr. Snowshoes, an accumulation of ribbons and trophies, and increasing prestige in the dog show ranks, all capped off by the big victory in San Francisco.

"I think it can be said without any qualification that Mr. Snowshoes dominates the Corgis in the West, even though there are many fine Pembrokes out here on the Pacific Coast," she says. "And right now, he has the best record in his breed in the United States."

Mrs. Hayward disregarded the advice of some owners who warned her that a show dog should not be subjected to obedience training. Mr. Snowshoes took the obedience course, and earned the C.D. (Companion Dog) designation, along with his show ring championship.

"THE MORE YOU teach them, the happier they are," she says of her two Corgis.

Mr. Snowshoes and Mab live a normal pet life at the Hayward home, their owner says.

And, she adds, they are superb com-

For History Of Our Highways, Look To Bob Halligan

"I enjoy it," says veteran state Department of Transportation district information officer of California history to which he devotes much of his spare as well as his working time.

By DOROTHY GARDINER

It's Marinwood's Robert W. (Bob) Halligan who comes up with answers when news reporters, government officials or civic leaders have questions about the state highway system that winds through the nine Bay Area counties.

As district information officer for the California Department of Transportation in San Francisco, he has the past, present and future of highways at his fingertips.

An intense, articulate engineer-executive, he worked on highway planning, design and construction for 16 years before becoming the state's media contact man on highways seven years ago.

ON A RECENT trip to San Rafael he brought a collection of photographs showing Highway 101's (the Redwood Highway) growth during the last half century.

The photos, taken with an old-time box camera, depict today's six and eight lane speedway as a two-lane country road meandering through the pastoral countryside that not too long ago was Marin.

They are included in a slide show that Halligan researched and compiled on the highway's history in Marin, Sonoma and Napa counties that the Department of Transportation presents to interested groups on request.

CALIFORNIA'S highways still follow the old Mission Trail forged by Franciscan friars and Spanish dragoons more than 200 years ago, Halligan explained.

During the Spanish and Mexican periods travelers walked or rode horseback from today's Sausalito to San Rafael where they embarked by boat to Schellville in Sonoma County where the old El Camino Real continued along today's Highway 12.

Today's Highway 101 had its beginnings in 1909 when a network of county roads were taken over by the state Division of Highways, Halligan explained.

IN THE BEGINNING it ran along a circuitous route from Sausalito, west into Mill Valley, onto Corte Madera, Larkspur, Ross and San Anselmo where it veered east along today's Miracle Mile into downtown San Rafael.

It snaked down Fourth Street to Grand Avenue, turned north to Linden Lane, west to Petaluma Avenue (now Lincoln Avenue) to the top of Puerto Suello Hill where it wound around Los Ranchitos Road to today's Terra Linda Interchange and north to Novato and the county line.

Twenty years later, in 1929, as more commuters and excursionists began turning to automobiles for transportation, the state began improving the roadway.

TRAFFIC WAS rerouted from San Rafael's Grand Avenue onto Lincoln Avenue. A connecting two-lane roadway across the top of Puerto Suello Hill (where today 89,000 cars daily speed on six lanes) bypassed Los Ranchitos Road to join the existing highway north of today's Marin County Civic Center.

At the same time, the state built a two-lane stretch of roadway from San Rafael, across California Park Hill, to Alto that for the first time in history removed cross-country traffic from San Rafael's Fourth Street.

In 1933, with the spanning of Richardson Bay with a redwood highway bridge (built to last 100 years, it was replaced in 1957), the highway extended from Sausalito, on to Alto and into San Rafael.

WHEN THE GOLDEN Gate Bridge opened in May, 1937, 9,000 cars a day started traveling between San Francisco and Marin, Halligan said. That growth has never stopped. Today 115,000 cars daily make the trip across the bridge.

By 1940, 12,500 cars were whizzing through San Rafael every day. The result was the building of the first freeway in Northern California and the second in the state along a viaduct that bypassed the center of the city.

Scheduled for completion in 1941, it wasn't opened to traffic until the following year due to the onset of the World War II, he said.

THE GOLDEN GATE Bridge that has brought thousands of new residents and visitors to Marin during the last three and half decades is still playing a key role in the county's future since "it can only carry so many vehicles (commuters) each day," he explained.

The same thing could be said of Highway 101. According to Halligan, the highway, that from its beginning has been the county's transportation lifeline, will soon reach its optimum — eight lanes.

Currently $2,300,000 is being spent widening to eight lanes the stretch of highway between the Richardson Bay Bridge and Greenbrae, he pointed out.

BY THE MID-1980S, eight lanes should join Greenbrae to California Park Hill, and a few years later eight lanes will run north to the Manuel T. Freitas Parkway, he said.

The stretch north to Marinwood will be widened to eight lanes in eight or more years, he said, to accommodate traffic generated by the Fireman's Fund Building, now under construction south of Lucas Valley Road, and the Northgate Industrial Park, east of the highway.

The Novato bypass, to the north, is expected to be finished this year, he said and by the mid to late 1980s, a six-lane highway will connect Novato and Petaluma.

AS CONDOMINIUMS and new homes bring more residents to the county, he pointed out, travelers may have to switch from private autos to mass transit or car pools.

The state is now studying installing "ramp metering" along the southern section of Highway 101 to encourage travelers to switch from private cars to Golden Gate Transit buses or car pools, he said.

The system, now in operation in San Jose, calls for a series of red, green and

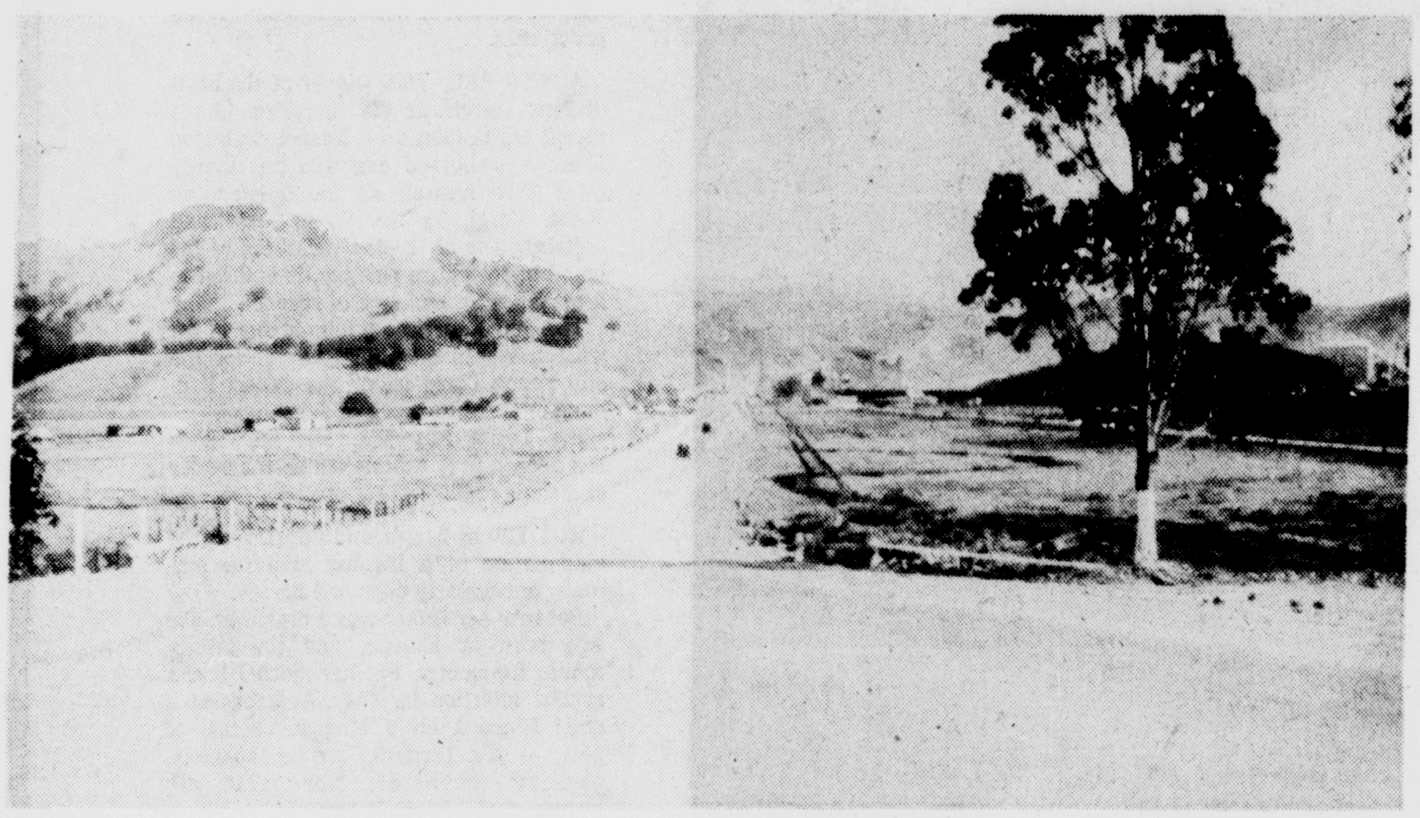
THIS IS WHAT Puerto Suello Hill, south of today's Marin County Civic Center, looked like in the late 1920s. Where once only a few cars passed on two-lanes bounded by white picket fencing and grazing land, today 89,000 cars daily whiz through San Rafael. Post World War II years saw the building of the Marin County Veterans Memorial Building and fairgrounds in the fields, upper right, and the development of small businesses, to the left.



THE TWO-LANE Redwood Highway in 1928 wound north by open fields, left, where the Corte Madera Shopping Center would one day be built, and past the hills that today hold Greenbrae, left center. The next year the state built a two-lane stretch of highway across California Park Hill that for the first time directly connected San Rafael with the roadway pictured above.

ROBERT W. (BOB) HALLIGAN of Marinwood shows part of the vast collection of rare and old photographs of the Redwood Highway that he has collected while compiling a slide show and lecture series on the highway's history. As district information officer for the state Department of Transportation for the nine Bay Area counties, he has the past, present and future of California's highways at his fingertips.

yellow traffic lights on all southbound onramps between Greenbrae and the Golden Gate Bridge, according to Halligan.

THE LIGHTS, TO operate only during peak commute hours, would hold vehicles carrying less than three persons on the ramps until holes in the traffic flow would allow them to merge without causing congestion.

Buses and vehicles, carrying three or more persons, in the meantime, he said, would be allowed to pass to the right, to enter the traffic flow at will.

This form of "preferential treatment" should induce more widespread use of buses and car pools, he said, and at the same time, would save "10 to 15 minutes" in driving time for the driver required to wait "from two to five minutes" at the traffic light.

THE LIGHTS ARE controlled by a computer activated by sensors buried in the pavement that are programmed to record traffic patterns, he explained.

In San Jose the system has been such a success in keeping traffic flowing freely during peak hours that it is now used during busy weekend and Christmas shopping hours, he added.

For the future, Halligan predicts increased use of mass transit — either "rubber tire" such as Marin's Golden Gate Transit bus service, he terms "tremendous," or rail, such as the East Bay's BART.

FREEWAY DIVIDING strips could be converted to exclusive bus use, he said, or to right-of-ways for fixed rail service. The questions is, he added, "if the people want mass transit, will they be willing to pay for it?"

Even in the unlikely event the automobile were to become obsolete, he added, California's giant highway network that connects every town with a population of 5,000 or more, would continue to play an important role in transportation.

Halligan, who grew up in San Francisco, where he attended the Mission Dolores Grammar School and St. James High School, credits his lifelong interest in history to a boyhood past-time of studying historic headstones in the Mission Dolores Cemetery, and to his grandfather, a railroad pioneer.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Thomas J. Lowry, a drummer boy in a regiment from Iowa during the Civil War, survived to become a brakeman for the pioneer Union Pacific Railroad and is pictured standing in the foreground of the well known painting depicting the driving of the golden spike that joined the rails of the first transcontinental railroad in Promontory, Utah, in 1869.

His grandson remembers growing up to his stories of days as a "bootstrap veterinarian" for the federal government on the Wyoming and Colorado plains where one of his colleagues was scalped by Indians and lived to tell the tale. And other stories of his driving a "coach and four" into the court at the Palace Hotel in the 1870s and his election as the mayor of Omaha, Neb.

During the World War II, Bob Halligan spent three years as a midshipman at the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., where he studies mechanical engineering.

WHEN HIS BRIGADE "washed out" at the end of the war, he returned home to finish his studies at the University of San Francisco.

Following two years aboard the Navy cruiser, Juneau, patrolling the eastern coast of Korea during the Korean War, he went to work for the state Division of Highways as a junior civil engineer.

His knowledge of highway design and construction led the state to loan him to the Metropolitan Bay Area Transportation Commission 10 years ago where he first began working with the public.

RETURNING TO the state's employee, he was named public information officer for the Department of Transportation "on a temporary basis" and has been there ever since.

He writes news releases (he credits his skills to USF's creative writing classes) researches, compiles information and acts as a contact man with such organizations as chambers of commerce and the Redwood Empire Association.

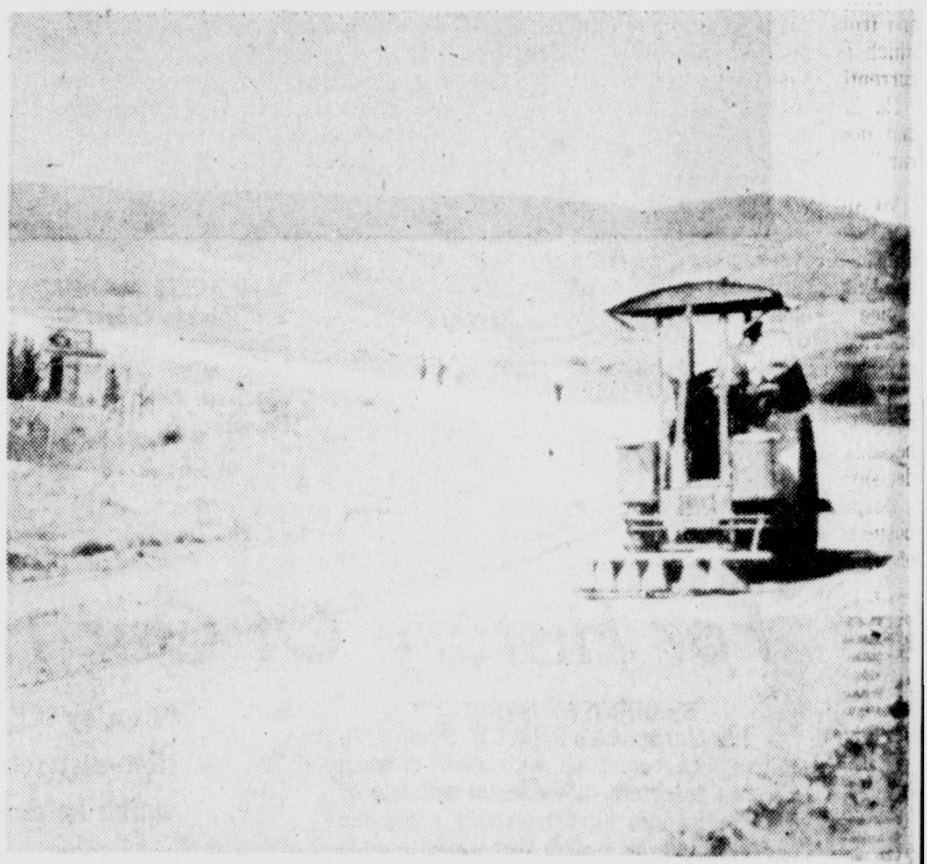
Currently he is working on a bicentennial project with the Daughters of the American Revolution on San Andres Lake.

Following his marriage 13 years ago to the former Wynn Folliard, a Chicagoan, he met skiing, he moved to Marin, where he had visited frequently as a boy to hunt, swim, dance at Larkspur's old Rose Bowl pavillion and scout encampments at Fairfax.

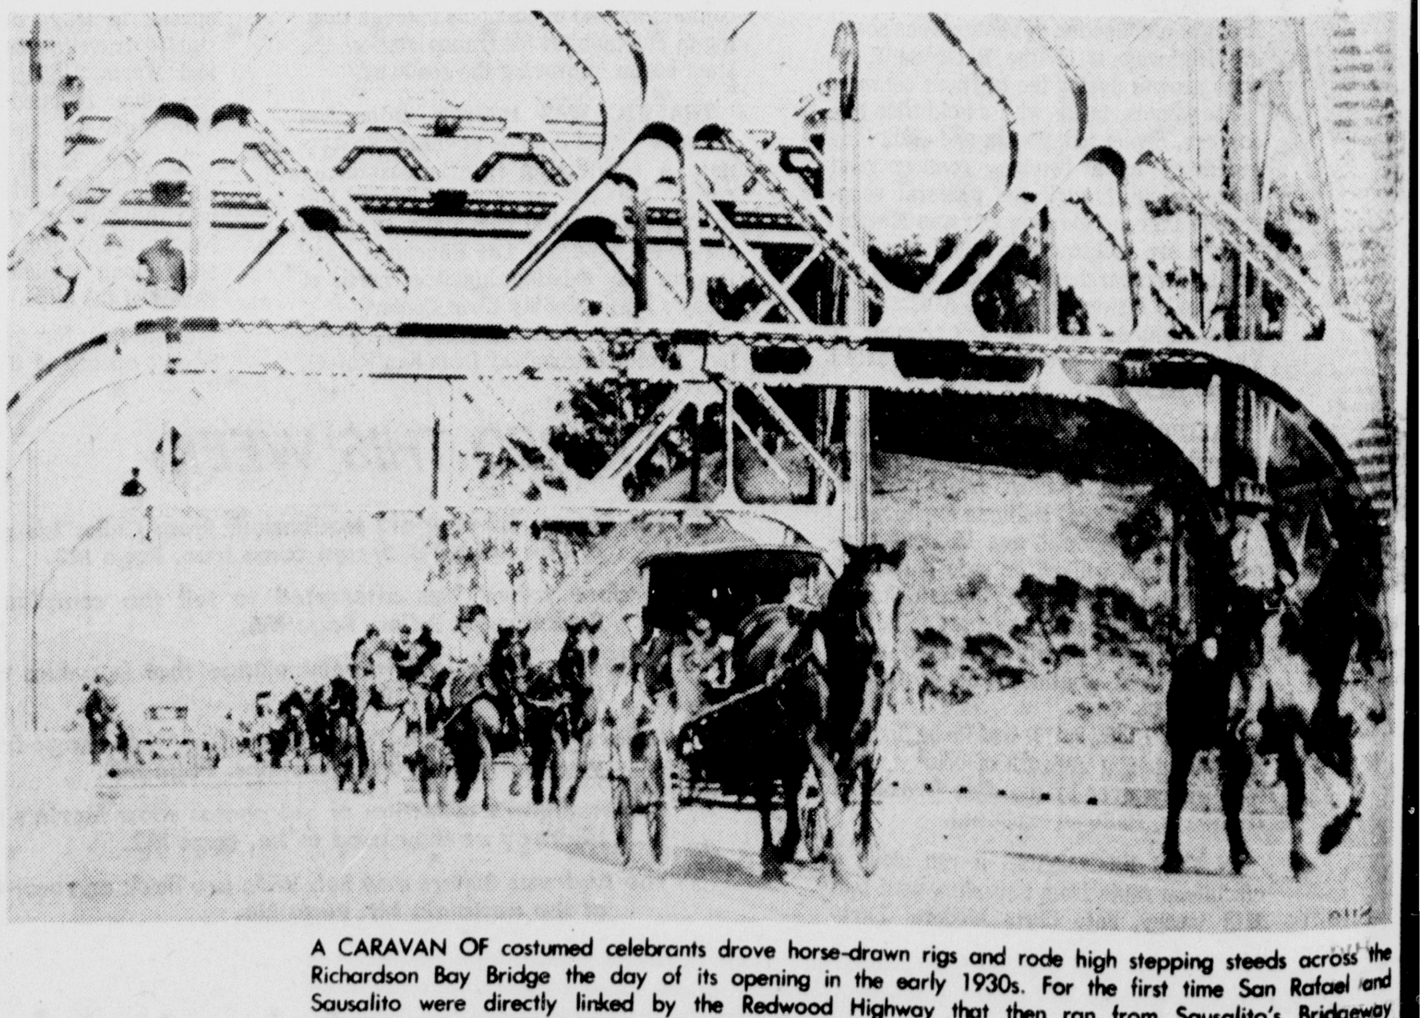
HIS FAMILY which includes three sons, Robert Jr., 11, David, 9, Paul John, 7, and daughter Ellen, 8, spends free time skiing and fishing.

Halligan also devotes his spare time to taking courses in such fields as closed circuit television, video tape recording and studying California's history ("I enjoy it.")

The result: If you have a question about the state's past or its roads, all the way back to Father Junipero Serra, Halligan's the man to ask.



TODAY A GIANT concrete and steel interchange crosses Highway 101 to connect Mill Valley and the Tiburon Peninsula close to where this steam powered compactor was photographed in the early 1920s grading the old "Alto Y." Then the "Y" was indeed Y-shaped, Bob Halligan says, pointing to the roadway, upper left, that ran to San Rafael; the road to the right, center, that extended to Tiburon, and the road in the foreground, that ran to Mill Valley.



A CARAVAN OF costumed celebrants drove horse-drawn rigs and rode high stepping steeds across the Richardson Bay Bridge the day of its opening in the early 1930s. For the first time San Rafael and Sausalito were directly linked by the Redwood Highway that then ran from Sausalito's Bridgeway Boulevard (then Water Street), across this bridge, on to Alto and into San Rafael across California Park Hill.

Young Troubadour From Chile Finds U.S. To His Liking

MARIN LIVING

By DON KEOWN

As a very small child in his native Chile, Juan Guillermo was already dreaming of the day when he would go north to the United States.

And the San Francisco area played a special part in that dream.

"I read about the missions. And about the many new movements that had come out of San Francisco. To me, it sounded like an exciting place to be," he says.

Guillermo's dream has come true.

AFTER EARNING A degree in business administration at the University of Chile in his home city of Santiago, Guillermo did come to the United States. And after a stay in Miami, Fla., where he took further studies in business administration at the University of Miami, he did come West.

Now he lives in San Rafael. And he has not, he says, been disappointed with the United States or its San Francisco Bay Area.

Shelved at least temporarily, however, is his interest in business administration. He earns his living now — "and a good one" — as a troubadour singing romantic songs.

BILLED AS "MEMO," he is heard regularly Friday and Saturday nights at the Peacock Gap Country Club, San Rafael, and also on Fridays at the officers' club at the naval base on Treasure Island.

"Fridays are busy nights," he says. "I have to split the evening between Peacock Gap and Treasure Island."

He recently finished a six-month run at the El Greco Restaurant in San Anselmo. And he has been heard at the Concordia Club in San Francisco, the Windjammer in Tiburon, the Sleeping Lady Cafe in Fairfax and at other places, as well as on television on Channels 4 and 20.

THERE WAS NOTHING in his family background to indicate that he would follow his present career, says Memo.

"We had no one in our family who had ever been in show business," he adds.

His father was an executive with a steel company in Santiago.

"But I started singing around the house as soon as I could speak, and I kept right on singing at school," he says.

HOWEVER, HE DID not sing with the school chorus. "I have always been a single," the dark, smiling 25-year-old says.

In high school, however, he did have a rock 'n roll band, which he gave the English name of We Five because "we sang American and British songs — Beatle tunes and that sort of thing."

Memo's first instrument was the bass, and from that he moved on to the guitar, which is now his instrument. But he is currently mastering the piano.

He is self-taught on the instruments, and does not read music, playing "by ear."

MUSIC WAS SET aside temporarily while he studied at the University of Chile. And when he then came north to the United States, Miami was a natural choice as his destination because his married sister had been living there for several years.

Was it hard to leave Chile and his parents? "Very hard," he admits. But, he adds, he has no regrets regarding his decision.

Despite the post-graduate courses in business administration at the University of Miami, when he moved on to California it was with the definite intention of returning to music and of earning his living as a musician.

HE EXPLAINS THE move across the country: "There were so many Latins living around Miami that it wasn't all that different from Chile. I wanted to go some place where I could truly get to know North Americans and their way of life."

He landed in San Rafael, he says, because a friend also from Chile was living here.

Memo settled down to some hard practice upon the guitar — "like crazy," he says.

It was about a month before he found his first job — at the El Greco. Other engagements came soon thereafter.

MEMO MIXES romantic Latin sons with the American hits of such composers and singers as Cat Stevens, Elton Young, John Denver and Elvis Presley. He furnishes his own accompaniment upon his 12-string guitar. And he owns his own amplifier and other stage equipment.

The Latin music is sung in Spanish, the American music in English.

English, he notes, presented no great problem for him because all high school students in Chile are required to study the language.

His audiences, however, seem to favor the romantic Latin songs, he admits, "although they enjoy the others."

THIS, HE SUSPECTS, "is because Spanish is such a romantic language. The words just seem to sound like love, even when you don't understand the language."

As far as he is concerned, the music is the thing, regardless of the language. "I don't learn a song unless I like it. And then it doesn't make any difference, whether I am singing it in Spanish or in English."

But, he adds, he has been in the USA long enough now that he finds himself "thinking in English, whereas I used to think in Spanish."

Still, "when I go back to Chile for a visit, I still feel very much a Chilean."

THE EMPANADAS (a type of turnover with meat filling) of his homeland remain Memo's favorite food, however, "and when I go back to Chile, I fill up on them."

Unfortunately, he doesn't cook, and thus can't fix his own empanadas, no matter how great his craving.

His parents, he says, no longer try to persuade him to remain in Chile. "They know now that I am happy where I am, and that I am doing well," he says.

"Doing well," includes, he says, two cars, and "a nice apartment" which he shares with his manager, Marcelo Ojeva, 29, who also comes from Chile.

OJEVA WAS, MEMO says, "a very big promoter — the biggest — in Chile" before coming to this country. And here he handles a number of bands, as well as troubadour Memo.

While Memo counts himself fortunate to have had the opportunities and attained the things he already has, he thinks bigger things are on the immediate horizon for him.

For one thing, he believes some of the larger clubs are about to open up to him. There have been indications of interest.

He and Ojeva are also looking into the possibilities of recordings.

BUT THEIR BIG project is a hoped-for invitation to perform at the outdoor Festival of Vina del Mar in February of next year, back in their native Chile.

Memo's eyes flash with excitement: "Man, that is a big festival — 20,000 people for a show, and televised all over Chile. When you play three, you've made it in Chile."

Then, too, Memo and Ojeva are making plans for a European tour later next year.

"That is another dream of mine — to see Europe," says the singer.

SPAIN AND SWEDEN are two countries he mentions as especially intriguing.

But when he is asked to name his personal favorites among the current musical groups, he selects an English comba, the BeeGees. "I like them for their mellow sound," he says.

While playing and singing, Memo is more likely to be clad in "mod" western attire than in traditional Latin wear.

He has been married once, but he's single now. There were no children. And his career commands all his considerable energies and enthusiasms now.

HE HASN'T YET reached the point where the mail brings him the deluge of fan letters that come with stardom. But he did receive one letter he treasures, after he had contributed his talent to the entertainment of the visually handicapped in San Francisco.

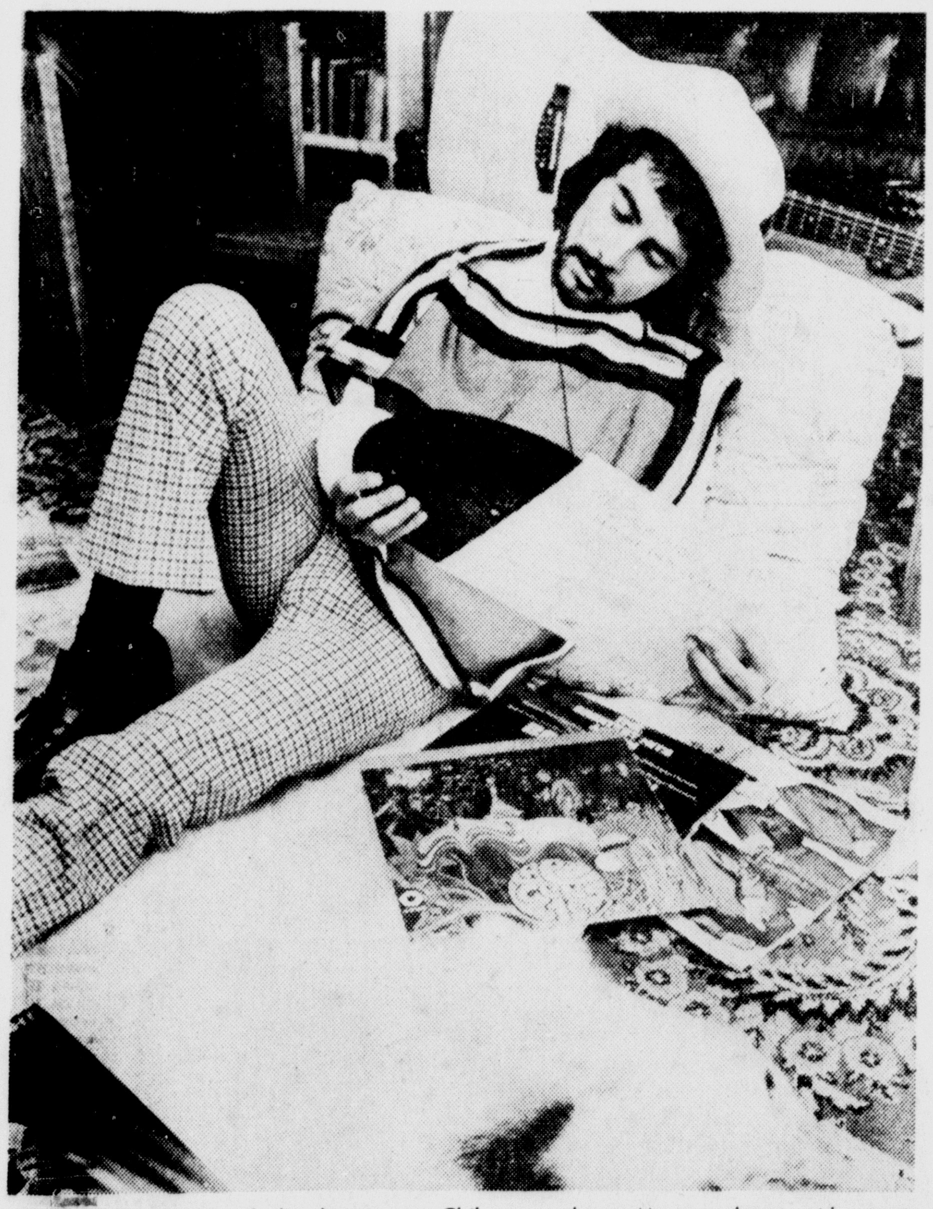
The letter came from Ethel Mayer, regional program director for the National Association for Visually Handicapped, and it read in part:

"Every once in awhile in this kind of work, I have the extreme pleasure of meeting someone like you. Everything then seems worthwhile. You can't imagine the lasting joy created at NAVH by your music. . .

"Lisa (a child of 12), who sang with you, will never forget you. Through your kindness she has become approachable and we can hope to help her more quickly. It was an exciting breakthrough — something beautiful to see."

"Now that really thrilled me," says Memo. "I'll go back there just as often as they want me!"

JUAN GUILLERMO, or Memo as he is known professionally, is his own accompaniest on the 12-string guitar, an instrument that he first learned in his native Chile. He doesn't read music and plays by ear, but he has now taken up the piano. Here in his San Rafael apartment Memo rehearses for his performances at the Peacock Gap Country Club Terrace Room and elsewhere in the Bay Area.



IN THE COSTUME of the huaso, or Chilean cowboy, Memo relaxes with some recordings. He holds a Chilean folk song, "Los Huasos Quincheros." The records before him include one by his personal favorites, Britain's BeeGees.

THIS ABSTRACT self-portrait is one of more than 30 oil paintings by Mrs. Thomas Marshall of Kentfield that are being shown at the San Rafael Public Library through August. Mrs. Marshall uses an original technique of dripping turpentine onto canvas, then blotting with paper towels to achieve unusual textures and effects.

Mr. Snowshoes Has Proven Himself The Best Corgi In West

panions, along with their attributes as show and obedience competitors.

"They are extremely loyal, very intelligent, quite cooperative and very, very clean," she says. "They are not dogs to wander, and they stay home. They're good with children. And yet they make good watchdogs, because they are very protective."

MRS. HAYWARD says that she often walks alone with her dogs "and they offer a friendly greeting to anyone we meet along the path."

But, she adds, should she sit down, then the two Corgis won't permit anyone to approach her.

"They stay right there, and sensing that I'm relatively helpless while seated, won't let anyone come even close to me," she says.

The Welsh Corgi falls into the working dog category in American Kennel Club classifications. Actually, there are two distinct kinds of Corgis, the Pembroke (to which Mr. Snowshoes and Mab belong) and the Cardigan type. The two are similar in conformation, but the Pembroke has a short tail.

PEMBROKES WERE introduced to Wales by the Flemish in 1107, while the Cardigans were brought to Wales by the Celts much earlier — in about 1200 B.C.

Welsh mythology, Mrs. Hayward tells us, has it that the Corgis used to live in the woods where they served as steeds of the little people or leprechauns who rode them in the night. The "saddle marks" on the little dogs' backs were responsible for the old tale.

Ironically, Welsh Corgis are scarce in Wales today.

"THAT IS BECAUSE the English discovered them about 30 years ago and began buying them all up," Mrs. Hayward relates. "The Welsh tend to be quite cross about that."

Today the Corgi is known as "the queen's dog" because of Queen Elizabeth's fondness for the breed.

In this country, says Mrs. Hayward, Corgis do not rate as one of the more popular breeds.

"This is because they are something of a dog person's dog," she says. "People who are not around dogs a great deal tend not to know very much about the Corgi."

SOME POPULARIZATION for the Welsh Corgi in America came from the Walt Disney film, "Little Boy Lost." The canine star of that picture, incidentally, was trained by Mr. Snowshoes' handler, Doug Bundock.

While the two Corgis are definitely the responsibility of Mrs. Hayward, her husband, Frank, a vice president with Coldwell Banker and Company, shares her interest in and enthusiasm for the dogs and for dog shows.

"While he doesn't have the time to work with the dogs, he is very much involved in everything," his wife says.

THE TWO, Marin residents for 25 years, belong to the Golden Gate Pembroke Welsh Corgi Fanciers, and to the Marin County Dog Training Club.

And what is there that sets Mr. Snowshoes and other champions apart?

"Well, the conformation has to be there," says Mrs. Hayward. "But there has to be something more — some extra quality. You find it in people, too. The super champion has something special that can't quite be put into words."

And what lies ahead for Mr. Showshoes?

THE MARIN CORGI is still a very young dog with a long show ring career ahead, followed by service as a stud, Mrs. Hayward notes.

Does that show ring career include competition in the greatest of all the American dog shows, Westminster?

Perhaps, says Mr. Snowshoes' owner. But there is a problem. She refuses to entrust her dog to the baggage compartment of a plane.

"So if we are going to go East to compete, we'll have to figure out some other way of traveling," she says. "A train, or an automobile, are possibilities."

ALTHOUGH THE East is home to many fine dogs and to the famed Cote de Neige Kennel of New York State that is responsible for the foundation stock for some very fine Corgis, Mrs. Hayward is confident her Mr. Snowshoes could hold his own with the finest from the other sections of the country.

But above and beyond the honors already won and yet to come, first and foremost for Mrs. Hayward is the pleasure that Mr. Snowshoes and Mab have given her and her husband simply by their presence in their home.

Those Americans who have not yet discovered the Welsh Corgi are missing out, she says, on something very special and unique.

Wine Pressings

Have you even wondered about the difference between lager beer and ale?

Both lager and ale are malt beverages that are fermented from grain - usually barley. In the beginning, the manufacturing processes are identical; the grain is steeped in water until it begins to sprout and the starches in the grain turn into sugar. The liquid is then strained into a brew kettle and hops (tiny blossoms of the hop vine) are added for flavor. After a few hours of brewing the mixture it is again strained, yeast is added, and fermentation begins.

It is the yeast which makes the difference between lager and ale because there are two types of fermentation. Lager is produced from a process called "bottom fermentation" because the yeast settles to the bottom of the fermentation vat after it has completed its work. In fact, the word lager comes from a German word meaning storing or resting.

Ale, on the other hand, is a "top-fermented" beverage. The yeast used in the process of making ale rises to the top after fermentation. Ale has a sharper taste than lager and a stronger flavor of hops. Stout and porter are variations of ale.

Sir Clough's Fairytale Village In Wales

TRAVEL PAGE

By ROBIN WRIGHT

But Sir Clough Williams-Ellis tops them all. He collects buildings.

It all started out as a dream, much like Tolkien's Middle Earth or Alice's Wonderland. Sir Clough just wanted to turn a tiny tip of his brooding northern Wales into a lighthearted baroque holiday village, something along the lines of romantic Portofino.

BUT INSTEAD OF words, the dreamer decided to use "fallen buildings" to construct his whimsical village. So, stone by stone over the past half-century, the spirited Welshman has built his fantasy. And now, in this medieval and mountainous land, there is a fairytale village of retrieved architectural relics, with a 17th century Town Hall here, a baroque lighthouse there, and the timbers of an old British warship for extra flavor.

In all, there now are dozens of cottages, homes and mini-mansions spread around a renovated old family estate. Most of the structures are Mediterranean in flavor and centuries old in style.

In fact, some of the stones that have gone into the rebuilding can be traced as far back as the 1100s.

THUS WHAT STARTED out as a dream has become much more. To the many who pilgrimage here every year it has become an inspiration, a sanctuary and an enchanting architectural eccentricity.

Sir Noel Coward wrote "Blithe Spirit" during a one-week stay at Portmeirion, and such notables as George Bernard Shaw, Bertrand Russell, John Steinbeck, Lewis Mumford, H.G. Wells, David Lloyd George, King Zog of Albania, Thor Heyerdahl and an assortment of British royalty have taken refuge here.

Even super-modernist architect Frank Lloyd Wright came by "taking it all without a blink," according to Sir Clough.

THAT MAY BE hard to believe. This secluded almost-island of retrieved arches, terraces, statues, cottages, gazebos, stairways, ponds, gardens, fountains, walkways and towers is one up even on Middle Earth or Wonderland. Yet it is livable.

Open most of the year as a hotel, restaurant, and — or curiosity, Portmeirion is a classic holiday treat — and retreat.

Considering the value of this unique museum-village, the prices are reasonable. Rates very from about $12 for a single room with breakfast to $35 for a double with full pension. The prices of the separate family cottages vary on a higher scale.

BUT PORTMEIRION is not just a resort.

Besides the main mansion-hotel and stables-turned-annex, the village is complete with restaurants, clothing and miscellaneous shops in a cobbled square, tennis courts, pools, lounges, beach front, and a Town Hall that sponsors movies, dances, exhibitions, and concerts. Some activities are restricted to guests, although several are also open to casual visitors.

The background setting is as impishly eccentric as the main complex, with such touches as a gold mine abandoned after a 200-yard tunnel turned up only a single nugget, or a handful of authentic beachfront caves ideal for adventure.

AND SPRINKLED throughout the peninsula are gardens showing off 20 varieties of rhododendrons, thousands of hydrangeas, palms, cypresses, ginkgo, magnolia and eucalyptus trees. It's a colorful woodland with an almost enchanted air.

As Lewis Mumford once described it: "Portmeirion is a folly in the 18th century architectural manner; indeed, a folly piled upon folly, as in an uninhibited dream.

"But the total effect is relaxing and often enchanting, now more than ever, since the buildings contrast happily to the rigid irrationalities and the calculated follies of our so-called Nuclear Age."

The result of Sir Clough's "dancing on the rigidity of principle" is a properly British fantasyland, a peninsula — an island by spirit if not quite by land — that has improvised on the past to make a dream into a reality.

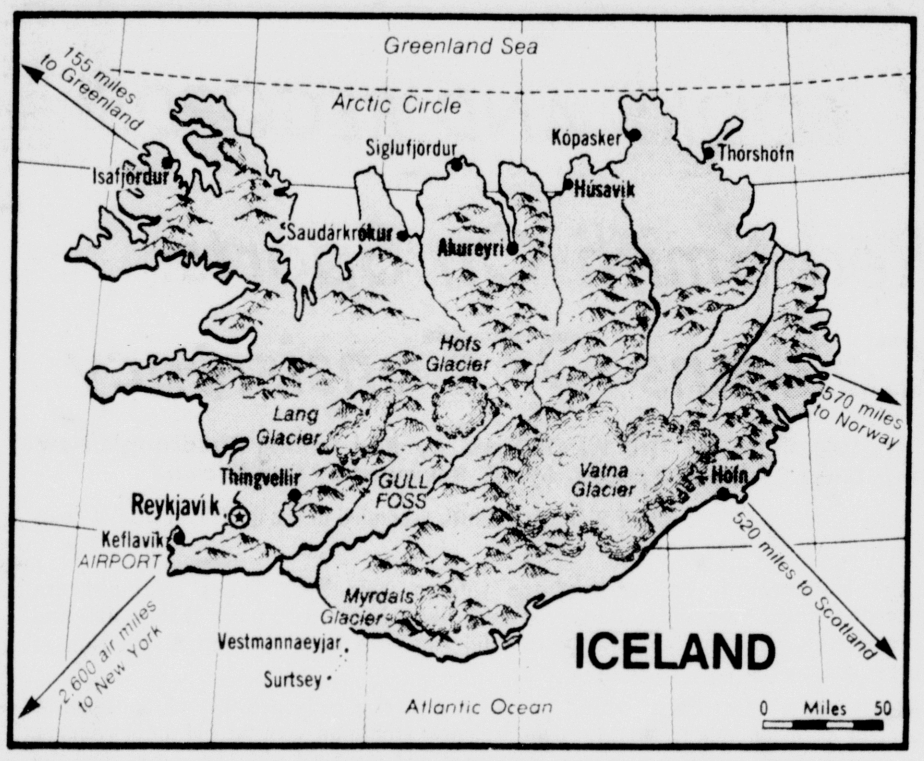
THE PICTURESQUE APPEARANCE of the Welsh village of Portmeirion is attributable to the "hobby" of Sir Clough Williams-Ellis who set out to turn the little community into a miniature Portofino. The result is a museum-village that appeals to holiday visitors with its eccentric architecture, its recreational facilities and its air of "another world" — and a quiet one.



Iceland's Sights Awe Anniversary Visitors

By LEAVITT F. MORRIS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — For centuries this almost treeless island anchored securely in the turbulent North Atlantic has been eroding away, even though volcanic eruptions continue to make new land areas.

With the little or no tree cover and one-tenth of its 39,600 square miles covered by glaciers, Iceland's high winds have been relentlessly sweeping valuable soil into the sea.

Now Iceland is taking steps to slow down the erosion and save its soil. In 1972 new legislation provided for the Nature Conservation Council whose responsibilities include a vast reforestation program. Birch trees, along with spruce and willow, are being planted in various sections of the island.

THE COUNCIL ALSO is responsible for protecting scenic and recreational areas from overcommercialization, the laying out of hiking and riding trails, and administration of the country's three national parks.

Thingvellir, one of the national parks and a revered historic site, is where the Icelandic Althingi (Parliament) was founded in the year 930. Another important historic site is Ingolfsholfdi, where Iceland's first settler, a Norwegian, arrived in 874.

The first-time visitor to Iceland, on the 30-minute ride from the airport to the capital, may well become depressed at the barren, bleak, lava-strewn countryside.

NOW AND THEN in this vastness, sheep can be seen cropping at the sparse growth springing up between cracks and crevices. There are nearly two million sheep grazing and roaming at will all over the island during the summer.

At autumn time the round-up is one of the great social occasions of the country's calendar.

Visitors to Iceland this summer are being treated to the observance of the 1,100 anniversary of the first permanent settlement in the year 874. The biggest celebrations took place July 28 at Thingvellir and in Reykjavik from Aug. 3 to 5. There were parades with floats and displays highlighting Iceland's Viking heritage.

NATURE PROVIDES one of Iceland's major tourist attractions this year.

It is the fishing village island of Heimaey, partially destroyed last year by a new volcano eruption on the outskirts of the town. Residents were quickly evacuated as the fiery lava ash descended on the village, filling the streets and covering many of the homes with the fine pumice.

Fortunately, the volcano burned itself out, and not long after people started returning and began the huge task of cleaning up. Fish factories are again in operation, and it is almost business as usual except for the curious tourists who arrive to view the aftermath of what could have been a national disaster.

SITUATED ONLY 30 miles from the Arctic Circle is the city of Akureyri, Iceland's principal town in the North. From here it is a pleasant, rustic trip to Bardardalur Valley with a stop at the Gullfoss —or Golden Waterfalls. The falls are an awesome sight when viewed close at hand.

A path leads down to the first series of falls, dropping 40 or 50 feet into a broad canyon with such a roar normal conversation is lost.

The upper falls have a greater drop, about 80 feet. Walking along a narrow shelf, one gets within a few feet of the great wall of water as it thunders with unharnessed power to a series of cataracts before rushing off to a river which through the centuries has cut a deep chasm in finding its route to the sea.

ONE OF THE many surprises to visitors here are the greenhouses at Hvetagerdi where bananas, tomatoes, vegetables and tropical flowers grow abundantly. The greenhouses are heated by the hot water springs — of which there are many.

There are a diversity of activities available to visitors including gliding, golf, and "pony riding," but not the kind usually associated with children. There are organized pony treks up to six days taking a minimum of four people and up to a maximum of 15.

Icelandic Airlines, with jet flights from New York and Chicago to Reykjavik, offers "bargain" stopover privileges in Iceland from 24 hours to 72 hours. The attractive package includes transportation between the airport and the Hotel Loftleider, accommodations, continental breakfast, lunch and the city sightseeing tour.

Cost for the 24-hour stopover is only $29; for 48 hours, $55; 72 hours, $71.

Iceland indeed has many treasures to offer its visitors. And they are found in the most unexpected places!

The Serious Art Of Paper Dolls At Spokane Fair

SPOKANE — Cutting paper dolls is a popular Polish pastime.

It's really a serious, 19th century folk art — in Polish it's called "wycinanti" — and the cutouts are far more complex and artistic than ordinary paper dolls.

That cultural lesson is just one of many to be learned at the Folklife Festival at the Expo '74 World's Fair.

Adam Wleklinski, who runs the Folk Art Studio in Renton, Wash. is a participant in the Folklife Festival, a gathering of artists and craftsmen of the Northwest.

Wleklinski cuts the intricate designs with speed and precision, then pastes them on display boards. Traditional patterns reflect the region of Poland from which they come.

Monochromatic designs are cut from a single sheet of paper. Others — like an intricate Christmas story Wleklinski displayed here — include as many as five layers, each a different color.

The Folklife Festival will continue to present samples of various cultural arts throughout Expo '74.

Travelers Wait Only So Long

Air travelers are spending less and less time in airport terminals, American Airlines studies indicate. The airline keeps tabs regularly on the average time its passengers get to the terminals before their flight departures — and not just out of sheer curiosity.

Time consciousness is at the very heart of airline service. A stopwatch is one of the tools of the trade.

On short to medium-haul flights, the airline finds, passengers are arriving an average of 20 minutes before departure. Those taking long-haul flights get to the terminals an average of 35 minutes before flight time.

"Time is of the essence in a service industry," said Richard C. Hoerner, American's vice president of passenger services. "There is just so much time most people will wait for any service, including the time air travelers will wait to make reservations, pick up their tickets and retrieve their baggage."

Lake Mendocino Beckons Marinites

The Corps of Engineers point out that while Lake Mendocino is relatively busy on weekends, its recreational potential remains largely unused on weekdays.

Marinites, the engineers suggest, are missing a close-to-home opportunity to enjoy the lake and its shoreline campsites.

The lake is located just north of Ukiah on Highway 20. During summer the maximum daily temperatures average around the low and mid 90s, excellent for such activities as camping, fishing, picnicking, boating, water skiing, sunning. There are boat ramps at the northwest and the south ends of the lake. And the only fees charged are for camping.

THERE ARE approximately 300 campsites located about the lake. About 100 are located on the northwest side of the lake and the other 200 on the northeast side.

There are also 23 sites on the south side for self-contained vehicles (with their own toilet facilities, water, etc).

Campers going to the northwest and northeast side of the lake will find a picnic table and barbecue pit with each campsite. Restroom facilities are within easy walking distance and include hot water showers on the northwest side.

FEES ARE A maximum of $3 per night, depending on where you camp. There is also a maximum camping limit of 14 days.

No reservations are accepted for individual campsites (strictly first come, first served). However, the lake has with few exceptions been able to accommodate everyone with a site to their liking. Reservations are taken for group camping (25 or more people), providing all areas have not been booked in advance. Write 1160 Lake Mendocino Drive, Ukiah 95482, for information.

Fees for group camping run from $3 to $11 per night.

Park rangers issue Golden Age Passports to senior citizens over 62 years of age. This entitles them to half-price on campsites.

THE NORTHWEST side of the lake is ideal for boaters. Most of the campsites here run $3 per night with the exception of 32 new campsites located right along the shore which are free. There is a seven-day camping limit for these new campsites.

This side of the lake also contains a sectioned-off swim area and a sanitary dump station.

Fees on the northeast side of the lake run $3 per night for the most part. There are areas, however, where only $1 a night is charged. This side is a little more peaceful and quiet.

No fees are charged at the south end of the lake.

THERE ARE strictly day-use areas located all about the lake. They provide such activities as picnicking and swimming.

The premier fish of Lake Mendocino is the striper. These fish are unusual in that they are land-locked. Channel catfish, large-mouth bass, crappie and bluegill are also abundant and not too hard to catch.

The best time to fish is at night and during week days. Yes, night fishing is allowed. Park Rangers will show you the hot spots and what to use.

People come to the lake to camp mainly because of the high quality of facilities, and the cleanliness of the area. The Park Rangers also have a lot to do with making the lake a nice spot to bring the family.

Whatever their reasons, once people stop almost always plan on coming back.

Sluggishly Told Story Of A Dynamo

BUCKMINSTER FULLER: AT HOME IN THE UNIVERSE by Alden Hatch; Crown, 274 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Jorie Parr.

Bucky the man is the focus of this slow-going biography by an old friend, Alden Hatch.

Chronologically Hatch narrates the details of the life of the most original philosopher of our era, the best known American in the world at large. There is no voltage; but if motivated by a fascinating subject, you will slog along.

It may come as no surprise that as a kindergartener the inventor of the Geodesic Dome constructed of toothpicks and dried peas a tetrahedronal octet truss, but there it is. A hearty beginning to his school career, that was, alas, unsustained. He, both funny looking and individualistic, was later booted from Harvard.

As a young man, Richard Buckminster Fuller was considered a ne'er-do-well by many, including his mother. The worst blow of his life occurred when she called on his future father-in-law to try to dissuade him from sanctioning the marriage to lovely, socially impeccable Anne Hewlett. How wrong the meddling matron was!

Anne, his wife for more than half a century, has always been his balance wheel, his "anchor to windward." She has persevered through her husband's early ineptitude (indifference?) to finance, his visits to "thousands of brothels" (an exaggeration), and his Greenwich Village period wherein he only weekended with her. Early on, Fuller went through a silent meditation cycle of several years, talking just to his wife and small daughter, and not to them very much. But she had seen her mission in life and has been rewarded, now and a long the way, such as with this poem Bucky wrote during their post-honeymoon hard times:

"Lady Anne went to the store
To buy food for a week or more
She bought an egg and half a roll
And a nice red apple that she stole."

Fuller regards women as being more in tune with Universe than men, more important to its functioning. He feels that men "took woman-invented industry and ran it themselves as 'a competitive weapon for augmenting widely ranging exploitations and plunder.' "

Bucky, who advocates industrialization, is fervent for ecology; his kind of industrialization is based on ephemeralization and recycling. Interestingly, he notes that in fully industrialized countries the birth rate automatically drops to about zero population growth. Therefore, if all underdeveloped countries were fully industrialized . . . The author pictures a man of paradoxes, but they are surface paradoxes.

As he charges into his 80s, Fuller remains vigorous, and borders on the ascetic. He took up jogging (calling it dog-trotting) decades before it became fashionable, and gave up his penchant for strong drink back in the 1940s, and now sips only weak tea: 40 cups of it per day. (We are told that he goes to the bathroom hourly.)

In the mid-1960s, feeling sluggish at 190 pounds, Bucky devised a diet of three-quarters to a pound of steak, lean London broil, for breakfast, lunch and dinner, with salad and fruit to supplement the last two meals. He now weighs 140. A good guest, he buys his own meat, and Alden Hatch recalls "going out to his kitchen one morning to find Bucky tending the sizzling pan and doing a soft-shoe dance in front of the stove in sheer youthful exuberance."

Young people have always adored Buckminster Fuller and sought to make a guru of him, but this he has resisted.

"People," he says, "must believe in my principles and my ideals - not in me." But they worship him anyway. Not for his mental brillance alone, or his emphasis on "livingry," not "killingry." What it is, paradoxically again, is "Bucky's need to be loved, and his eagerness to return such love in lavish, overflowing abundance."

To quote his brother-in-law, Roger Hewlett, "Bucky will do anything, including inventing geodesic domes, to make you love him . . ."

The Much Misunderstood Woman Who Was Henry's Only True Love

THE CHALLENGE OF ANNE BOLEYN by Hester W. Chapman; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 244 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Anne Boleyn, one of history's most romantic and most tragic personalities, second wife of Henry VIII, mother of Elizabeth I, has always had, according to biographer Hester W. Chapman, a bad press.

Anne was not the scheming flirt, the temptress who lured a susceptible Henry from Katharine, his wife of two decades, and finally connived to separate him — along with England — from the Catholic Church.

Rather, Anne was Henry's only true love, a sophisticated woman of her time, a shrewd planner, a witty, artistic beauty betrayed by time and biology, who foresaw and accepted her fate.

Miss Chapman traces Anne's career, from her youthful days as a lady-in-waiting at the French Court, to her return to England, through her nine-year romance with Henry, to the day when she bends her "little neck" before the swordsman of Calais.

Here is all the brilliance and brutality of Henry's court, plus the frightening, uncontrolled intelligence and despotism of Henry himself.

In addition, Miss Chapman illuminates other villains, victims and actors in Anne's drama — Cardinal Wolsey, Katharine of Aragon, Princess Mary, Sir Thomas More, the Duke of Norfolk.

Miss Chapman's style is easy to read and the book is larded with unobtrusive scholarship, carefully documented and indexed. She avoids speculation and sets down events as they were seen by the people involved, as they wrote about them in diaries and letters.

This remarkably interesting book will fascinate followers of Tudor England.

Billie Jean King In A Double Fault

BILLIE JEAN by Billie Jean King with Kim Chapin; Harper and Row, 208 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Ron Lent.

Billie Jean King is the last word in women's tennis, but her book isn't.

True, she deftly presents an interesting character study laced with candor. Yet the book does not match her court record of excellence.

Certainly the in-depth examination of Mrs. King's intangible and tangible qualities highlight the presentation. But the book fails in its writing style. While it may be a matter of the reader's personal taste, I found the prose to be cliche-oriented and all too folksy.

For example, when mentioning her parent's attitude about tennis, she wrote (or Kim Chaplin): "I don't think my mom and dad were ever big on tennis, but they were big on helping me as much as they could."

Or, "I'd rack out (sleep) again for a few more hours. In time it got to be pretty great." This statement alluded to her vacation she took the final months of 1972 at (local angle) Stinson Beach. During the three months spent primarily at Stinson, she recuperated from the physical and emotional battles of the pro tennis circuit.

There is a second local angle in this book; it is her analysis of her friend and rival, Sausalito's Rosemary Casals. Said Mrs. King, "On the court she loved to discover new ways to hit the ball, but she never really worked hard enough on developing the kind of sound, basic game you need to reach the very top."

And the top is owned exclusively by Mrs. King. An intense, high strung competitor, Billie Jean found the climb up the mountain of success difficult. Now she is determined not to allow anyone to knock her from her perch.

She's the queen, numero uno. As the champion, she naturally, became the first women to win $100,000 during a tennis season. It was "natural," for Billie Jean to be the first to reach this monetarial plateau; Mrs. King is goal-oriented.

One such goal was squelching self-styled tennis hustler Bobby Riggs. In a pressure-packed match at the Houston Astrodome Sept. 20, 1973, Billie Jean won one for women's liberation: 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Also on the women's lib subject, Mrs. King clearly expresses her feelings about her abortion in 1971.

With such a fascinating sports personality as its subject, certainly the book merits readership — but first a rewrite.

About Carpets

by Doug Emerson

CARPET CLEANING is something that is often let go from year to year. Perhaps when the home is put up for sale professional cleaners are called in . . . and it's amazing how "new" your carpets can look when they're restored in this way.

But the point is that it costs very little to keep your carpets looking this way from year to year. Most of us become so used to seeing soiled areas of heavy traffic, or the spot Junior left on the carpet last summer, or the time so-and-so spilled a drink or Sis upset some nail polish, that we don't really see the soiling. Unfortunately, visiters do see it . . . and your home doesn't look its best.

An annual cleaning will keep any carpet looking fresh, its colors bright and clear. Moreover, the carpet will last longer, because grit and soil imbedded in the fibers cause extra wear.

All this means cleanability is one of the properties you should look into when you select a new carpet for your home. That goes for "spot cleaning" when accidents occur, as well as overall periodic cleaning to make the whole carpet live longer and better.

We have the experience to advise you on the cleanability of different carpets, as well as other factors of beauty and wear. And we have the wide selection by famous carpet manufacturers that you're looking for. Come in . . . to the carpet people.

The Opinions Of Mr. Forbes Make For Bland Reading

FACT & COMMENT by Malcolm S. Forbes; Alfred A. Knopf, 295 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

If Forbes magazine is your favorite reading, and collecting up to 25-year-old business commentary is your secret vice, then "Fact & Comment" by Malcolm S. Forbes is the book for you.

Forbes magazine always features these little editorials, some rather witty, most quite obvious. Ephemera of this sort, especially concerning transitory business news, need not be preserved between hardcovers, particularly by the prestige publishing house of Alfred A. Knopf.

Malcolm S. Forbes has some very good ideas, and must be credited years ago with being ahead of his time (for a business writer) in heralding the need for corporate responsibility in ecological cleanup. But mostly, this is very dull reading, dated material that most people have either half forgotten, or were never too excited about when the items were news.

The inquisitive reader, for example, can find out why it was such a fine idea to make John Connally the secretary of the treasury, though he isn't a cabinet member anymore and has other quite different matters now on his mind.

And for real hindsight into major issues, there are some old columns pointing out that Watergate and inflation are not good for our country.

So many of Forbes' opinions are standard board room chic, the pinstripe cracker barrel wisdom of Wall Street, that the collective tone of these pages becomes an irritating fusion of a bland mind and Olympian pretension. His sophomoric dismissal of Women's Lib, for example, advises the ladies to emulate their Italian sisters in contemporary Rome: these women lack legal rights or business opportunity of the sort common in America, yet they rule their roosts anyway through a militant and demanding mother love.

Journalism that transcends its immediate subject, the sort of thing written by Addison and Steele, Defoe, Hazlitt or Winston Churchill, prevails because of a combination of style and vision, the ability to lift the mask off the face of the past and reveal its riddles.

As "Fact & Comment" lacks all these qualities, the book leaves the reader wondering how it all came about — why it was published.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

A BIT OF A SHUNT UP THE RIVER by Desmond Cory; Doubleday, 187 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

It is unlikely that Doubleday and Co. will print a better novel this year under its Crime Club label than Britisher Desmond Cory's "A Bit of a Shunt Up the River." Nor will any other publisher of crime novels.

This corking good yarn has everything — suspense, an exciting chase, delightful humor, good writing, insights into human nature and human relationships — except mystery. But Cory isn't writing a mystery novel.

Tracy, his less than meteoric race driving career ended by the psychological and physical damage of a crash, is content running a garage when his wealthy employer orders him to drive his strong-minded daughter from London to South Wales for a meeting with her estranged husband. At the very outset there is a dead body. And it is soon evident that Tracy and his pert passenger are being followed — by one Bony Wright, escaped convict with some unfinished and deadly business with the husband at the other end of the line.

There's confrontation in Wales, a smashing one, and then a harrowing chase back to London that the movies should love. But perhaps the most interesting aspect of this very fine book is the relationship that develops between Tracy and Bony, despite their clash of goals. Cory makes his characters believable and interesting. And this is a lot of entertainment for your $4.95.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

"Shelter" is a big book in the "Earth Book" pattern with the deliberate "homemade" look now so popular as part of the trend toward a simpler life.

It is the work of Lloyd Kahn, who enjoyed success with his earlier "Domebook 2," and published by Shelter Publications of Post Office Box 279, Bolinas, "a non-profit educational organization chartered in California for the purpose of gathering information on hand-built housing and the building crafts, maintaining a network of people interested in building and shelter . . ." The affiliation of Random House as the distributor indicates the book is not a strictly local or regional endeavor.

Kahn provides photographs and drawings, including color, plus texts that cover both the newest and some of the oldest (but now virtually forgotten) building techniques, materials and designs. From caves, to domes and sculptured dwellings. It is not just a pictorial survey of housing, but also a field workbook with instructions and illustrations to guide those inspired to construct. And the directions go well beyond just the raising of the walls and the application of the roof — into septic equipment, gardening, sun and methane devices, reforestation, what the ecology-minded have come to call "survival" with an emphasis upon simplicity.

"FINDING AND Preparing Precious and Semi-Precious Stones" is a $6.95 Association Press softcover guide for the beginner in an increasingly popular hobby, written by Los Angeles educator and rockhound James A. Peterson, and covering the field from the hunt and identification of the gems to their preparation and display. There's a bibliography, and a list of gemstone sites.

Red Smith On Sports: Columns Of Consistency

STRAWBERRIES IN THE WINTERTIME by Red Smith; Quadrangle/New York Times Books, 340 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

With the death of Grantland Rice, Red Smith ascended to the unofficial title of dean of America's sportswriters.

The hallmarks of the work of the veteran New York Times columnist are consistency and versatility. Rarely, if ever, does he write a piece that is dull and uninteresting. And he can write with solid expertise upon the entire spectrum of sports and sports-related topics.

He is not a spectacular writer — not a coiner of unforgettable phrases nor a revealer of undeniable truths. He is most closely identified with the old-timers among the sportswriting profession, whose enjoyment and pleasure with the games, and the men and women who played them, were transmitted to readers, unclouded by cynicism and ego. Still, Smith's columns have never been marred by the schoolboyish naivete that has rendered silly the enthusiasms of some of his contemporaries. In short, he has struck a happy medium, questioning, sometimes critical, but never carping nor unnecessarily personally intrusive.

Whether a book comprised of reprints of Red Smith columns justifies the expenditure of $9.95 and several hours of reading time depends upon, first, whether you are a Red Smith fan, and, second, the depth of your interest in sports.

The fact that the contents are restricted to a period beginning with November, 1971, when Smith joined the Times, following the demise of the New York Herald Tribune for whom he had written long and competently, necessarily limits the range and quality of the collection. For one thing, it means that the columns deal for the most part with sports events and figures of an era when much of the color and excitement — the juice — seems to have been squeezed from athletics by a creeping commercialism. The "giants" are in the past.

But then a Red Smith column, wrote today, often harkens back to yesterday, so that we are not denied totally the pleasure of his past experiences and contacts. Babe Ruth, Knute Rockne and Ernest Hemingway are part of the book, just as are Ron Lyle, Johnny Bench and Bowie Kuhn. Chris Evert and her generation share the pages with Josh Gibson and his.

The book has been divided into sections, according to the sport. Smith's baseball pieces seem his best to us, but that may well be a matter of personal taste. The column on Pete Reiser, who while blessed with all the talents of a Willie Mays or Henry Aaron played with such total abandon and enthusiasm that he wrecked his body and career, struck a special chord with us. We remembered as we read watching Reiser crash fences and dive headlong with that same disregard for life and limb while we were a young sports editor in Wichita and the great young outfielder was playing World War II service baseball out of Fort Riley.

A couple of the longer fishing stories were originally written for Sports Afield, not the Times, and we suspect enthusiasts for the quiet sport will thoroughly enjoy Red's apparent empathy with that pursuit.

"I have no illusions about the perishable nature of this work nor any apologies for its shortcomings," the columnist writes in his foreword.

The reader should adopt that same sensible attitude. The sports subjects covered by Red Smith are something less than world shaking in their importance. But Smith covers them with a sense of proportion and objectivity. For those who enjoy this kind of thing, there need be no embarrassment. Red Smith succeeds, at least, in lifting sports from the child level to an adult stature. And, at the same time, he treats athletics with the respect that even recreation merits from a professional.

And as for the shortcomings, Red Smith commits very few errors. Professional sports' pampered darlings should do as well.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

Studios Strive To Satisfy The Craving For Nostalgia

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

The success of the Broadway musical, "Over Here," has created a nostalgic gig for the Andrews Sisters.

When the three sisters — Patti, Maxine and LaVerne — first appeared on the movie scene with Abbott and Costello, America was still at peace, but building a civilian army in readiness for the forthcoming World War II.

The three girls had an overabundance of energy and a disarming manner, and for the next two decades they were the outstanding female trio of show business, selling records by the millions.

When LaVerne died some years ago, the surviving sisters moved back into the shadows and didn't fully emerge until they were called to Broadway to recall those days of the early 1940s.

It is only natural that the success of the show should stimulate new interest in the styles of the sisters and call for a playback of some of their early recordings. These may be heard on "In the Modd" by the Andrews Sisters (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1023).

The double record package includes almost all of the tunes popularized by Patti, LaVerne and Maxine. There's the "Pennsylvania Polka" and also "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen."

And again you can hear them sing "Tennessee Waltz" and "Ciribiribin."

The set also includes songs from the Abbott and Costello show, among them "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy' and "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar."

Those who remember the Andrews Sisters in their heyday should find lasting entertainment in "In the Modd."

TWO OF THE SONGS in the Andrews Sisters album — 'Oh! Ma-Ma! The Butcher Boy" and "Beer Barrel Polka" — also are included in another excellent two record album, "The Best of the Mills Brothers, Volume II" (Famous Twinsets PAS 2 1027).

The Mills Brothers pre-date the Andrews Sisters by several years and they built a fantastic career on lively singing.

This selection includes "Ballerina" and "Bye Bye Blackbird." All of the tunes have been electronically rechanndeled to simulate stereo but this refinement is really not needed because the Mills Brothers have a way of projecting their songs into three dimensions.

A RECENT BONANZA for students of country and western music is "For the Last Time" by Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys (United Artists UA LA216 J2).

Wills originated country swing almost 40 years ago with "San Antonio Rose" and became a perennial juke box favorite as well as a barndance stalwart.

Last December Wills rounded up as many members of his original band that he could find to play his music again.

There are vocals by Merle Haggard, Leon Rausch, Leon McAuliffe, Jody Nix and Joyle Nix. "San Antonio Rose," of course, had to be included but there are other songs associated with Wills, among them "Mild Cow Blues" and "Faded Love."

Getting Rid Of Old Paint Or Varnish

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

There are several ways of removing the old paint or varnish from a piece of furniture you are refinishing.

It can be scraped or sanded off, it can be removed with such chemicals as lye, or it can be taken off with a commercial solvent-type paint and varnish remover.

I recommend that the household handyman stick to the commercial paint and varnish removers. Scraping and sanding can gouge the wood if not property done and chemicals like lye also can cause serious damage.

THE COMMERCIAL paint removers are available in many brands. They come in various thicknesses, ranging from liquid to cream to paste. I suggest that unless you are really experienced you avoid the thinnest forms and use a thicker liquid type for horizontal surfaces and cream for vertical surfaces. Try as often as is practical to place the surface you are working on in a horizontal position.

Here is how I suggest you go about it:

Spread the paint remover liberally with a brush on the surface you are working. A natural bristle paint brush is best for this purpose. Cover about two square feet at a time, letting the remover stand until the surface starts to blister or peel. This may take anywhere from five to 20 minutes, depending upon the hardness of the old finish and how many coats are involved.

WHEN THE OLD finish has softened, peel it off with a putty knife. (It is a good idea to slightly round the edges of the knife with a file so it won't gouge the wood.) If the old finish is particularly hard or consists of several coats, you may have to repeat the process several times.

It is important, as soon as the old finish has been scraped off, to neutralize the remover that has soaked into the wood; use turpentine or lacquer thinner. Then wash down the entire surface, using steel wool and working as much as possible with the grain of the wood.

Here are some hints for working difficult places that cannot be conveniently handled with a putty knife, such as rounded and fluted surfaces:

APPLY THE REMOVER as described. Then a pad of steel wool or burlap is useful for removing the softened finish. Another trick is to twist a strip of burlap into a "cord" and, with one end in each hand, work it over rounded and grooved areas. A block of wood covered with sandpaper may be useful in getting at some subborn corners.

I have successfully removed softened finish from difficult carved areas with such "tools" as an old toothbrush, an orange stick and a meat skewer wrapped in cloth.

When you have removed all the old finish and neutralized any remover that may have been absorbed by the wood, and the color of the surface is to your liking, you are ready to start refinishing according to whatever plan you may have in mind.

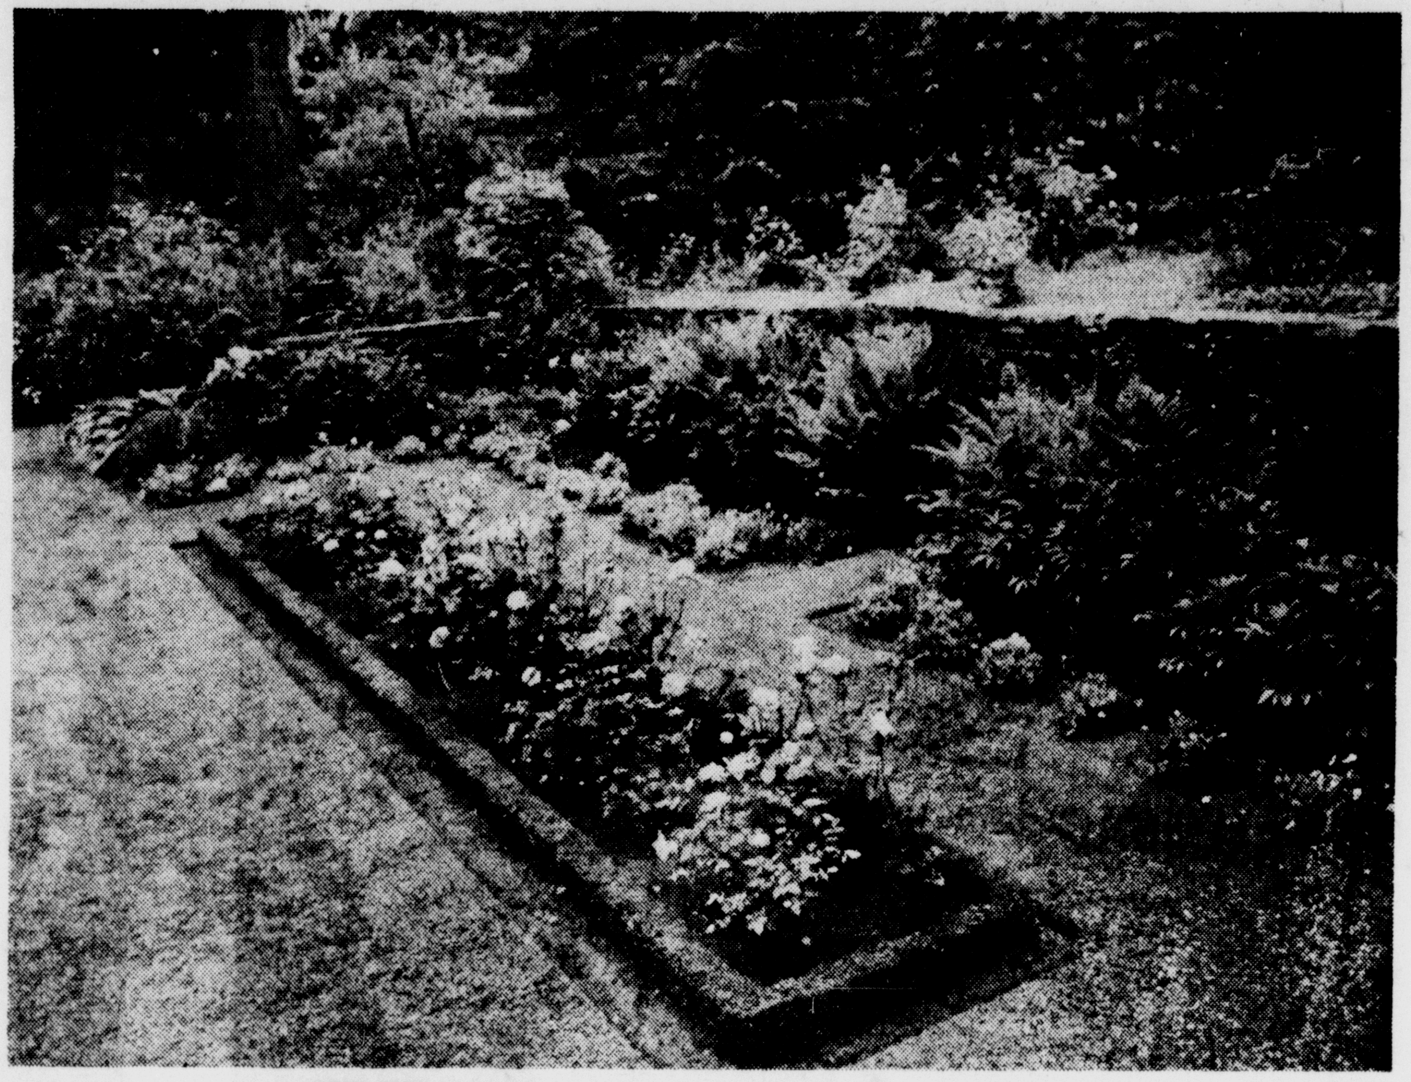
THE HOME AND YARD



HERE FERNS HAVE been used to add a lush accent to a retaining wall border. Indoors or out-of-doors, the versatile fern family has a special talent for creating an air of serenity and coolness. Thus, their increasing popularity.

For Finest In Foliage Plants, Look To The Fern Family

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

For something different in foliage plants, indoors or out, none is lovelier than the fern.

Most gardens have a good place for ferns, and indoors a sunless north window, so often a problem for the house plant enthusiast, is a fine place for them.

Have you a shady corner of the garden where you can provide moist peaty soil, friable, and fairly rich? A collection of hardy ferns will love it there. Many prefer shade, although some will tolerate sun.

YOU CAN PLANT them along woodland paths, beside a brook or garden pool, against the north foundation of the house, on stone walls, in chinks of rocks around bird baths and bird feeders, and under shade trees.

One of the easiest to grow is the Maidenhair Fern. It likes moisture, grows about a foot high, and is charming with Bleeding Heart.

The Toothed Wood Fern, which may be familiar to you in florists' arrangements, is a lacy almost fluffy plant, its fronds beautifully divided. It is an evergreen and grows about 30 inches high.

THE CHRISTMAS FERN also is an evergreen. It is so called because each frond part is shaped like a Christmas stocking. It grows two to three feet tall and is effective in a massed planting.

The Cimmamon Fern, also evergreen and tall, prefers wet swampy shade, but will also get along in dry shade.

If, however, you grow only one kind or are new at it, a good choice is the Lady Fern. Fine and delicate, it is very attractive and will tolerate some sun.

THE OSTRICH FERN is a handsome plant. It reaches four feet, sometimes more, so is not for small flower beds. Very ornamental and vigorous with a fountain of great ostrich plumes.

The Osmunda Claytoniana sends up woolly fiddleheads in spring and will unfold to fronds up to three feet high. It will grow in dry shade. It is also good for planters.

Indoors the larger ferns in planters are very decorative. Many an office or hotel foyer uses them this way.

REMEMBER THE reliable Boston Fern our grandmothers always had? It is making a big comeback, especially in planters in offices, clubs, and hotels.

I have found the Bird's Nest Fern interesting.

It doesn't look like a fern. Its long waxy leaves encircle a "nest."

Another fern that doesn't look like a fern is the Holly Fern, with leathery dark green fronds jagged along the edges like holly.

Small ferns are attractive for terrarium woodland gardens. The Walking Fern, dwarf Maidenhair, and the Creeping Polypodum vulgare are sold by some terrarium suppliers.

FOR HANGING baskets Rabbit's or Hare's Foot and Squirrel's Foot Ferns are fascinating. Feathery fronds and furry rhizomes make them different.

Ferns need moisture indoors, too. It is good to set the pots on trays filled with moist pebbles. Sprinkle the foliage, too. A layer of moist sphagnum moss on the soil can be helpful.

In spring and summer feed every two weeks with liquid fertilizer half strength. If you are potting them give them especially good drainage and a rich humusy soil — one-third each of sandy loam, peat moss or leaf mold, and coarse sand.

IN WINTER THEY can have some sun filtered by curtains or venetian blinds. If outdoors in summer, give them full shade. To control mealy bugs or scale, use wettable melathion and avoid all oil sprays.

If you wish to give your green thumb an experience, try raising Asparagus Fern from seed. Burpee has seed of Plumosis nanus, an upright grower, and of Spregeri (Emerald Feather), the kind fine for hanging pot.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q.—I will be painting the outside of my house this fall. I have painted inside rooms in the past, but this will be my first job of this kind. I have seen so many conflicting viewpoints on the kind of weather during which a house can be painted that I am a little confused. For instance, just the other day I saw one newspaper article that said not to paint when the humidity is very high, and the very sam day I saw a magazine story that said it was all right to paint on damp days. Which is correct and can you give me any additional information on when to paint?

A.—It is likely that the two stories were about two different kinds of paint. When using an oil-based paint, you should not work during a high-humidity day or when there is a film of moisture on the surface of the house. But it is all right to paint on that kind of day if you are using a latex paint. For either type of paint, do not work if the temperature is below 50 degrees Fahrenheit or above 95 degrees. It is even more important that this rule be followed when you are using latex paint. The label on the can of paint will tell you the normal drying time if you plan on a second coat, but humid weather can delay the drying period. Test the first coat by touch before you put on another. When it is thoroughly dry, it is firm to the touch and not even the tiniest bit sticky.

Q.—I was painting our kitchen when I spilled a little paint on two of the asphalt tiles on the floor. I didn't notice it immediately and by the time I did, the paint had hardened. Can I get if off with turpentine, since I used an oil paint?

A.—No. You can't use any solvent on asphalt tile without risking permanent damage to it. You'll just have to do the best you can by scraping off the paint very carefully.

Q.—I recently plastered a wall. It is all right over most of the surface, but in three or four places, there are soft spots, as though the plaster never hardened. What caused this?

A.—Soft spots generally are the result of having worked over the plaster with a trowel after the material had begun to set.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Water potted Geraniums, Begonias and Fuchsias — and other hanging basket plants — more often than you would if they were planted in the ground.

✓Plant shade trees for climate control on your property. Trees will cool, help minimize noise, and beautify at the same time. The local garden center has the trees that thrive in our communities.

✓Yellowing leaves on Azaleas, Camellias, Gardenias and other plants may be a sign of iron chlorosis. Use iron chelates or other special compounds available at your nursery to green-up the foliage.

✓Vegetables that are harvested early — before they get "old and tough" on the plant — make the best meals.

✓Dahlias should be fastened to stakes now to avoid any breakage of stalks by the heavy flowers.

✓Snip off spent blooms on your hydrangeas to relieve the shrubs of all that heavy weight and to prolong flowering.

The Oleander Is Tough, Yet It's Ornamental

It's unusual to find a shrub both attractive and tough, but in fitting that description, the oleander is a boon to gardeners throughout the state.

This shrub is quite easy to grow for it is not particular about soil, will take wind, sun and reflected heat and lives on very little water. And for good flower production it does demand high light intensity.

Of the many ways to plant the oleander, one of the most popular is as a road or driveway border. Oleanders make wonderful tub specimens for the patio and other warm outdoor living areas.

The oleander produces generous amounts of color flowers from May or June to October. Its evergreen foliage is an attractive dark green all year around.

To assure a bettter flower display and a more graceful shrub or tree, prune carefully in the early spring. Remove old flowering wood and cut some branches almost to the ground. If it's a lower growing shrub you want to pinch out tips or head slightly.

If these many handsome characteristics have convinced you that oleander is the plant for your garden or yard, see your nurseryman about some colorful varieties. For rose-red flowers there's Cherry Ripe; Mrs. Roading offers double, salmon-pink flowers, and Sister Agnes, pure white. Yellow, pink and deep red varieties are available, too.

On How To Keep Redwood Clean

Hose redwood gently to remove loose soil or wash it with warm water and detergent to remove food stains.

To eliminate soft drink stains wash with a solution of oxalic acid or clorox, then rinse.

Tighten bolts and screws annually to prevent wobbling and breaking of the wood.

For your garden furniture, solid vinyl strapping and tubing may be cleaned by hosing or with a mild detergent and water.

To help protect strapping and tubing, apply auto paste wax lightly. Some suntan lotions may permanently stain vinyl.

Lawn Retardants Are Not Too Successful

There are chemical sprays to retard lawn growth — which some home owners hope will reduce mowing. But they have not been entirely successful.

Problems arise from the need for exact applications and the fact that the spray might not affect all species equally, so that mowing would still be needed to level out unevenness.

YOUR CARES JUST GLIDE AWAY

HOW TO SPEND those leisure hours these warm and sunny summer days? Actress Heather North demonstrates one suggestion: relaxing in the backyard in the comfort of a glider swing. But first you must buy or build your glider. If you decide to build it yourself, Steve Ellingson is ready to help you with one of his patterns. Just send $1.75 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Lawn Glider Settee Pattern 369. The pattern comes full-size, so that all you have to do is trace the parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Then you're ready to sit back and swing, while your cares glide away.

Wood Plays Role In The Laying Of Concrete Slab

Straight, kiln-dried two-by-fours should be used as forms for laying a concrete slab, driveway or sidewalk.

Douglas fir or pine lumber is good for this use, and when the forms are to be left in place, western cedar is recommended.

After the area to be poured has been excavated, the forms should be placed, leveled and plumbed, then braced with sturdy wood stakes that are long enough to anchor firmly in the soil, as wet concrete is heavy.

Forms that will be reused when pouring in sections should be brushed with old crankcase oil or wrapped with waxed paper to make removal easier.

Lumber forms that will be left in place, as dividers or edging strips, can be protected on the top edge with masking tape while pouring, making removal of excess concrete easier when cleaning up.

Forms that stay in place also should be preservative-treated for longer life.

IAN CARMICHAEL as super-sleuth Peter Wimsey seeks to solve a case involving his own brother in "Clouds of Witness" in the second of a five-part series on PBS-TV.

A Biography Of Jennie Churchill

LONDON COLNEY, England (UPI) — The world might have heard a good deal more about Jennie Jerome if she had not given birth to a son so extraordinary his career overwhelmed her own remarkable life.

For the past 18 months Julian Mitchell has been trying to do justice to the beautiful, vivid and talented New Yorker who blazed her way through Victorian society, breaking hearts and rules — and raising the son who became Sir Winston Churchill.

Mitchell spent part of the time in a cellar in Oxford reading the private letters of the Churchill family, with the permission of Sir Winston's widow, 89-year-old Baroness Spencer-Churchill. The rest of it was spent writing and watching the production of seven one-hour television programs for Thames TV titled, "Jennie, Lady Randolph Churchill."

On the last day of shooting, Mitchell leaned on the parapet of the moat that surrounds ancient Salisbury Hall where Jennied lived with her second husband, George Cornwallis-West, near the village of London Colney, 30 miles from London.

This is historic country. Nell Gwynn, the orange seller whose other wares also appealed to King Charles II, was once the mistress of the hall in the fullest sense of the word. On one of the king's visits she held their baby son over the moat and threatened to drop him in unless he was given a title.

Charles promised, but to let Nell know who was boss he did not create his natural son an earl till he was 6 years old.

Lee Remick, who stars in the title role and suggested the series to executive producer Stella Richman, arrived for a photo call on a day of blazing sunshine. She wore a wasp-waisted long dress of the turn of the century.

"Wouldn't you like to wear such lovely clothing all the time?" gurgled a magazine lady.

Miss Remick acted as though her ears could not have relayed the question verbatim.

"It's wildly uncomfortable," she said sweetly. "They nipped upstairs and loosened their corsets after meals, you know. And when they didn't, they did a lot of fainting."

The series is being offered to American networks and there are strong prospects the story of Jennie's dramatic career from her teen-age years in the Paris of the 1870s to her death in London in 1921 will reach American screens, Mitchell said.

"Even at 65 she was an expensive lady," he said. "She was the sort of woman for whom the basis of life did not begin with less than 40 pairs of shoes. She bought some shoes in Rome and after her return here put on a pair with very high heels.

"Hurrying because she was late for dinner she slipped on the polished staircase, breaking her ankle. It was badly set, gangrene set in and the leg had to be amputated.

"King George V and Queen Mary were among those who sent flowers to the sickroom. One morning her nurse brought her breakfast. Jennie said: 'Nurse, I think I've broken my hot water bottle.' She hadn't. It was a fatal hemorrhage. And if there is a dry eye in the house at this scene I shall be very upset.

Mitchell said he had taken an occasional liberty with history but the series has the full approval of the Churchills. Jennie is generally portrayed as she was — strong enough to insist on marriage to Lord Randolph in the face of family opposition from the powerful Marlboroughs, and to survive the circumstances of her husband's decline from a limitless future into illness and death.

PATRICK KNOWLES becomes a victim of the weird avenger, Lionel Atwill, who goes about destroying the killers the courts set free as seen in the movie "The Strange Case of Doctor Rx," tonight at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Barbara Feldon Has A Unique Life Style

By VERNON SCOTT

A divorcee, Barbara makes her home on a 42-foot power cruiser, Cioppino, docked at Marina Del Rey.

She bought the cruiser a year and a half ago but has become a permanent resident only in the past nine months.

Barbara explains her domicile this way: "I bought the boat for weekends. But after the first weekend I decided I'd rather live here than in my house."

She still owns a seven-room dwelling in Hollywood, complete with fruit trees, reflecting pond and colorful garden.

But she prefers the boat and the continuing change in panorama — other boats gliding by, the tides, the gulls and small fish that dart around her floating home.

The boat itself is comfortably furnished. There is a full gallery but the head has a shower only. No tub.

There is a large stateroom aft with a double bed. The central cabin is spacious, all things considered. And the boat can sleep seven persons, more or less comfortably.

Barbara frequently entertains for dinner on the Cioppino but only one couple at a time to avoid giving her guests claustrophobia.

Her favorite dishes are her own version of sukiyaki chicken, onions, garlic, soy sauce, scallions, noodles, shrimp and bean curd cooked in a wok, and smorgasbord.

Indeed, Barbara said she leads a smorgasbord life, tasting this and that, traveling, meeting new people, seeing new places.

Since her divorce she has been the steady companion of producer Bert Nodello who is no stranger to the Cioppino. Barbara's other faithful companion is her pet cat of 13 years, a Siamese who answers to Yang.

Barbara hasn't seen her co-star, Don Adams, in the defunct "Get Smart" series since the show was canceled. They live in different worlds and never did have anything in common except the series.

Although she is five-feet-nine and weighs only 114 pounds, Barbara is a diet gal. She counts every calorie, even shunning beef and pork in favor of fish and chicken.

Barbara has a first rate mind and attends night classes in painting and drawing at UCLA.

Her Hollywood house displays much of her work as well as the canvases of her friends. It is a Spanish design with polished wood floors providing a rich border for her Persian rugs.

Aboard the Cioppino Barbara wears blue jeans, a blouse and boat shoes. She has a small wardrobe — there isn't much closet space on board — mostly pants, sweaters, shirts and blouses.

"Get Smart" has given her financial independence, making it possible for her to work at comfortable intervals. She appears on game shows and television specials — enjoying the travel to New York.

Only one element of her life doesn't fit Barbara's pattern. She has yet to sail her boat to Catalina — claiming she's not a good sailor.

Revival Of 'Your Hit Parade' Pleasing To Pair Of Old Ears

By ARTHUR UNGER
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

I thought there was something wrong with my ears the other evening. I was listening to pop music and I could actually understand every word of the lyric. But, then, I realized it was "I'm in the Mood for Love" and "Red Sails in the Sunset," and I was almost back in 1935 listening to the Oct. 26 survey winners on "Your Hit Parade." I wasn't dreaming though — I was watching the revival of "Your Hit Parade" (CBS, Friday, 8:30 p.m., check local listings), and I was loving every minute of it.

New 'Hit Parade' Easy On Old Ears

The original "Hit Parade" started on radio in 1935, switched to NBC-TV in 1949 where it remained through 1958, at which time it was moved over to CBS where it died the next year. Now, 15 years later, Bill Hobin, who directed the old show on NBC for three years, is producing and directing the new show for Chuck Barris Productions.

And it's all there — the bad lighting, the exaggerated phrasing, the outrageous dramatizations, the Marge Gower-type choreography, the foottapping tempo, the "hidden" numbers. The only thing missing is the breathlessness of the singers and dancers as they dashed from one production number to another in those early videotape-less days.

I must report that instead of boyish Snooky Lanson, we now have boyish Chuck Woolery; instead of girlish Dorothy Collins, we have girlish Sharalee, and instead of perky Gisele MacKenzie, we now have perky Kelly Garrett. But, you'll hardly notice the difference as they swing into "Isn't It a Lovely Day" with the phony rain pouring down, which clears up instantly as the sun emerges at the end. Or when the titles come on which read: "sTOP at HATties — 8 miles." Get it? "Top Hat" — Number 8!

It's hard to tell what part of the current "Your Hit Parade" is — I hate to use the word — camp. And what part is — I hate to use another word — nostalgia. But, I suspect a good part of the show is pretty darn — and I hate to use this word — straight.

It's as if Busby Berkeley was called out of retirement to restage "42nd Street" production numbers. Chances are he'd do them exactly the same way with, perhaps, contemporary costumes.

Well, that's what has happened to "Your Hit Parade." Seven of the numbers are from the top 10 of that particular week (a different nostalgic week will be chosen each time), and they are staged in contemporary costume or authentic period of the sketch (however the fancy strikes art director Romain Johnson and costumer Frank Novak).

The extras however — two in number — are very contemporary, with songs chosen from today's top 40, performed by the original artists in this first show, Bo Donaldson and the Heywoods singing "Billy, Don't Be a Hero," and Blue Magic singing "Sideshow."

Those choices, however, might have been made by the old dictator of the original show, George Washington Hill himself, they are so much like the extras that used to be.

"Your Hit Parade" won't bear too detailed analysis —a critical look at it might reveal that it is trying to be all things to all men, and thus tends to tumble into the generation gap between camp and nostalgia. But, then again, I think of the millions of viewers who accept Lawrence Welk without sneer or chuckle and I realize that this "Hit Parade" can really claim a contemporary validity. So, suspend your judgment for a half hour, lean back and visit another era masquerading as today. And listen . . . listen to the glorious sound of lyrics as they were written. Of course, you may not like what you hear . . . but at least you hear it.

As far as director Hobin is concerned, "the public is ready again for 'Your Hit Parade,' and I think we'll be on longer than this five-week schedule indicates. We have options with all the stars for a January continuation in case TV audiences go for it."

Why did the old show die? "As soon as Elvis Presley came along, it began to be the performer rather than the song which people paid attention to. Unless you got the performer on the show, their songs meant nothing. And even then it was often impossible to duplicate their recording — they were so dependent upon electronics. The songs themselves didn't matter anymore."

Hobin feels the new show can appeal to everybody — young and old, straight and campy. "Most important, I think, is that we play songs that people can understand. Most people just aren't used to that anymore."

Cavett Fumbles Talk To Nureyev

By ARTHUR UNGER

Whatever happened to the old Dick Cavett?

There's a long stage wait after he introduces Rudolf Nureyev, but finally "the divine Rudy" strides on, bedecked in spangled snakesskin and velvet, exuding a bravura presence which overwhelms the hysterical audience . . . and, unfortunately, Dick Cavett as well. What follows is an hour and a half of halting, cutesy-pie dialogue — no conversation, only remarks.

DICK CAVETT
Old style is gone

Dick Cavett originally made his reputation as an informed, concerned conversationalist — a listener who managed to ask intelligent questions and convince his audience that he was also interested in the answers. Most of that is gone now and we are left with a giggly, self-conscious, inadequately prepared Cavett struggling to hold up his end of the interview, reverting to groupie-type queries, tentative comments, always flirting — with the guest, the audience . . . with disaster.

That used to be Jack Paar's thing and it served him well. But where, oh where, is the bright, incisiveness of the old Dick Cavett?

Back to Nureyev — still no doubt the greatest ballet performer in the world today, a man whose name is destined to be recorded in the annals of dance with the all-time wonders. Cavett interviewed him several years ago — and now brings him back.

So what do we learn about him? That he owes a great deal to Pushkin, to Fonteyn, to Ashton, to Bruin. Why? Cavett didn't follow through. We learn that Nureyev admired Fred Astaire — "People filled their pockets with his inspiration." Colorful words? Not pursued deeply enough, although the Astaire talk is probably the area in which Cavett seems to have versed himself best.

Nureyev watches film clips — the best part of the show, by the way — and observes that the cinematographer "really cut my tootsies off."

Martha Graham? "She proves that if you stick around long enough, people will come back." Training and preparation for ballet? "I've molded my body into a dancer's body — it was difficult and painful."

Would Rudy consider a role in an American musical comedy? "Yes." Wouldn't his friends feel that was a comedown? "I don't think I would consult them."

At one point, Cavett obviously contemplates drawing Nureyev into the kind of intimate revelation which brought so much notoriety to his Bette Davis interview a couple of years ago. But Nureyev will have none of that: "Okay, we'll go 50-50. I suppose you are paid to be weird and ask weird questions."

That puts an end to the weird questions Cavett was obviously preparing to ask. So, he calls it quits with the flip adieu: "It's a shame you waited till 17 to start dancing — you might have really been something. . ." and Nureyev departs — his dazzling smile, his overwhelming presence, his bravura movement, his seeming intelligence virtually untapped. And with him departs a rare opportunity to learn a great deal more about this natural wonder of the world.

Okay, Dick Cavett, so you feel uncomfortable talking about a discipline in which you are an outsider. So bone up! Study. Prepare. Invite somebody who knows ballet to share the stage with you. But please don't invite Rudy Nureyev to your platform and then ask him Donald O'Connor questions.

In addition, you might tell your producer that it's a good idea to listen carefully to videotapes shot two months in advance and edit out inaccurate, outdated material such as your observations about the Russian dancer Valerie Panov who has since departed the USSR.

The show is not a disaster. There are interesting film clips. There are a few pointed questions, several amusing answers. And there is Nureyev. . . if nothing else, at least he is there! But it is a disappointing show when one considers what the old Dick Cavett might have done with it.

How Well Do You Know the Dark World of Dreams?

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen: An "Unknown" Texan Eyes the White House

By Hugh O'Brian: "How a Week in Deepest Africa Changed My Life Forever"

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BURT BACHARACH

Do you ever worry about losing your touch as a composer?—M. Reilly, Winnetka, Ill.

● Yes, as a matter of fact, I do. I'm doing well now, but my song-writing talent might run dry one of these days, and I want to have something to fall back on. For the past few years, I've wondered what kind of business I should enter. My profession, which puts me on the road a great deal, involves eating out a lot. So I thought it would be a good idea to invest in some restaurants. Right now I have two, on Long Island in New York. And I recently built a motel next to one of them.

FOR ROSEY GRIER

I read that you prefer needlepoint work to poker. Is that true?—M. T., Visalia, Calif.

● I usually combine the two. While I'm waiting for my buddies to play, I do needlepoint. They used to get mad because they said I delayed the game. Actually, it gave me time to think. When they figured this out, and saw the good hands I was getting, some of them started doing needlepoint too.

FOR CATHY RIGBY, gymnast

I have often heard that after using parallel bars, etc., you became as strong as a bull. True?—Susan Marsh, Albany, N.Y.

● Heaven forbid! A small calf maybe, but I'd prefer not to be likened to a bull!

FOR JACK LORD

Why do you think "Hawaii Five-O" has managed to stay on top so long?—J. Steed, Van Nuys, Calif.

● We're going into our eighth year because of a combination of things: the caring of the creator-producer Leonard Freeman, who died recently; the caring of myself, who had to take over many of the functions Leonard performed; plus the fact that we're 3,000 miles away from the network and have greater autonomy to do the things we want.

FOR RONA JAFFE

Why haven't you ever married?—Becky Weldon, Clearwater, Fla.

● It's surprisingly simple. I didn't love any of the men who asked me to marry them; and the ones I loved never asked. I'm still old-fashioned enough to believe that without love there's no reason to get married.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I know Vanessa Redgrave is politically active, but what about her sister Lynn?—N. M., Coos Bay, Ore.

● Lynn Redgrave doesn't have any political leanings or ambitions, and the fact that her sister does has no effect on their relationship. The two sisters are very close and, according to Lynn, when they meet and talk, there is so much else to discuss—such as their respective acting careers—that they ignore the political scene. Also, they feel it's wise to keep off a subject that might result in an argument. By the way, Vanessa ran for Parliament in the recent British election—and was beaten very badly.

FOR JAMES B. IRWIN, former astronaut

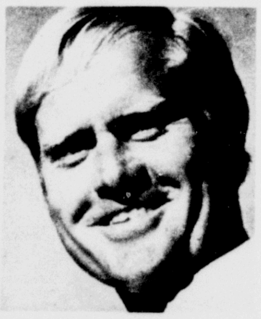
Did your trip to the moon have something to do with your decision to start the High Flight Foundation, the religious organization to which you are now dedicating all your efforts?—John Dailey, Austin, Texas

● Yes. After my journey to the moon I believed I heard God saying to me, "I have taken you this far, Jim. Now I want you to go farther." I interpreted that to mean I should go farther toward heaven in a spiritual way.

FOR JOHNNY CARSON

How much of your monologue is memorized and how much is ad-libbed?—Alan Brown, Steens, Miss.

● I have no script on the "Tonight" show, so my monologue is all ad lib in that sense. Actually I prepare it just before going on the air and have it in my head when I appear on camera.



FOR JACK NICKLAUS, pro golfer

Arnold Palmer seems to be having a problem with his game. Have you tried to help him?—Don Miller, Chicago, Ill.

● Arnie's problem is mental. He has it fixed in his mind that he's having trouble. We all go through that, but Arnie is going through it longer.

FOR CHER BONO

Are your fingernails natural or artificial?—Monica Wenner, Nicollet, Minn.

● They're real. Keeping them is not easy—I have to be very careful. I really don't take any special vitamin or apply any special treatment. I'm just careful how I use my hands.

Hugh O'Brian:

How a Week in Deepest Africa Changed My Life Forever

Ellen Blume Graham

"Dr. Schweitzer convinced me that I should put something back into the profession that gave me so much."

By Hugh O'Brian

One lazy Sunday afternoon back in 1957, I read an article in "The Saturday Review" written by Dr. Albert Schweitzer. It so impressed me that I wrote him to ask if I could visit him in Africa. About three weeks later I got a cable inviting "Dr. O'Brian and party." I don't know what made him assume I was a doctor, but I wasn't about to knock the only chance I thought I might have to see the famous humanitarian.

A short time later I landed in Douala, Africa, where I was met by a German doctor wearing a pith helmet. He took me on a short flight in a single-engine plane to a grassy airstrip near Lambarene, where we transferred to a native dugout canoe. From there, in tropical heat that reached 115 degrees, we paddled upriver. Besides the doctor and myself, there were six oarsmen, all wearing bandages on various parts of their bodies. They were lepers who contributed their efforts to repay Dr. Schweitzer for treating them.

We had to paddle upstream about a mile past the clinic, which was on the other side. Then we cut across the river, paddling like mad against the current. As we approached the hospital, I could see an old man in a white outfit moving slowly and deliberately down the hill. It was Dr. Schweitzer.

The next week was the most impressive of my life. I ate every meal with Dr. Schweitzer and his staff in the combination recreation hall-dining room. After each evening meal, Dr. Schweitzer and I spent an hour or more talking.

The first night, after he talked about half an hour, he was very tired. No wonder. He'd gotten up at six o'clock in the morning, as he did every day. I told him that I feared I was taking too much of his time and suggested we continue our discussion the next morning. Dr. Schweitzer said, "Nein," and then added, "I am very old and you are very young. You have lots of time left. I don't."

What impressed me most, and what influenced me so much, was the Doctor's total preoccupation with his work, his lack of interest in any luxury, his passion for people and his ability to make the most out of every moment of the day. His appreciation of time itself was fantastic.

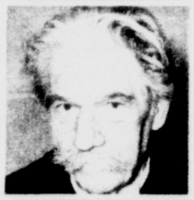
Most people who are in show business, actors in particular, are involved in charities and give many hours of time. They do benefits, give money, lend their names. But because most charities have large national offices, there is often something impersonal about them. After watching Dr. Schweitzer I decided I wanted to create something for which I was solely responsible, some worthwhile project that depended on my energy. It was the Doctor's preoccupation with youth that spawned the idea that eventually led to the Hugh O'Brian Foundation, which is dedicated to seeking out, stimulating and rewarding the leadership potential in young people.

Every year I sponsor a leadership seminar attended by about 70 boys and girls, at least one from each state, plus ten from outside the U.S. [Editor's note: Except for occasional and irregular contributions from others, Hugh O'Brian pays for this himself. All high school sophomores are eligible. The final selection is made by the National Association of Secondary School Principals in association with the United States Jaycees. For further information, write the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation, c/o United States Jaycees, Box 7, Tulsa, Okla.]

There is always a different theme to these weeklong seminars. In 1968, for instance, it was to teach the basic principles of the democratic process. Half of the boys and girls went to the Democratic convention in Chicago. The other half to the Republican convention in Miami. In 1969 they attended a seminar on oceanography in Miami. From 1970 to '73 they went to Cape Kennedy to learn about space. In 1974 it was a leadership seminar on government, held in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Schweitzer, who gave up a lucrative practice when he went to Africa, and who inspired other doctors and nurses to do the same, also convinced me that I should put something back into the profession that gave me so much. That's why I started the yearly acting awards at UCLA.

These are but a couple of the more easily described results of my pilgrimage to Dr. Schweitzer. There were other benefits.



"Since I met Dr. Schweitzer I have become more aware of the soul, of the force called God, of a life-giving energy. It is hard to describe, but religion means more to me now than before."

When I first became successful in Hollywood, it was easy to be part of the "Hollywood scene"—big house, expensive cars, the works. After I came back from Africa I began to see that I could live comfortably without being a status symbol. Today I am satisfied with my 1963 convertible. I have a house that is comfortable, but not exactly luxurious. I have a part-time housekeeper and a secretary who comes in when I need her.

"Time," Dr. Schweitzer said, "is the gift of life. Use it carefully." I suddenly found more time for my aunts, who were getting older, for my brother and his family. I spent more time alone. I haven't exactly become a hermit, but where at one time I couldn't appreciate an evening without a girl—when a relationship was meaningless unless it was physical—I now see a lot of girls who are just good friends.

Even my attitude toward marriage has changed. If I had not met Dr. Schweitzer, if I had not learned how devoted he and his wife were to each other, I would probably have gotten married a long time ago and just as probably would have divorced not once, but maybe several times. Now I realize what a marriage is really meant to be, and I am determined not to make that permanent commitment unless I find a woman without whom I simply can't live. That's the kind of companionship I'm still looking for and still believe I will find. So if I haven't made a girl happy by now, at least I haven't made a girl unhappy either. I think that is some kind of achievement.

Dr. Schweitzer's religion has left a mark on me, too. As a child I used to go to church regularly, but I enjoyed it mostly because of the association with my parents and with other kids. It was a social sort of thing. Since I met Dr. Schweitzer I have become more aware of the soul, of the force called God, of a life-giving energy. It is hard to describe, but religion means more to me now than before.

When I stepped into the dugout canoe for the trip back downriver, Dr. Schweitzer came to the water's edge. His last advice to me was that I should do whatever I could to motivate young people; to try to do whatever I could as an individual, no matter how small, because he firmly believed that individuals could eventually move mountains.

He certainly proved it.

AT LAST! A DOCTOR WHO SAYS:

Take Food, Not Medicine, If You Suffer from Any One of These Ills!

"Why do I avoid prescribing drugs?", says this brilliant and controversial physician, who has cured literally thousands of patients with nothing more than ordinary food alone!

"For these four vital reasons"—

1. Because drugs do not produce health. They merely mask the symptoms of a disease . . . cover up the condition, while the body struggles on valiantly to cure itself.

2. This is the reason why so many men and women, of all ages, no sooner fight their way out of one ailment, than they fall right into another. Why they are always "half-sick". Why they never really know what it means to be completely free of pain, in glowing health. Because they, and their doctors, do nothing more than merely fight off each new attack, and never drain out the poison that is left from that attack, or rebuild the vital weakened tissue before it can fall prey to a new disease!

It Is "Tissue Weakness" That Opens The Door To One New Disease After Another! And NO Drug—Only Food—Can Build REAL TISSUE STRENGTH Again!

3. The lasting way to fight disease, then, is not just to counter-attack each new symptom in its turn . . . but to build such sheer physical strength into each threatened cell of your body that the organism that causes that disease is either destroyed, or rendered harmless, the very instant it enters your body!

4. This is done in two ways: First, to use a medical-diet to drain out the poisons that make your body weak today. And, finally, to use a second, even more powerful medical-diet to pour Super-Nutrients—Nature's own medicines—into every crippled organ of that body . . . not only to force out that specific disease, as fast as humanly possible, but also to leave that organ perhaps even healthier than before it was first attacked! For example—

See How This NATURAL Method Has Worked—in Thousands Of Case Histories, From Every Walk Of Life, And With Almost Every Ailment You Can Imagine!

We shall let Dr. Nittler's patients speak for themselves:

"When I came to you I suffered from swelling and tingling of extremities, almost constant hunger, periodic weakness, great sensitivity to glare and loud noise . . . Since becoming your patient I find myself energetic and alert until nearly midnight, awake fully by 7:30 or 8 each morning, in good spirits, not sluggish, and continuing throughout the day glad to be alive, performing challenging tasks!"

"Before I became your patient, I had visited several skin specialists hoping to find help in the removal of what appeared to be growths on my face. Biopsies were taken; result negative. I asked how to get rid of these growths; how to prevent their growing back. I received a shrug of the specialist's shoulder (later, his bill!); he didn't know! Dr. Nittler took one look at the area involved and prescribed (natural) medication for external application which within one week's time cleared up the difficulty. It has not returned."

And Still More Thrilling Results! All Told In The Patient's Own Documented Words!

"However, on Easter Sunday, March 29, 1970, I suffered not only another occlusion, but an acute cardiac arrest. This was preceded by three days of intense weariness, fatigue and restlessness . . . Only extreme good luck made it possible for me to write these words . . . They (his regular physicians) believed open heart surgery to be the only hope for giving me a normal life span . . . It was at this point that I was referred to Dr. Nittler . . . after his initial examination and after reviewing my medical history . . . he started me on his "basic heart program". . . Within weeks, I noticed great improvement . . . an increased surge of well-being with each passing week. My family doctor continues to monitor my case. He cannot, at this point, rule out the open heart surgery recommended by his peers, but he is honest enough to admit I've shown great improvement. He says my heart is beating more slowly and stronger and that everything sounds good. My laboratory tests are all normal . . . I'm looking forward to returning to work and a normal productive life."

"I've been subject to asthma all my life. It would come with a cold or when I laughed or exercised too hard. The situation became dramatically worse when we moved to Santa Cruz in 1966. For some reason I'd catch a cold every four to six weeks . . . Only when I got it, it would go to my chest, develop into asthma, and I could hardly breathe. I was fed up with being sick and tired all the time . . . So I went through Dr. Nittler's whole program . . . Now (1971) the few colds I catch are very mild. I can't even remember the last time I had asthma with or without a cold!"

"In the latter part of November past, I broke out in an allergic dermatitis—severe hives . . . in addition to the hives, I would get a severe pain in an area above the right kidney . . . It was an acute shattering pain that immobilized me. I was next given cortisone. After 24 hours this would lessen the severity of both hives and pain. As long as I continued with cortisone . . . I was fine, but when I stopped, severe hives and pain recurred. Then back to cortisone for four or five days, followed by hives and pain. I seesawed back and forth in this manner for several weeks . . . A friend of mine gave me Dr. Nittler's phone number and begged me to call him. . . . Then on the tenth day under Dr. Nittler's care, something wonderful (to me, a miracle) happened—I was free of my ailments! A staggering weight had been lifted from both my shoulders and my wife's . . . Now I am in the thirteenth month after the doctor's care, enjoying the best of health and feeling great."

And Literally Thousands Upon Thousands Of Case Histories More! ALL STEMMING FROM NATURAL "SUPER-FOOD" TECHNIQUES LIKE THESE, THAT YOU CAN USE TOMORROW IN YOUR OWN HOME!

Again, to list only a few examples of the specific, step-by-step "Super-Food" Treatments given you in this great book:

Home treatment for constipation that works through your skin, and removes internal poisons, painlessly and automatically, at the same time it restores normal functions.

How to increase the blood flow (and therefore the life-giving oxygen) not only to your heart tissues, but your entire circulatory system. (As just one side-benefit of this new, natural therapy, cold feet simply feel warm and good again!) This process automatically lowers the work load of your heart, and your lungs, and so, as another marvelous side-benefit, almost immediately diminishes the ever-increasing shortness of breath that plagues most people!

How to get rapid relief from gallbladder pain. A treatment that also may enable you to actually, painlessly pass a stone or two (and get rid of them for good). And, at the same time, stimulate the flow of bile from your liver, and begin simultaneously stomach-healing food-therapy.

Why hemorrhoids do not have to be endured any longer! A simple capsule that may yield apparent benefits in a day or two, with restoration of normal function and comfort in a few weeks, just as it has in case after case in Dr. Nittler's own files!

How to keep from being poisoned by commercial food sprays. This method simply removes the spray from fruits and vegetables—in minutes!

A new way to brush your teeth that costs nothing. And that greatly increases your powers of digestion!

How, if you suffer from an acute illness, you can actually feed your body healing food-ingredients through the skin. That go to work to help you, in seconds!

Liver Detoxification! Follow These Simple Rules, AND PAIN-CAUSING POISONS LITERALLY POUR OUT OF YOUR BODY!

The best and most ancient method of healing wounds. (Animals do this instinctively. But we've forgotten it.)

A do-it-yourself prostate massage that involves only a simple motion with the legs and soles of your feet . . . plus a little-known and delicious food that greatly aids in the normal function of this important gland.

What to do for repeated violent pains in the chest (called Intercostal Neuralgia, and often mistaken for heart trouble or even attack). How to tell the difference at once. And then use a simple natural spray that relieves this torturous pain in minutes, for hours!

The inexpensive food that has fantastic results with cold, and even flu! As Dr. Nittler says: "This remedy alone cures many cases of flu."

Why Dr. Nittler dares to say: "I have known very severe long-standing cases (of Athlete's Foot) respond dramatically after one application"!

And why he also says: "I have seen a deep nasty boil on a cheek drain through the skin in one night with the use of this (natural food product). The infection was on the pad, there was no infection left in the boil and no wound visible."

PLUS: emergency treatments for burns that prevent scarring . . . a simple remedy for poison ivy that works . . . how to melt away warts (and even some brown spots) . . . a non-prescription product (as are all the other remedies given here) that has a wonderful healing effect of the mucous membranes of the intestinal tract . . . home remedies for internal parasites . . . what you must do, at once, for diarrhea . . . how Dr. Nittler treats ulcers . . . how to rebuild weak stomachs, without aggravating them . . . how to break fever in emergencies, especially in children . . . the tested routine to follow for any virus infection . . . strength-foods for every part of the body . . . how your body can build up its own reserve supply of nutrients to fortify its natural resistance in terms of stress or epidemic . . . weight-reducing without tears . . . the most effective treatment ever invented for hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) . . . and much, much more!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Allan H. Nittler, M.D., received his diploma in medicine almost thirty years ago from the University of Cincinnati . . . has been associated since then with both the United States Army and the San Francisco City and County Hospital. He was one of the first physicians to recognize the need for vitamins in medical therapy and the radical difference in effect between synthetic and organic vitamins in therapeutic dosage. He is a frequent contributor to various magazines and journals, and is recognized today as one of the leaders of the new medical science of preventive nutrition as a major factor against both fatigue and disease.

True or False: Women's dreams differ appreciably from men's dreams. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If most of your dreams are unpleasant, it's a sign you're neurotic.

2. Daytime dreams – such as those occurring during an afternoon nap—tend to be entirely different from nighttime dreams.

3. The younger you are the more you dream.

4. Women's dreams differ appreciably from men's dreams.

5. It's perfectly normal to have nightmares.

6. If you really want to know what you have dreamed, you must record it as soon as you wake up.

ANSWERS

1. False. Unpleasant dreams are par for the course, and perfectly normal. A study of the dreams of more than a thousand men and women college students showed that only about one dream out of four was pleasant. And an appreciable percentage were downright fearful.

2. True. Studies at the University of California show that daytime dreams tend to be uninteresting, so-what productions, short on action and excitement, and with tedious and commonpla scenes and happenings. Nocturnal dreams were found to be much more bizarre, emotional and romantic, more action-packed.

3. True—as evidenced by studies, conducted by a team of University of Florida dream researchers, which show that the younger you are, the more time you spend dreaming. By the time you reach adulthood, dream time has tapered off sharply—with the result that you dream only about half as much after you leave your teens as you did as a young child. When adulthood is reached, dream time stops diminishing and becomes more or less constant.

4. True. A psychological study based on 500 male and 500 female dreams has shown that "the contents of the dreams of men and women are quite different, and that while women frequently dream about being indoors and in familiar surroundings, . . . men's dreams are more adventurous and feature more physical activities." Fifty percent of the aggressive encounters in men's dreams featured brawls, fisticuffs and similar acts of violence. However, a study of boys and girls of high school age found that, contrary to expectations, many girls expressed more aggression in their dreams than boys. It was concluded from this that "girls can be as or more aggressive than boys when they are permitted to be so."

5. True. Nightmares are something that happens to most people now and then. In one study of a college-student population, for example, it was found that 86 percent experienced nightmares. Frequent repetition of this type of dream, however, may occur in connection with deep-seated emotional conflicts.

6. True. As Miami University psychologist Dr. Alvin R. Mahrer, who has made a special study of dreams, observes, "Using a tape recorder next to my bed, I am often surprised by the differences between what I later think I had dreamed and the actual content of what was recorded." His advice: Record a dream as soon as possible, describing in detail every thought and idea that occurred during the dream, especially during moments of peak feeling. Incidentally, dream studies show that the more abruptly you awaken, the more vividly you'll remember what you were dreaming about. A gradual awakening tends to make a dream become fuzzy.

To the 56,000,000 people who smoke cigarettes.

A lot of people have been telling you not to smoke, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine. But smoking provides you with a pleasure you don't want to give up.

Naturally, we're prejudiced. We're in the business of selling cigarettes.

But there is one overriding fact that transcends whether you should or shouldn't smoke and that fact is that you do smoke.

And what are they going to do about that?

They can continue to exhort you not to smoke. Or they might look reality in the face and recommend that, if you smoke and want low 'tar' and nicotine in a cigarette, you smoke a cigarette like Vantage.

And we'll go along with that, because there is no other cigarette like Vantage.

Except Vantage.

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

Not that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. (But you probably wouldn't like the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette anyway.)

The plain truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

But Vantage is the only cigarette that gives you so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

So much flavor that you'll never miss your high 'tar' cigarette.

COOKBOOK

You may be on a holiday, but your family's appetites aren't! Here's a collection of simple recipes that can be turned out quickly so your own leisure time can be at a maximum.

Great Outdoor Recipes for Boat, Camp or Backyard

Bill Holland

Food ideas to charm captain and crew: steaming mugs of "Warm-Up," tempting "Chicken-in-a-Roll," a plate of "Spaghetti With Clam Sauce" and the "Day's Catch" with a special sauce.

Warm-Up

1 can (10¾ ozs.) tomato soup, undiluted
1 can (10½ ozs.) beef broth, undiluted
1 cup water
⅓ cup vodka*
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon hot-pepper sauce

1. Combine all ingredients in saucepan. Heat just to boiling, stirring occasionally. Serve in mugs. Makes about 4 cups, 4 servings

*Variation: Omit vodka; increase water to 1 soup can.

Editor's note: One of my doctor friends loves to mix up soups on his 30-foot cruising sailboat. This "Warm-Up" is his choice to chase the chills on a cold, damp morning.

CHICKEN-IN-A-ROLL

2 cans (5-oz. size) boned chicken or turkey
1 jar (5 ozs.) Neufchâtel cheese spread with pimientos, room temperature
2 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
1 cup finely chopped apple
¼ cup sweet-pickle relish
¼ teaspoon onion salt
6 individual hero rolls

1. Drain broth from chicken, reserve. Chop chicken.
2. In medium bowl, gradually blend reserved broth into cheese. Stir in chicken, eggs, apple, pickle relish and onion salt.
3. Cut a thick slice from one end of each roll; hollow out soft center. Fill each hollow with about ½ cup chicken mixture. Wrap in foil or plastic film and refrigerate, if not serving immediately. Makes 6 sandwiches

Editor's note: This recipe was given to me by a woman who does a lot of boating and fishing with her airplane-pilot husband. She finds the rolls easy to eat in-the-hand.

SPAGHETTI WITH CLAM SAUCE

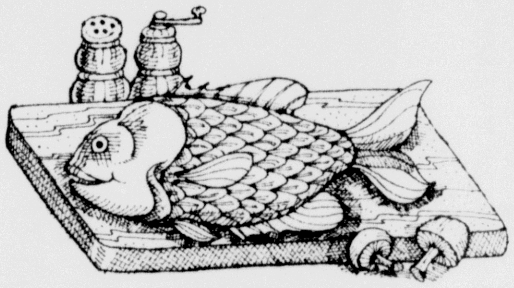
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning or oregano, crushed
2 cans (10¾-oz. size) tomato soup, undiluted
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon hot-pepper sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
3 dozen small raw clams, scrubbed
½ cup water
½ lb. spaghetti, cooked

1. In 2-qt. saucepan melt butter; add onion and Italian seasoning. Cook, stirring, 5-8 minutes, until onion is tender.

2. Stir in soup, water, hot-pepper sauce and garlic powder. Heat to boiling, stirring. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered 10 minutes to blend flavors; stir occasionally.

3. Meanwhile, place clams and ½ cup water in large covered skillet or saucepan. Heat to boiling. Cover and let boil until clams steam open; drain. Add clams to sauce. Serve with spaghetti.

Makes about 3½ cups sauce, 4 servings



DAY'S CATCH

2 lbs. fresh fish, cleaned (bass, trout, etc.)
Cornmeal
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ ozs.) mushroom soup, undiluted
⅓ cup water
1 tablespoon ketchup
2 teaspoons parsley flakes
½ teaspoon dillweed
Hot cooked rice

1. On waxed paper, lightly coat fish with cornmeal.

2. Heat butter in skillet until hot but not smoking. Add fish and cook over medium-high heat until fish is browned on both sides and flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove to serving platter, cover with foil to keep warm.

3. In same skillet combine golden mushroom soup, water, ketchup, parsley flakes and dillweed. Heat, stirring to loosen browned bits. Pour into sauceboat, serve with fish and rice.

Makes 1¾ cups sauce, 4 servings

Editor's note: We found that cornmeal is a favored ingredient in fish-frying on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Makes as many as desired

Your baby's first foods should be plain and simple.

When your baby nears his first month, his world begins to broaden. Eyes begin to follow light . . . tiny fists unfold . . . as he discovers the world around him.

And soon it's time for one of the most unique experiences of all . . . the introduction of solid foods.

It's important that your baby begin on the simple foods. Traditional starters are single-grain cereals . . . one-fruit juices . . . plain strained meats. They'll make up the basic diet for your baby, not only helping to provide adequate nourishment, but also helping to broaden his tastes.

Keeping to the simple varieties at the beginning is important, too, in helping you and your doctor note any unusual reaction to certain foods.

How do you know your baby is ready for solids? It depends on individual needs and your doctor. Now the question is, which food will be used as a starter? For most babies, it's cereal.

Starting with cereal. Gerber single-grain cereals are excellent choices. They have an especially smooth texture. And the flavors are pleasantly bland, the way babies prefer them.

Rice and Oatmeal are the traditional cereals recommended. Like all Gerber dry cereals, each is enriched with iron, thiamin, and other important B-vitamins.

When first introducing cereals, it's a good idea to make the mixture quite soupy (4 or 5 tablespoons of milk or formula to 1 tablespoon of cereal). As baby gets used to the mixture, you can gradually make the cereal thicker.

Meats provide important protein. Simple strained meats are the best starting meats. And Gerber meats are high in the body-building protein that your baby needs during his first year—his fastest year of growth.

Gerber meats are lean and moist. They're processed the Gerber way to retain natural juices and lower the fat level, when necessary.

Time for variety. Your baby's interest in food at 6 months is likely to be higher than it will be at one year, so this is an ideal time to introduce him to a variety of foods.

Let your baby try one new food at a time. Small portions at first, then gradually increase the serving. And if you serve the new food at the beginning of a meal, when he's hungry, he'll probably be more ready to accept it.

Work for a balanced daily diet, including milk and milk products; meat and other protein foods; vegetables and fruits; cereals.

Feeding tips. Should you heat the baby food? Unless your baby likes it that way, it's not necessary. Try warming vegetables and meat, serve fruit and dessert at room or refrigerator temperature. Fruit juices should not be heated; it might destroy the Vitamin C.

Remember, too, that at the beginning, your baby will probably not be eating a full jar of food. So when you don't expect to use it all at one feeding, transfer the portion to be fed to a serving dish. Cover and refrigerate the unused portion. Try not to feed your baby directly from the jar.

And do relax. These are the times when your baby will form associations with food that will stay with him all his life. When mealtime is a happy sharing time, your baby will have a feeling of security and belonging.

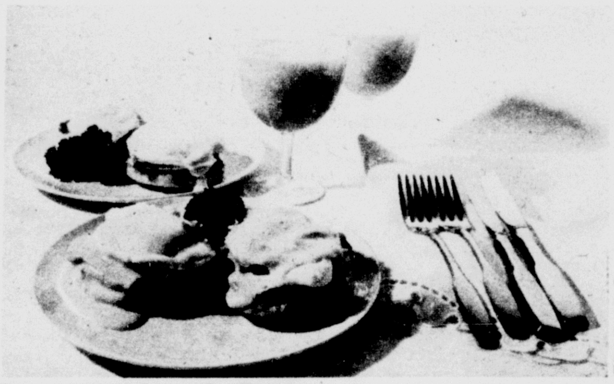
The World's Most Elegant Breakfast: Eggs Benedict



Elizabeth Gee

For pampered people: Frosty orange juice in giant goblets and perfect "Eggs Benedict" beckon the summer sleepyhead.

Whether you've made this recipe before or you're a novice, you'll love our super-easy recipe for "Blender Hollandaise Sauce." It makes the whole production fun!

EGGS BENEDICT

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 pkgs. (8-oz. size) sliced Canadian bacon
Water
2 tablespoons vinegar
8 eggs
4 English muffins, fork-split and lightly toasted
Blender Hollandaise Sauce (recipe below)
4 sprigs parsley

1. Heat butter in electric skillet until melted. Sauté Canadian bacon slices in hot butter until lightly browned on both sides. Place on foil, cover and keep warm.

2. Poach eggs: Pour off fat from electric skillet, wipe clean with paper towel. Pour in water to depth of 1 inch, add 2 tablespoons vinegar to water. (The vinegar helps solidify the egg white.) Heat water to simmer, with bubbles rising and breaking just below surface.

3. Break eggs one at a time into the simmering water. (The fresher the eggs the higher and prettier the whites will be.) Baste eggs gently with simmering water, using large spoon. Cook until whites are firm, yolks soft.

4. Lift eggs gently from water with slotted spoon, draining liquid off eggs and blotting them with paper towel.

5. Meanwhile arrange Canadian bacon slices on toasted English muffins. Place 2 halves on each heated plate. Top each with a poached egg. Spoon a little Blender Hollandaise Sauce over each. Garnish with parsley. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings

BLENDER HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash salt
2 drops Tabasco sauce
½ cup (1 stick) butter or margarine

1. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and Tabasco in warm blender container. Turn motor on and off at medium speed, just to blend.

2. Heat butter in small saucepan until bubbling and very hot.

3. Remove blender cover, turn motor to high speed; drizzle in hot butter slowly until all is added. Turn off blender. Serve warm. Makes about 1 cup

TIPS FOR PERFECT HOLLANDAISE

1. Yes, this is the same hollandaise sauce that is traditionally painstakingly prepared over simmering water in a double boiler. As you can see, this electric-blender method makes slow hand beating unnecessary.

2. To keep Blender Hollandaise warm, set blender container in pan of warm water. Just before serving, blend again to freshen.

Man to Watch

Senator
Lloyd Bentsen
The Dark-Horse Texan Who Wants to Be President

Lloyd Bentsen does not believe in playing coy. Barely past the halfway mark of a freshman term in the U.S. Senate, the tall, tanned Texan looks, talks and acts like a presidential candidate. He even has a $365,000 campaign treasury to nurse the inclination.

"Am I testing the waters?" he tells those who ask him. "Sure I am. Would I like to be President of the United States? You bet!"

It is a dream that most Washington insiders would have hooted at three and a half years ago when the 53-year-old Democrat entered the Senate with a reputation as an arch-conservative. But no one is laughing these days. The advance notices were quickly cast aside when Bentsen began lining up against Senate filibusters and even supporting end-the-war legislation. Hard work, moderate political stances and a striking ability to get opposing camps together mark his style.

Bentsen—whose wife is called B.A. (for Beryl Ann)—was first elected to the House back in 1948 at age 27. He was the youngest freshman in that class, thanks to a campaign that openly borrowed its slogans from John F. Kennedy's first congressional race two years earlier. The energetic Texan served three terms as a protégé of Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Texas), then went back home, where he made himself a Houston millionaire as head of a financial conglomerate called Lincoln Consolidated. He decided to run for the Senate in 1970 because "I want to be remembered for something besides my bank balance."

The reentry began with a bruising primary battle against the liberal Democratic incumbent, Ralph Yarborough. Bentsen, a close associate of Lyndon B. Johnson and John B. Connally from earlier days, won narrowly, but the campaign, he confesses wryly, left many voters thinking of him as "somewhere to the right of Attila the Hun."

Headed back to Washington, Bentsen hired a consulting firm at his own expense to study some of the most smoothly run Senate offices and help him organize his own. It is regarded as a model of efficiency.

Bentsen woke up the Senate establishment in 1972, when he led the fight against a speedup of the Trident submarine system and did his homework so well that he very nearly won. More recently, he won high marks for his work in getting pension-reform legislation through the Senate, where it had been bogged down for years in a jurisdictional squabble between rival committees. Those who worked with Bentsen say his grasp of the technicalities of pensions was amazing.

> "I want to be remembered for something besides my bank balance."

Liberals still regard Bentsen warily. He hotly opposes school busing. He helped fight off a "windfall profits tax" on oil companies. But Senate elders are highly impressed. "When we're up against him, we know we have to work," says Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott. "He's a heavyweight." Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield has been speaking of Bentsen as presidential timber for months.

Bentsen is still a very dark horse. A Harris poll in January indicated that no more than two percent of the nation's Democratic voters know who he is. But that doesn't bother Lloyd Bentsen. It's the same percentage that Texans gave him in 1970 when he first announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate. Sometimes, he says, it helps to have "a new face." fw

WILL THIS TALISMAN BRACELET BRING YOU GOOD LUCK?

For ages past the tribes of Kenya have thought so.

ORIGINALLY created with intricately knotted elephant hair, these bracelets were thought to inherently possess good luck and were often given by tribesmen to hunters after a successful elephant hunt.

Later, made in multi-strand gold, silver and copper wire, they became talismans of good fortune for either sex in finding a mate . . . getting and keeping good health . . . and success in any enterprise.

Can you solve the riddle of its ancient design?

The first question people will ask you about this Talisman bracelet is, "How do you take it off?"

When you mysteriously slip it off your wrist, you'll be asked more:

Is it all one piece of wire? Where does it start . . . where does it end? Does it really give you good luck?

And why have elephant hair styled bracelets suddenly become so overwhelmingly desired?

As old as Africa . . . as new as today!

Based on the original ancient design from the tribes of Kenya, these bracelets have been re-created in 5-strand copper, silver-plate and gold-plate wire. These handmade bracelets have an untamed, sophisticated look that is sure to attract attention wherever you go.

One of the most ingenious features of these unusual bracelets is that they're completely adjustable and look as well on men as they do on women.

At last at a price you can afford!

Only wearing these bracelets can show you how superior they are to any elephant hair bracelets you've yet seen.

The handmade feeling . . . the unusual knots . . . the way each bracelet adjusts . . . the mystery of its design can only be experienced by actually wearing one of these bracelets. The good luck is not guaranteed, but complete satisfaction is.

Please compare them with the $40 . . . $50 . . . and $100 elephant hair bracelets you've seen. Unless you feel these Talisman bracelets are superior, return for no cost.

Only $3.98 for the copper, $4.98 for the silver-plate, $5.98 for the gold-plate—or $11.95 for the entire collection.

Please rush me the following Talisman Elephant Hair Styled Bracelets on no-risk, 10-day trial. If not delighted, I may return for full refund.

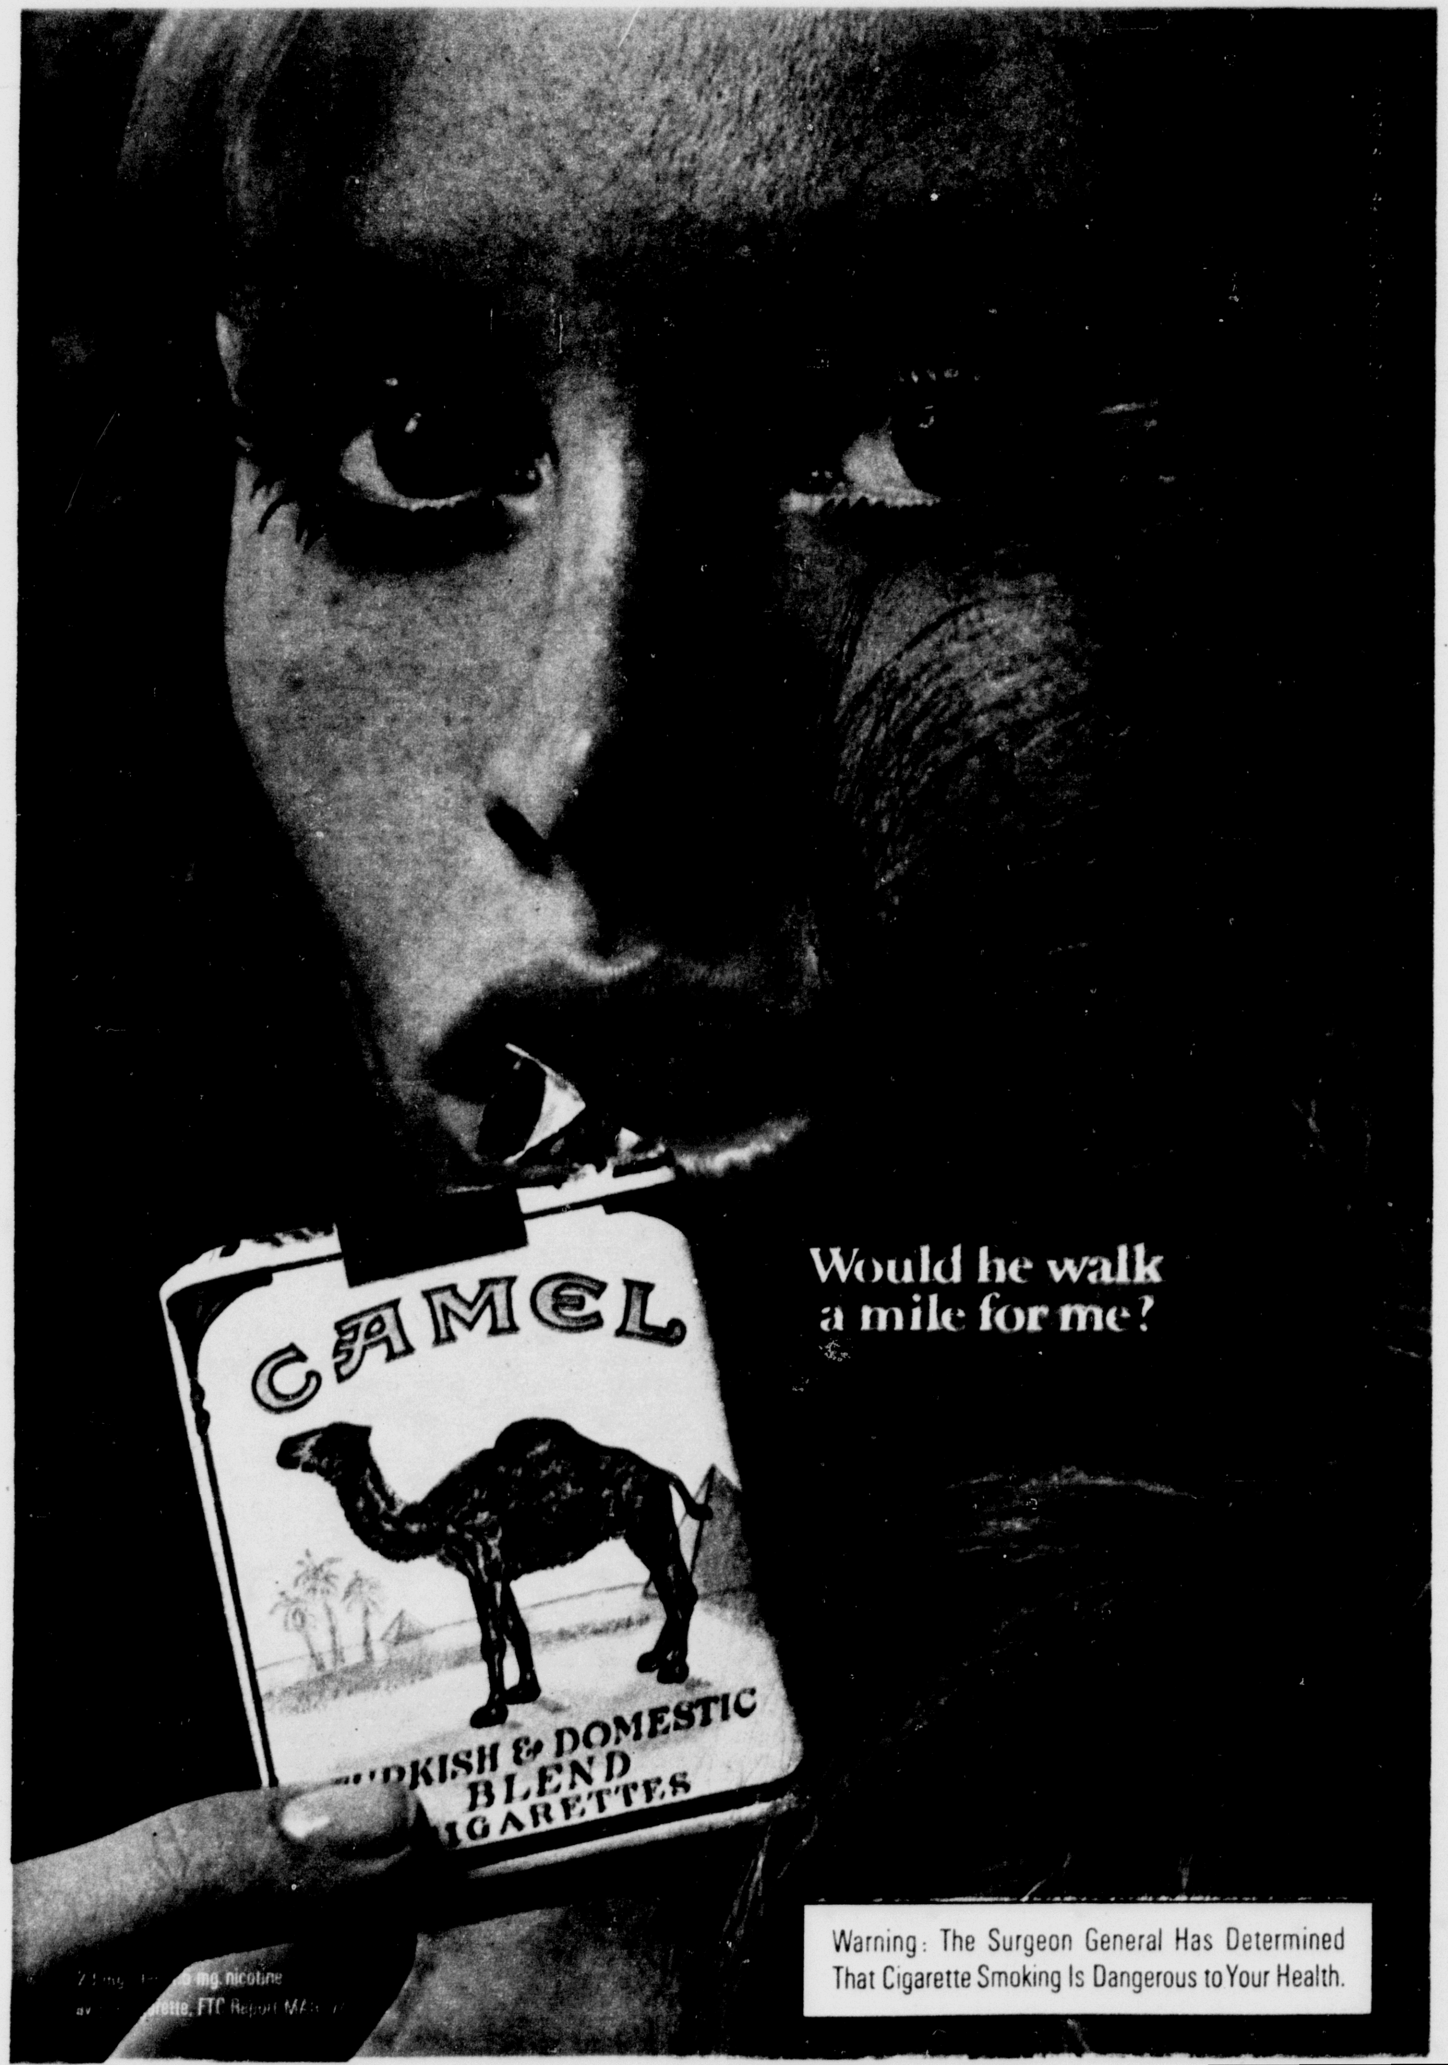
Jeff Burroughs of the Rangers:

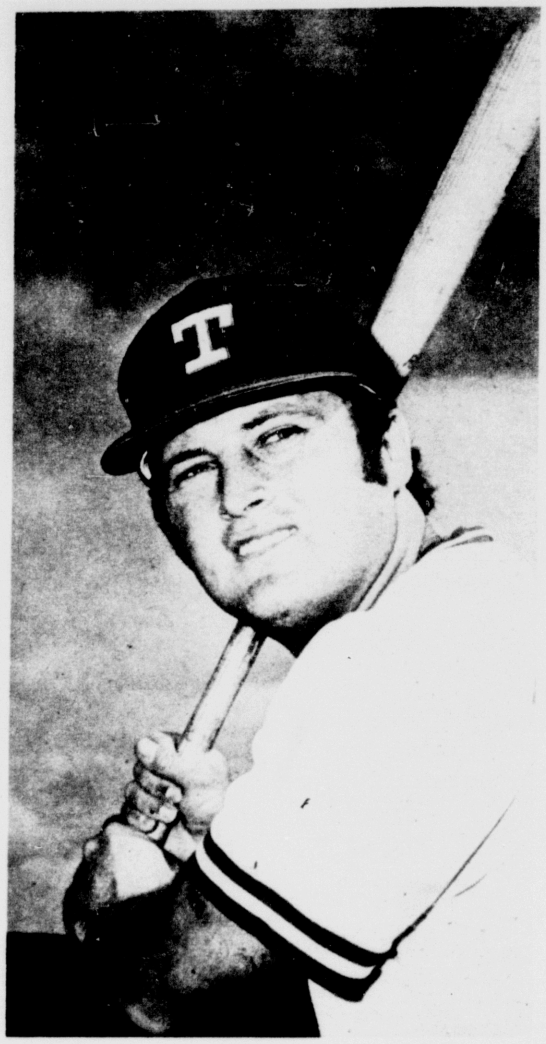
Henry Aaron—Watch Out!



CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES
Would he walk a mile for me?

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

[illegible] mg. nicotine av. [illegible] cigarette, FTC Report [illegible]



When Jeff Burroughs of the Texas Rangers blasted 30 home runs (including three grand slams in ten days) in his first full major-league season last year, people began to take notice. And this year, as he continued his strong home-run pace and was batting over .300 at mid-season, it became clear that here was a budding superstar. Manager Billy Martin says the 23-year-old Burroughs has the best chance of any current player to surpass the one-season homer record of 61, and some baseball buffs have expressed the opinion that he can eventually catch up to Henry Aaron's all-time homer total. Burroughs says, however, that such speculation is premature. . . . Burroughs is also a golfer. He teamed up with Denver football player Bob Anderson to win the American Airlines Golf Classic last spring. His manager allows him to play golf during the regular baseball season provided he finishes before noon. (Ted Williams, former manager of the Rangers, used to fine his players $1,000 if he caught them playing golf during the baseball season.) . . . Burroughs, who comes from Long Beach, Calif., was baseball's No. 1 draft choice in the 1969 selections. He batted .358 during his first minor-league year in Wytheville, Va., before moving up the ladder. . . . Burroughs' teammates felt he would have hit 40 circuit blows last season except for the fact that the Rangers' park has strong winds blowing in from right field, which cause long drives to fall into outfielders' gloves. This year, the right-field fence was moved in ten feet. Burroughs insists it wasn't done as a special favor for him. "It makes things fairer for all power hitters," he says. "Also, fans like to see more home runs hit by players on both sides, so it creates more spectator interest."—By Barry Abramson

Treat Him At Home With Veterinarian's Medication

Veterinarians have used SULFODENE to treat dogs' skin troubles. In 9 out of 10 cases tested, results proved remarkable. Why? Veterinarians explain dogs' skin is thinner than humans' and germs that attack dogs' skin are different from human bacteria. SULFODENE helps destroy these dog germs. Just pat it on. It's painless, won't sting or stain. Also use SULFODENE SHAMPOO. It's specially medicated to remove scales and help keep dog's skin healthy. Both available wherever fine pet products are sold.

Each superb figurine is individually hand painted on the finest quality porcelain, each is approximately 8" tall and each captures fully the Rockwell charm and whimsy.

Special Price and an Extra Rockwell Bonus!

The regular price for the set is $300 and the single price $85. In this special offer you may buy the set for only $225—a savings of a full $75. A single figurine is only $75 — a savings of $10.

As a special bonus we are including FREE with any order of these figurines a fabulous 12" x 9" 208 page Norman Rockwell book with over 500 Rockwell illustrations, many in full color. Quantities are strictly limited so please order early.

CERTAINLY 1974 is the year of the streakers! And, of all people, it's Norman Rockwell who has captured all the spirit and the essential innocence of this latest American phenomenon. Rockwell immortalizes streaking forever – in the purest commemorative china.

This is THE collector plate that's streaking its way to becoming the most important limited edition issued this year, and would you believe it -- Rockwell, prophet that he is, painted our 1974 "Streakers" over 50 years ago! This charming painting first appeared on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post way back in 1921 – and it was called the "Old Swimming Hole". You can see Red in the lead, with shirt a-flying, and the Alfalfa type freckle-faced lad tied for second place along with his dog, while bringing up the rear is their chubby friend with cheeks aglo a-huffin and a-puffin.

A First Edition Work of Incomparable Beauty

This first edition is produced in an extremely limited quantity on Gorham's finest china. Rockwell's art is faithfully rendered with all its vibrant colors and warmly human details with the rim hand painted and hand rubbed with 24KT gold. Each plate, of course, bears the famous Rockwell signature.

Significant Investment Potential and a Wonderful Gift

Collectors have been quick to recognize the potential of anything by Rockwell. The Rockwell/Gorham "Butter Girl" plate issued last year at $14.95 sold out in a few short months and now brings up to three times the original price. This lovely plate is sure to be sold out fast too and when the limited quantity produced is gone, there will be no more. So please order early while our supplies last.

Delightful Special Bonuses

As a special Free Bonus when you order the Streakers plate we are including as a gift from us to you, "The Streakers" record. This popular country-western song by Ray Stevens is now No. 1 on the charts and was pressed exclusively for Joy's – a perfect gift for your favorite youngster or a fun conversation piece for you. MONROE LOOK-ALIKE
Is she Marilyn's daughter?

Janet Raymond believes she is the daughter of the late actress Marilyn Monroe. Janet, 21, is an orphan. She was born in a Los Angeles hospital during the same period that Marilyn was an appendectomy patient there. According to sources, Miss Monroe's appendix was not removed. Peter Lawford, a very close friend of Marilyn's, has met Janet and is amazed at her strong resemblance to the star. Ironically, Janet even won a Marilyn Monroe look-alike contest a few years ago. She was also interviewed on an ABC-TV special, "Marilyn Remembered." For Janet, however, the resemblance is not much help. There isn't any way she can prove she is Marilyn's daughter. Janet, who worked as a secretary in Santa Monica Hospital, is a member of the Screen Actor's Guild and is determined to follow Marilyn's path to stardom.

Roger Williams

Roger Williams has sold well over 15 million albums since his first hit, "Autumn Leaves," in 1955. Despite his vast success he still practices 10 to 12 hours a day when he is at his home in Encino, Calif., and two to three hours a day when he is on the road. "If you want success and all that goes with it, you must be prepared to pay a high personal price. For me, the price is discipline. I apply this same discipline to other factors of my life," says the 49-year-old Williams. "I still weigh the same as I did in high school. Discipline has me jogging two miles every day when I am home, and one hour in my hotel room, in one place, when I am on the road. This requires strong personal discipline. But it is the only way I know of attaining success. Practice and being in good physical condition." Williams, who has performed all over the world, has missed only one performance—when he was snowbound at an airport.

HANK AARON
His legs were rubbery

QUOTE: When Hank Aaron hit home run number 715, breaking Babe Ruth's record, "he remembered only his relief that it was over with, and the vague happiness that a weight 'like a stove' had been lifted from his back, and that his legs seemed rubbery as he took the tour of the bases, the Dodger second baseman and shortstop sticking out their hands to congratulate him. 'I don't remember the noise,' he said, 'or the two kids that ran on the field. My teammates at home plate, I remember seeing them. I remember my mother out there and she hugging me. That's what I'll remember more than anything about that home run when I think back on it. I don't know where she came from, but she was there. . . .'" From "Hank Aaron: One for the Record," by George Plimpton (Bantam Books, $1.50). UNQUOTE.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

HOME REMEDY

Dogs have been prescribed as "home psychiatrists" for depressed people.
—News item

You need not lie upon a couch
For this psychiatrist
And answer questions human sorts
Would probingly insist.

This "home psychiatrist" of course
Might lie down by your side
And asking not a thing of you
There calmingly abide.

Or else he might look up, warm eyed,
And seem to understand,
And maybe paw your sleeve a bit
Or even lick your hand.

He might relax, relaxing you,
And go to sleep, lie still.
Of this, however, be quite sure:
He wouldn't send a bill.

You have to be careful of little old ladies. One time I finished a rather long talk and this sweet little thing came up to me, put a gloved hand into mine and said, "Mr. Orben, has anyone ever told you you're a fascinating speaker?" I said, "No. No one ever has." She said, "Then whatever gave you the idea?"

On a recent trip to see my son and daughter-in-law, I slept with one of my grandchildren, Tony, age five. He said, "Isn't this a nice soft bed, Grandma?" I said, "Yes, it is." He then replied, "That's because it's been jumped on a lot." —Mrs. Helen Voltaggio
